BLOODY TARAWA! WHERE MEN DID THE IMPOSSIBLE

Camera Man Tells Saga of Marines' Toughest Fight.

The Tribune today presents the first of six graphic stories on the United States marines' capture of Tarawa atoll in the Gilbert Islands of the Pacific. Warrant Officer John F. Leopold, a marine combat photographer, tells of the troops' heroism from their preliminary training for the assault until they had secured their hold on the isle after the fiercest struggle in the marines' history.

Coming back and looking at it now, I don't see how we ever took Tarawa. It was impossible. The island was impregnable, but the marines took it.

It is strange how you lose all track of days and time. I was there four days, maybe five. I don't know. It seemed a month. I only know I left the island on the first plane out, a seaplane.

The only day I remember in detail is my birthday. It was Nov. 21, the day after D day. We had planned a big party. I was 41 years old, and I didn't think I'd ever make that birthday. I spent the day before in a Higgins boat dodging shells. I said to myself, "Red, you'll never make this one."

Combat Pictures His Job.

I was supposed to hit the pier at H hour plus 10 minutes. My job was to take combat pictures in color.

["D day" is service code for the day of attack, while "H hour" is the specific time the assault is to take place.]

I wasn't to go in until the first smoke had cleared away. I hit the pier at 10 o'clock the next morning. The island was blazing from end to end and all we held was a small beachhead at the pier. I thought we had more. I met two men as I was working in along the pier thru that rain of fire.

"Where's our front line?" I asked.

Men Ragged, Dirty, Bearded.

If those men had been my brothers, I wouldn't have recognized them. They were dirty, ragged, and bearded. Their eyes were bloodshot and half closed. A thin line of blood trickled down the cheek of one.

He grunted: "There!" pointing to the edge of the ocean.

"Hell!" I said. "How far does she go?"

"Just what you see," he said. "About 20 yards one side of the pier, 150 yards the other side, 10 yards back."

That was it.

The first person I recognized as I crawled from the water was one of our combat photographers, Staff Sgt. Roy Olund of Rio Linda, Cal. He was crouching there while another, Pvt. Raymond Matjasic of Cleveland, took his picture.

Finds Best Friend—Dead.

I was so mad I yelled at him: "Say, didn't I tell you not to take any posed pictures?"

He pointed to a marine lying on the pier and asked, "Know who that is?"

I said I didn't. I couldn't see.

"It's the lieutenant," he said. "He's dead."

The lieutenant was my best friend.

That's the way it was. Every one's best friend was lying there, dead. Sprawled on the beach. Stiffened in the water, rocking with the tide as in a cradle. As far as you could see men floated in the terrible stiffness of death. One marine was caught in barbed wire the Japs had strung 600 yards out into the water. He swayed back and forth slowly.

Bodies Float 10 Miles Into Sea.

When the tide went out, the other bodies went out with it, but he stayed right there. When the first plane landed four days later, the pilot said he saw dead men floating 6 or 10 miles out at sea. He thought they were Japs. They weren't. They were marines.

That's the way it was at Tarawa. That's the story. Those were our

BATTLE STORY'S AUTHOR A TOUGH PACIFIC VETERAN

John F. Leopold.

A big, tough, red-headed and blue-eyed marine—that is Warrant Officer John F. Leopold, whose eyewitness story of the American capture of Tarawa atoll starts in today's TRIBUNE. When the 41 year old combat photographer told his story, his lips still were sore and blistered from the reflection of the sun on the water and beaches at Tarawa.

Leopold bears the title which the marine corps now gives to gunners, of which he is one of the corps' oldest. However, in the Gilbert Islands battle his role was that of assistant photographic officer of the marine combat camera crew. His chief was Capt. Louis Hayward, former movie actor.

Flies Home with Pictures.

During the fight at Tarawa, Leopold and his crew took movies in color, and black and white, and 900 still pictures. As soon as the islands had been secured, he was ordered to fly home with the pictures. He left the islands so quickly that his extra clothes and equipment still are somewhere in the Pacific with the 2d marine division. Like all combat photographers, he had landed on Tarawa armed only with a pistol and a knife, with which the cameramen are trained to fight.

Leopold joined the marines in 1923, when he was 20 years old. Previously he had driven auto race cars. He was in the Yangtze and North China campaigns in 1926-'27 and 1930-'32, and later spent four years in the marine reserve. For three years before Pearl Harbor he taught photography at the National Art school in Washington, D. C., but reënlisted in the marines as a private on Dec. 8, 1941. He was with the 2d marine division at Guadalcanal and spent 53 days there, most of them in a foxhole.

Parents Refuse Call, in Error.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Leopold, live in Wooster, O. He telephoned them collect from Chicago when he was en route to Washington, D. C., with his combat films. They would not accept the call when the operator said it was from their son.

"We have only one son," they said, "and he's in the South Pacific."

Gunman Demands Hidden Money; Gets 50 Cents

Miss Clara Kocol, 1819 Iowa street, a war worker, told police yesterday that a masked gunman forced her into a hallway at 859 North Damen avenue, demanding the money she had "hidden in the lining of her coat" and forcing her to remove the garment. Finding nothing, she said he told her "You are the wrong woman," but took 50 cents, all she had in her purse.

Army's Scrap Tools Bought by Ex-Convict

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 11 [Special].—New details of the sale by the army air force of $1,750,000 worth of cutting tools as scrap last August were made public today thru the disclosure that the biggest buyer was an ex-convict who entered the United States illegally in 1938 and at the time of the scrap deal was at liberty on $500 bond awaiting deportation to Russia.

He is Abraham Steinberg, 46 years old, owner of the Gratiot Tool and Supply company of Detroit, whose criminal record was climaxed in the last six years by a spectacular "rags to riches" climb. Steinberg, whose aliases are said to include Abraham Allen, Allen Steinberg, Harry Smith, and Harry Katz, is reported to have paid the government $30,000 for tools that cost more than $1,000,000.

High Quality Product.

The tools sold were of high quality steel and amounted to 110 tons, ranging in weight from 100 to the pound to 40 pounds each. They were ordered for the Studebaker plants at Fort Wayne and South Bend, but were found unfit for the specific purposes intended because of a change in design prior to delivery. Army sources have admitted that $23,000 worth was sold at cost prices and the rest sold to scrap dealers for an aggregate of $43,000.

Investigation of the deal by the senate's Truman committee brought from the army a statement defending the sale, but subsequently an order was issued "freezing" the tools in the hands of the purchasers and later partial repossession was made.

Steinberg Heavy Buyer.

Steinberg's connection with the affair was first detected early in November when Detroit newspapers learned that army trucks were being loaded with tools in the rear of the Gratiot Tool and Supply company shop. Disclosure that $30,000 of the $43,000 received by the government for the "scrap" came from Steinberg was regarded as indicating he obtained more than two-thirds of the supply.

Steinberg's record was exposed by a study of Toronto and Montreal police records and official immigration department documents relating to deportation proceedings. Steinberg was born in Russia in 1898, it was learned, and came to Canada with his parents the following year. His criminal record began in Montreal in 1918 and included a two year penitentiary term for housebreaking.

After his prison term he moved to Toronto where he was convicted in 1932 of attempted fraud. Records show he was remanded for a sentence in this case but do not show its disposition. He applied for admission to the United States in 1937, but was refused a visa because of his criminal record. During deportation proceedings, he later admitted he had previously entered the United States illegally several times and at one time had operated a nut and bolt sales business in Detroit.

Canada Doesn't Want Him.

The illegal entry that brought about his deportation order was made about May 1, 1938, according to immigration records. He was apprehended by immigration officials a short time later and his deportation to Canada was ordered. Canada refused to take him back, however, so he was ordered deported to Russia. Because travel routes to Russia were cut off by the war, the execution of the order was postponed and he was allowed his liberty on bond.

Detroit acquaintances said Steinberg was married Nov. 24, 1940, to Muriel Kahn, 27 years old, sister of David Kahn, manager of the Gratiot Tool and Supply company, and that the marriage was performed by a prominent rabbi. Steinberg bought a $10,000 home Jan. 30, 1941, and last year paid off a land contract on a $10,000 business property.

PORK RATION POINT VALUES TO BE CUT BY OPA TOMORROW

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—Another general reduction in the ration values of all pork items on the consumer point value table except variety meats and canned meats was announced tonight by Price Administrator Chester Bowles. It becomes effective at 12.01 a. m. Monday.

All pork steaks, roasts, smoked ham, bacon, and ready-to-eat meat are reduced by one point a pound. Fresh hams—hams which are neither frozen, cured or smoked—are cut by two points per pound.

Fresh, smoked, and cooked sausages containing no other meat except pork are down one point. Dry and semi-dry sausages, such as hard salami, pepperoni, and mortadella, are down one point regardless of beef ingredients.

The reductions, OPA said, are "a temporary emergency measure taken in the face of reports that meat packing facilities are taxed to capacity in handling large hog runs now coming to market."

Stoll Kidnaper Is Guilty, Jury Urges Death!

BY CARL WIEGMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 11.—Thomas H. Robinson, who kidnaped Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll of Louisville for $50,000 ransom in 1934, was found guilty on federal kidnaping charges here tonight by a jury of 11 men and 1 woman which recommended that the court impose the death penalty.

The recommendation of death is not binding upon the judge, who is free under federal law to disregard it and sentence Robinson instead to a prison term.

Deliberate 2½ Hours.

The jurors deliberated two and one half hours to reach the verdict. Under the charge given them by Federal Judge Shackelford Miller they might have found Robinson guilty without making any recommendation as to the penalty or they might have found him not guilty.

No date was fixed by Judge Miller for the imposition of sentence. The 36 year old defendant, who was once sentenced to life imprisonment in Alcatraz prison for the same offense and won his right to the present trial by contending he was improperly represented in 1936 when he pleaded guilty, received the verdict impassively.

Robinson's counsel did not comment immediately on whether he will appeal.

Prosecutor Quotes Bible.

In recommending the death penalty, the jury followed the demand of United States Atty. Eli H. Brown who ended his closing argument with the biblical quotation, "He that stealeth a man and selleth him, or if a man be found in his hand, shall surely suffer death." The quotation is from Exodus 21:16.

Brown denounced Robinson to the jury not only for the kidnaping but for his story told on the witness stand last Monday that he had had intimate relations with Mrs. Stoll in 1931, prior to the kidnaping. The government offered evidence that tourist cabins where Robinson said he went with Mrs. Stoll had not been built at the time given by him for the alleged trysts.

Robinson's attorney in his summation asked the jury to free Robinson the theory that he was insane at the time of the kidnaping but has since recovered his sanity.

BRITISH WOOING G. O. P.; EXPECT NEW DEAL FLOP

Republicans Dined in London.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ralph O. Brewster.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—In anticipation of a Democratic defeat in the 1944 Presidential election, leaders of the British government are making friendly overtures to Republicans.

This was disclosed last night by Sen. Ralph O. Brewster [R., Me.] at a dinner given by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox to the senators who recently made an around the world tour of the war fronts on which Americans are fighting.

The dinner was attended by a score of admirals and other high ranking officers and officials of the navy department.

[Stories of other political developments will be found on pages 3 and 4.]

U. S. Interests Neglected.

Reports of the senators at secret sessions of the senate that the American government is neglecting this country's interests in the war had tremendous repercussions thruout the country.

The senators supported their charge and maintained it under a heavy administration attack with a long list of specific lapses on the part of the New Deal, including failure to press Russia for bases of operations against Japan, neglect of the war in the Pacific, allowing Britain to control world news, waste of American natural resources while Britain hoards hers, and allowing the British to pass off as British gifts American lend-lease materials.

At the dinner Brewster, one of the five touring senators, disclosed a new chapter of the globe tour which had not hitherto been made public.

Republicans Singled Out.

While the five senators were in London, Brewster revealed, the two Republicans in the group—himself and Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. [R., Mass.] were invited to dinner by Brenden Bracken, British minister of information.

At the dinner Bracken emphasized, according to Brewster, that the British government was not irrevocably committed to the New Deal or to the Democratic party. Bracken stressed the winning of the war as the principle concern of the British government.

Bracken was reported as saying that British leaders are nonpartisan as far as American politics go and were working with the Democrats because that party is in power.

Willing to Work with G. O. P.

Bracken told the two senators, according to Brewster, that if the Republicans win in 1944, the British will be happy to work with them toward successful prosecution of the war. Bracken suggested this message be carried to Republican leaders in the United States.

At the Knox dinner, in addition to Brewster and Lodge, were Senators Albert B. Chandler [D., Ky.] and James M. Mead [D., N. Y.]. The fifth senator who made the trip, Richard B. Russell [D., Ga.], was not present.

Senators who made the trip said they had heard of the wooing of the Republicans by British Minister Bracken before. Both Brewster and Lodge had reported the incident to their colleagues, but the London dinner was not reported at secret sessions of the senate.

Foreseen by British.

After the congressional election of 1942, in which the New Deal suffered heavy reverses in the senate and house and lost a number of governors, the British foresaw the shift in public feeling which has now developed into a Republican ground swell.

"Neither the administration nor the American people may be seriously disturbed by the election returns," an attache of the British embassy said privately at the time, "but we consider the returns to be highly significant and have charted our course accordingly."

LONDON, Dec. 11 (AP).—American Flying Fortresses, Liberators, and escorting Lightning and Thunderbolt fighters attacked the German North sea port of Emden today and shot down 138 German planes in one of the most intense aerial battles of the war.

Seventeen bombers and three fighters were lost in the attack, which left Emden aflame over a half mile square area. Towering columns of smoke dwarfed a feeble ground screen miles below with which the Germans tried to obscure the naval base and shipping center.

A total of 117 of the German planes fell to the American heavy bombers while the other 21 were bagged by the fighters that went the whole 375 miles to the target and back in combat that saw German fighters machine gun boys who parachuted out of crippled bombers.

Sees Attack on 'Chutist.

Sgt. Roy Blansit of Hamilton, Tex., a Fortress gunner, said: "I saw a parachute come out of one Fort, and a Focke-Wulf made a pass at him. He was shooting right while the parachute was opening."

Blansit's co-pilot confirmed the attack. The Fort gunners tried in vain to shoot down the Focke-Wulf. They did not see whether the parachutist was hit.

Among midwesterners on the Emden raid was Lt. Donovan F. Smith of Niles, Mich., who shot down two German planes, and Sgt. Sherman L. Edwards of Lanark, Ill. a gunner.

The bag of 138 German fighters was the greatest since the Oct. 14 raid on the Schweinfurt ball bearing factory when 186 Nazi planes were downed and 60 Fortresses were lost.

The Bremen radio and one in the Netherlands went off the air tonight, possibly indicating more R. A. F. night raids.

Emden a Vital Port.

Emden, which is one of the Nazis' most important ports since the destruction of Hamburg—a point of entry for vital Scandinavian iron ore and timber and the site of important U-boat yards—was thoroly plastered with high explosives and incendiaries.

The German fighters tried a new tactic in swarming in four and five abreast, returning flyers said, but they gave indications of inexperience and a lack of eagerness. Between their own lethal bursts the American gunners watched German planes explode and crash at the rate of seven for every American ship downed.

Taking off from English bases in wintry weather, the flyers battled a 75 m.p.h. headwind that made the trip over the North sea almost twice as long as the return journey.

Fifth U. S. Raid on Emden.

Altho there were clouds along the way, the American weather men had called the turn and the skies turned clear over the target for good bomb runs.

It was the Americans' fifth blow at Emden, which has been bombed 84 times. It last was hit Oct. 2 by Fortresses in the city's third raid in a week. Five days before that it was hit by both the United States 8th air force and the R. A. F. on the same day.

The Fortresses' plunge into northwestern Germany was the first United States heavy bomber attack on the reich since Dec. 1, and their first operation since Dec. 5, when they hit undisclosed objectives in France.

The Germans, meanwhile, made a light foray into England Friday night that cost them five of twenty bombers. At the same time British Mosquito bombers struck northwest Germany.

AXIS PARTNERS TO SHARE FATE OF HITLER: HULL

Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary Named.

'Break with Nazis!'

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Moscow radio warned Finland, Rumania, and Hungary tonight to break with Germany lest the allies give them the same treatment in store for Germany. Russia is not at war with Bulgaria. The broadcast quoted an article in the soviet publication, War and the Working Class. Altho "Hitler's vassal countries try to divorce themselves from collaboration with Germany" by words, the time has come for them to realize that "a verbal divorce from Hitlerite Germany is not worth a cent," the article said.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—The United States, in a move to split Adolf Hitler's Balkan satellites away from the axis, tonight solemnly warned the governments of Bulgaria, Hungary, and Rumania that they must share the consequences of the terrible defeat that united nations' arms are so surely bringing to Nazi Germany."

Secretary Hull.

The somber warning came from Secretary of State Cordell Hull on the second anniversary of a declaration of war against the United States by the three governments. It implied an appeal to the peoples of the three nations to overthrow the "puppets of Hitler" and take their governments into their own hands.

"Recklessly Continued War."

Following is the text of the secretary of state's announcement:

"It is just two years since the governments of Bulgaria, Hungary, and Rumania, heaving already become servile puppets of Hitler, obedient to the orders of their master, declared war gainst the United States.

"To what degree they have been counting on our magnanimity to spare their peoples the consequences of this rash step foredoomed to disaster we do not know.

"The fact is that whatever may be the sentiments of their peoples, the governments in power in these three countries have recklessly continued their participation in the war against us, strengthening with men and material resources the Nazi war machine.

"They must by this time realize that they will have to share the responsibility for the consequences of the terrible defeat that united nations' arms are so surely bringing to Nazi Germany."

Comes After Raid on Sofia.

The strong statement was issued just one day after waves of allied bombers struck a heavy air blow at Sofia, capital of Bulgaria.

[A London dispatch quoted a Turkish radio report that a Bulgarian cabinet crisis in Sofia had resulted in the resignation of Foreign Minister Georgi Shishmanov.]

Earlier in the night, Chairman Tom Connally [D., Tex.] of the senate foreign relations committee indirectly warned the three countries to cut loose from Germany or go "down with the sinking German ship."

"Committed Tragic Blunder.

His statement observed that these nations "now undoubtedly realize the tragic blunder they have committed in aligning themselves against the most powerful collation of free nations the world has ever seen. . . ."

"This collation of free peoples is determined to crush the German enemies of humanity with 'relentless and increasing' attacks, as the Teheran declaration put it.

"Naturally, a similar fate is awaiting those countries which are aligned with the German. The tide or our victories is rising in every theater of war. Will the Hungarian, Rumanian, and Bulgarian satellites of Hitler choose to go down with the sinking German ship?

"I wonder. . . ."

CLARK DEFENDS 100% TAX PLAN; RIPS INTO FOES

Mass Meeting Today to Hear Assessor.

John S. Clark, Cook county assessor, yesterday defended his determination to base the 1943 tax assessment on a 100 per cent valuation and asserted that its value "is being deliberately misrepresented by individuals and groups which never have spoken for the small home owners." Today Clark will be one of the principal speakers when the plan is discussed at a meeting in the city council chambers.

The meeting, sponsored by the Cook County Civic council, of which Frank J. Bilek is president, will start at 2 p. m. Handbills advertising it as a property owners mass meeting ask, "Will taxes go sky high if assessments are increased from 37 to 100 per cent?"

Clark said yesterday that in his 17 years in the city council and nine years as assessor such organizations as the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Illinois Taxpayers association, which are opposing his plan, never had spoken in behalf of the small home owners.

Motives Clouded, He Charges.

"Obviously, there must be some reason why they now propose to appear in the light of champions of the small taxpayer, but to date they have not made their motives clear," Clark said. "On the contrary, they have sought to becloud the issue, and they have done this in part by maintaining silence as to the many true facts in the situation.

"They have not told the small taxpayers, for instance, that the railroad interests, which contribute $10,500,000 annually to the Cook county revenues, complained to me that if the so-called equalization factor no longer is applied they would have to pay $6,000,000 additional taxes in Illinois in the 1943 tax year."

Clark charged that the 37 per cent equalization factor—the assessment figure he is changing—originally was suggested by railroad interests.

Points to 5 Year Figures.

"Critics of progressive procedure have not told taxpayers one of the most illuminating of all facts; namely, that over the five year period from 1938 to 1942, inclusive, the railroad interests were relieved in the amount of $5,830,242 and the utilities to the extent of $2,990,855, in actual tax monies, thru the use of varying so-called equalization factors by the state tax commission," Clark said. "This was true in Chicago alone and does not include additional advantages enjoyed by these interests in connection with properties outside the city and in Cook county."

The assessor asserted that this advantage is enjoyed by the railroads and the utilities because the state tax commission consistently uses a lower equalization factor than that used by the Cook county assessor.

Such a tax advantage for the railroads and utilities, Clark charged, amounts to a subsidy to them which other taxpayers cannot continue to pay.

"The use of fractional factors in assessment is a malpractice which must die, and I confidently predict that an aroused public will demand the elimination of this discrimination," Clark said.

'No Subsidies for Group.'

"As a matter of fact, the revenue department knows that if fractional assessments were discontinued there would be and could be no discrimination, no subsidies for any group at the expense of all the others, no gifts for one and no gouge for others."

The assertion by some critics that 100 per cent assessment would result in an abuse of bonding powers by various Cook county municipalities was termed "utterly baseless" by Clark, who said that no bond issue can be floated except thru a public referendum or by express permission of the legislature. He recalled that the latest effort to pass a bond issue in the county—the proposal to vote bonds for improvements at the Oak Forest infirmary with the federal government supplying $2,200,000 of the $4,000,000 total expenditure—was defeated.

Finds Bonds Are Opposed.

"The people are not in the mood for floating bond issues and if there are any public officials who are not aware of this they'll soon find out if they attempt to put a bond issue proposition on the ballot," he added.

Clark said the "howl which has gone up against our determination to take the hocus pocus out of assessments" reminds him of the cry of protest which he said "the special interests" raised in 1936 when he discontinued the assessment of household furniture "to the relief of the 600,000 small home owners."

"None of the chaos which they predicted at that time ever eventuated as a result of that move, which was dictated by a common sense attitude toward the facts," he said. "On the contrary, and in line with my own office's predictions, the collection of personal property taxes has since been brought to an all-time high for the county."

Clark said that he was merely following the law in instituting the full fair cash value assessment and asserted that most of the progressive cities of the nation now are assessing on this basis.

Widely divergent equalization factors are used in downstate Illinois counties, Clark said, with some using a 20 per cent factor.

"Five of these formerly valued on a 100 per cent basis and many apparently are now coming back to it, following our lead," he said. "My sole concern is the service of the principle of equal taxation. Under our new procedure every taxpayer will be able to see at a glance the valuation the assessor places upon his property."

NAMED FOR NYAM.

The sweet potato was named "yam" by the Negroes, who coming to America in the early days, named the tuber after the "nyam" or true yam they had eaten in Africa.

VOICES OF 4,000 SING CAROLS IN W-G-N PROGRAM

4,500 Hear Chorus at Medinah Temple.

A chorus of voices of 4,000 strong flooded Medinah temple with Christmas carols last night. The chorus was a part of a yuletide production of THE TRIBUNE's Citizens of Tomorrow youth program, which was recorded and will be broadcast over W-G-N at 1:30 p. m. Sunday, Dec. 19. The show was a post-broadcast feature of W-G-N's Chicago Theater of the Air.

Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, presented special guests of the post-broadcast show, including James B. McCahey, president of the board of education; Dr. Helen Howe, director of music for the Chicago public schools; Philip L. McNamee and George F. Cassell, assistant superintendents of schools, and Joseph W. Cremin and F. P. Siebel Sr., members of the school board.

Represent 37 Groups.

The vocalists represented 37 Chicago high school choral groups. Speakers were McCahey and Maxwell, with Diana Cladis of Bowen High school, Seymour Weiner of Crane, and Toni Wilson of Sullivan serving as cheer leaders.

Pvt. Edward Green, marine hero who was wounded at Guadalcanal, described his experiences to the audience of nearly 4,500, most of whom were high school students.

Sigmund Romberg's "The Student Prince" was the offering of the Theater of the Air, with Marion Claire portraying the role of Kathie, the daughter of the innkeeper and the sweetheart of Heidelberg university.

Sings Leading Male Role.

John Brooks McCormack sang the leading male role as Prince Karl Frantz, who sacrifices his love for the sake of his duty to his subjects. Bruce Foote sang the supporting role of Dr. Engel.

The corresponding dramatic roles were played by Laurette Fillbrandt, Olan Soule and John Barclay, with a supporting cast including Butler Manvil, Eloise Kummer, Bob Jellison and Norman Gottschalk. John Holbrook was the narrator and Marvin Mueller the announcer.

Henry Weber conducted the W-G-N symphony orchestra, and Robert Trendler the ensemble.

REDS' CRUELTY TO POLES CITED BY VICE PREMIER

Both the German government and its people were responsible for atrocities against the Poles, while the hardships imposed on Polish captives in Russia were solely the fault of the Russian administration, Jan Kwapinski, vice premier of the Polish government in London, said here yesterday.

Kwapinski himself spent 22 months in Russian prison camps before he was released in August, 1941, to take his post with the government in exile. He came to this country last November as head of the Polish delegation to the united nations relief and rehabilitation conference at Atlantic City, N. J.

As minister of commerce, shipping, and industry, he is concerned with all the post-war problems of rehabilitating and reconstructing Poland. His visit to Chicago is to rally groups of Polish descent to aid in this work.

Compares Treatment.

"The comparison of the treatment given the Polish people by the Germans and the Russians," Kwapinski said, "was this: The German government and its people were bad. The German government was guilty of the most atrocious and barbaric crimes, and the German people individually were guilty of the same brutal conduct.

"The tragedy of the Polish people in Russia was great. But here, it was the government itself that caused these hardships. The Russian people actually were sympathetic and benevolent toward their captured neighbors."

Hundreds of thousands of Poles were deported from farms and villages in eastern Poland to remote parts of Russia and Siberia where the climate was severe and they were left under "most difficult conditions," Kwapinski said.

Reports Heavy Losses.

"In addition," he said, "the Poles were forced into compulsory labor, and our losses were great. The Russians did the same kind of work, but they were used to the climate and did not find it a hardship."

Kwapinski was mayor of Lodz, the second largest city in Poland, when the Germans invaded that nation. He waited until the German armies were a few miles away, then started for the Rumanian border. At Zamosc, he was wounded by a German bomb and was carried from one city to another as he continued his flight eastward. On Sept. 17, 1939, the Russian armies began their march into Poland and he was taken prisoner not far from the Rumanian border.

He was confined in Poland for six months, during which time he underwent an ineffective operation for his bomb injury. Then he and thousands of other Polish prisoners were loaded into freight cars and sent to Siberia.

Torpedoed Twice on Trip.

Kwapinski remained there until Russia was attacked by Germany and an agreement was made between Poland and Russia permitting the release of some political prisoners. The Polish government in England asked for him and in April, 1942, Kwapinski left Murmansk for London. His ship was torpedoed. An accompanying vessel rescued him and other survivors, but also was torpedoed and sunk. He again was rescued and reached London on May 21, 1942, to take up his cabinet post.

Poles who remain in Russia still are undergoing hardships, Kwapinski said. Diplomatic relations between Russia have been broken since last April.

"News is scarce now from our peoples in Russia," he said. "In the few letters that do get thru, the Poles ask us to get them out of Russia."

YOUTHS SIGN FOR COAL DRAFT.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Fifty thousand youths who will be 18 years old in the first quarter of 1944 registered today for national work. They were the first batch of "mine ballot boys," for altho they have an option for fighting services, they will come under the ballot scheme and be directed to the coal mines if rejected.

FIREMEN IN ICE FIGHT TWO 3-11 FIRES IN DAY

Firemen were kept busy fighting two 3-11 alarm fires early yesterday, the coldest day of the season thus far. The temperature sank to 19 degrees, and formed ice that coated the firemen's helmets and clothing.

The first fire attacked the plant of the John F. Kaenel Cooperage company, 453 North Green street, and spread to the Acme Corrugated Box company next door. Total damage was estimated at $25,000. Firemen Theodore Jochum and Patrick Milott, members of Insurance Patrol 1, suffered face burns.

The second fire attacked the second and third floors of the six story warehouse of Gamble Skogma, Inc., an automobile supply concern, at 1550 Indiana avenue. Firemen ended the fire in 55 minutes. Damage was estimated at $3,000.

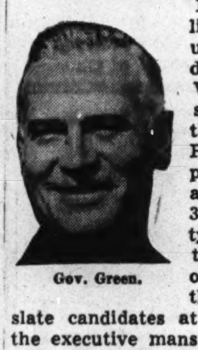
COMPLETE UNITY HAILED IN RANKS OF ILLINOIS G.O.P.

Call Willkie Nomination the Only Threat.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]



Gov. Green.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 11.—A picture of a completely harmonious Illinois Republican party, whose unity could be disrupted only if Wendell Willkie should become the nominee for President, was presented today after more than 30 G. O. P. county chairmen from the southern part of the state met the organization slate candidates at a luncheon in the executive mansion.

The gathering was the third of a series. Last Tuesday chairmen from Chicago and northern Illinois dined with the candidates. Yesterday those from the central tier of counties were guests at the governor's mansion. Only a few of the 102 counties were unrepresented and the absentee chairmen all sent regrets because of illness.

Green Heads Ticket.

The official ticket is headed by Gov. Green for reëlection and Richard J. Lyons of Libertyville for United States senator. Others on it are Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett, State Auditor Arthur C. Lueder, and State Sen. Arnold P. Benson, who is seeking election as secretary of state. Lt. Gov. Hugh W. Cross was the only slate candidate absent. He was out of the state.

At the end of the meeting it was announced the primary campaigning would start in southern Illinois on Jan. 17 and that the state central committee would meet at the mansion on Dec. 21 to help plan for this. Gov. Green said he did not know when the ticket would be completed with choices for state treasurer, congressman at large, and clerk of the Illinois Supreme court. He indicated the treasury post would go to a candidate from the southern part of the state.

Gov. Green, Lyons, and Barrett asserted they were enthusiastic about the reception the state Republican program got from the chairmen. The governor said the county party heads, "who serve their own people directly," were entitled to be told the plan for a brisk campaign and that they were in full agreement on that program.

More Hard Work.

Little of the detail of the discussions was made public. It was reported that inventory was taken of Republican gains in Illinois since 1940 and that an intensification of the trend would be sought thru hard work.

Whether the Willkie angle was under discussion at the luncheon was not disclosed. But the county chairmen, outside the conference, were not reticent. Of a dozen asked at random not one was for another ride with Willkie and several were outspoken against him.

"Our county has 4,200 Republican voters," said John S. Stoddard of Wabash county. "With Willkie we'd lose a thousand. We don't want him again."

C. J. Metzger of Fayette county said sentiment there leaned to anybody other than Willkie, with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as a preference. Ralph Harris of Williamson and Roy Boner of Franklin county said their people were definitely anti-Willkie and that his candidacy would be a detriment.

TWENTY ROUTED BY SMOKE.

Twenty occupants of the 16 apartment building at 4522 North Long avenue were forced to the street yesterday by smoke from a rubbish fire in the basement which caused damage estimated at $200.

Volunteers

MADELEINE CARROLL.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—Screen Actress Madeleine Carroll has volunteered for overseas duty with the American Red Cross and soon will start a basic Red Cross training course here. She will specialize in hospital recreation work which she intends to carry on in convalescent wards abroad. The blonde film star, wife of Marine Stirling Hayden, has taken part in many benefits and radio programs for men in the armed services and the merchant seamen.

WAR BOND RALLY TODAY TO HELP BUY A CRUISER

To help sell 40 million dollars' worth of war bonds to pay for a cruiser, an "all-nations" program of folk songs and dances from 30 countries will be presented at 2 p. m. today in Medinah temple, 14 East Ohio street.

Lt. Comdr. Eddie Peabody, director of music at Great Lakes; Chief Specialist John Carter, formerly of the Metropolitan opera; Elissa Landi, motion picture star appearing at the Selwyn theater, and Dean Murphy, loop floor show mimic, will be among the entertainers. Gov. Green, Mayor Kelly, and Rear Adm. H. G. Taylor, commandant of the navy civil engineering corps in this area, will speak.

Admission will be by purchase of a bond. Frank E. Pofanti, program chairman, said yesterday that $35,259,000 worth of bonds for the cruiser have been sold.

Plans for the fourth war loan drive, to be started Jan. 18, were outlined by treasury department representatives yesterday in the Palmer House at a regional conference of 150 war bond committee officers from 10 states. The treasury loan must raise 14½ billion dollars, R. W. Coyne, of Washington, D. C., field director for war finances, said.

12 PUPILS GIVEN $25 BONDS FOR MARINE ESSAYS

Twelve grammar and high school students were awarded $25 war bonds yesterday for writing the best essays submitted in a contest sponsored by the Junior Association of Commerce and the treasury department in observance of the marine corps' 168th anniversary.

High schol winners were Ray Grish, Jones Commercial; Dana Olsen, South Shore; William Joseph Ruberry, St. Ignatius; Ruth Kessel, Farragut; James Ramsy, Tuley; Rose Anne Swain, Sacred Heart; Ernest Feiler, Hyde Park; Rose Gutowska, St. Michael. Elementary school winners were Marshall Wernick, Chalmers; Dolly Krasso, Nettelhorst; Allen Goldstein, Lowell, and Dorothy Newman, Brainard.

MINORITY RULE BY BUROCRATIC CLIQUE FLAYED

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Sen. W. Lee O'Daniel [D., Tex.] asserted today that the American people have lost control of their government to a "small minority group of professional politicians who will gladly wear either the Democratic label or the Republican label" and that the only way to regain control is to abolish reëlections."

Sen. W. L. O'Daniel.

"This control," he said in an address at a forum in the National Republican club, "has been lost largely because the rank and file of honest Democrats and Republicans have stuck to their respective parties, while a gang of political racketeers have taken over control of the political machinery of both parties."

The time has come, he said, for a thoro housecleaning in Washington, including a change in the Presidency.

Urges Six Year Limit.

The senator asserted his proposal to limit members of congress, the President, and Vice President to six years in office provides a definite cure for the basic cause—"The undying love in the hearts of politicians for reëlection."

"I believe adoption of such an amendment to the Constitution is the only method whereby we will ever eliminate the Washington burocrats," he said. "I believe it is the only method whereby we will ever return the control of the government to the people.

"I think one of the most wholesome things that could happen in the United States would be for every senator and every congressman, after serving six years, to go back home and go to work and try to make a living under the laws which they have passed. With that known fact staring them in the face, they would be a little more careful about the laws they passed.

Constantly Hedging.

"Washington is absolutely honeycombed with professional politicians who have lived so long in Washington and feasted at the public feed trough that they think they would starve to death if you were to move them out. The result is that they are constantly hedging and dodging.

"They are constantly begging for patronage; they are constantly accepting orders from burocratic bosses because these bosses hold the jobs and the jobs mean votes and the votes mean they will have a chance to come back and still live off the public pay roll."

O'Daniel told his listeners he was not criticizing the present members of congress or the President, but was "talking about fundamental principals of government."

Woman Cleared by Jury in Double Auto Tragedy

A coroner's jury yesterday held Mrs. Ollie Kreis, 41, of Tinley Park, blameless in the death of two boys, struck by her automobile Thursday when they darted out into the street after getting off a bus in front of St. Christopher school, in Midlothian. The victims were Ronald Steckcom, 6 years old, 15646 La Vergne avenue, who died yesterday, and James Miller, 8, 15640 La Vergne avenue, who died Friday.

DICTATOR SETUP TERMED AIM OF NEW DEAL PLANS

Bricker Charges War Used as Excuse.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio tonight lashed out at New Deal domestic policies in his first major eastern appearance of a campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Bricker placed his candidacy before the powerful Pennsylvania Republican organization at a gathering given additional significance by the presence of such notables as Alf M. Landon, the party's 1936 Presidential nominee; Sen. Robert A. Taft, a 1940 candidate, and Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, former national chairman.

"It is high time," asserted Bricker, "that we awaken to the fact that the war is being used as an excuse to further many dangerous pre-war policies. Unless these policies are reversed by the American people, they will unmistakably lead this nation to national socialism."

Speaker at Penn Session.

The Ohioan was the guest speaker before the 45th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Society of New York, traditional sounding board for Keystone state G. O. P. political aspirants.

Bricker was introduced by Gov. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, who called upon government to "get out of business and stay out."

Martin, who will head Pennsylvania's delegation of 70 to the Presidential nominating convention, is a personal friend of Gov. Bricker. Organization leaders, however, insist that the Pennsylvania field is "wide open" to candidates. Party chieftains are seeking an uninstructed convention delegation.

Cites Burocrat Trend.

Bricker contended that the New Deal, "step by step and with relentless determination," has sought to arrogate unto itself all power.

The number of federal employes in civil positions has increased fivefold since 1933, he said, asserting that, aside from persons in military service, there were 572,000 federal employes in June, 1933, and approximately 3,500,000 now.

"In Ohio alone," he continued, "we have 100,000 federal civilian employes as against 22,000 state employes."

Tiring of New Deal.

Declaring the New Deal has at times "been arrogant and brazen" and often "cunning and subtle," Bricker added:

"All of this has resulted in a loss of confidence by the people in the executive branch of the government which has so long dominated them.

"And now with many in authority talking about rationing far beyond the war, about permanent controls and restrictions, there is a growing loss of confidence in the ability of this leadership to solve the problems of reconstruction and bring about the full return of American liberty."

Concerning foreign policy, Bricker said "an international organization must be founded on continuous close working collaboration," but that neither this nor any nation should be placed "in an international straitjacket."

"We want no super-government—no dictatorial state to which we are subservient. We want no central world authority over us. Nor, do I believe, does any other sovereign nation want a central world authority over it."

WARNS INDIANA: DON'T BE PAWN IN WILLKIE DRIVE

Fort Wayne Mayor Urged to Seek Governorship.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 11.—Mayor Harry W. Baals, three times mayor of Fort Wayne, a Republican stronghold, today said Wendell Willkie must be prevented from using Indiana, his native state, as a springboard in the 1944 Republican national convention.

The mayor recently was asked by the Allen county Republican club here to run for the Republican nomination for governor. Baals is holding his decision in abeyance. Meanwhile the mayor and his friends are urging that open activities should start in Indiana on an anti-Willkie, anti-globaloney basis.

Gates the Leading Candidate.

Ralph H. Gates of Columbia City, Republican state chairman, is regarded as the leading candidate for governor. Tho not an announced candidate, a movement for him seems to have been traveling on its own momentum for months. Chairman Gates says no commitments have been made on any Presidential candidate. "It is not the function of the state committee to pick candidates, but to elect candidates after the party selects them," he said.

In Indianapolis organization leaders declare Willkie is no more a favorite son than a year ago, and seems to be still slipping. More than 75 per cent of the Republican county chairmen are against him, according to estimates.

The News-Sentinel of this city last spring took a poll of precinct committteemen thruout the state. It went strongly against Willkie, who received 10 per cent of the votes. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York got 42 per cent and Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, 39 per cent. The rest of the votes were scattered.

Primaries in May.

The primaries at which national delegates are picked do not come until May. At Indianapolis organization men have pointed out that by then a dozen or more other states will have held their primaries, Presidential candidates will have shown their vote getting abilities, and sentiment in this state will be more definitely pointing to the candidate most favored by the rank and file. As yet nobody is running in Indiana except Willkie. Leaders report that despite his August back porch campaign at Rushville, most counties are about as anti-Willkie as early in the year.

Mayor Baals, known as an aggressive Republican, holds that hand picked slates are dangerous. His friends here declaim against any "pussyfooting" by politicians, and hold that contests for nominations are healthy for a party.

"I believe in putting the cards on the table face up and in calling a spade a spade," said the mayor. He reiterated views he uttered before the Allen county Republican club:

"There should be no rationed politics, but there should be free enterprise in practical political action as well as in industry and commerce. County primaries, party caucuses, state and national conventions most be defended from overlordships. Certainly every Republican in Indiana has the responsibility to do all in his power, to prevent this state from becoming the springboard for any recurrence of the 1940 confusion.

Discredited Philosophies.

"The Republican leadership must not permit any commitment to any of those discredited philosophies which may be described under the general title of Willkieism. Republicans, remembering the blitz of a well organized minority in the 1940 Philadelphia convention, must be determined that there be no new rocket guns in the preliminary steps to the national convention next year."

Actress Ill

LOIS WILSON.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 10 (AP).—Lois Wilson, stage, screen, and radio actress, was admitted to Portland General hospital today suffering from pneumonia. Attendants described her condition as "fair." The actress, who started with such famous screen lovers as John Gilbert and Rudolph Valentino, was stricken at Boise, Idaho, while on a stage tour.

WILLKIE AGREES TO FACE SENATE FOR VOTE QUIZ

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie said tonight he would be delighted to undergo "unlimited cross-examination" by a congressional committee concerning charges that some of his supporters sought to buy votes at the 1940 Republican convention. Members of the committee immediately indicated willingness for him to appear.

Willkie telegraphed chairman Harley M. Kilgore [D., W. Va.] of a senate elections subcommittee offering to appear personally for questioning in connection with a resolution introduced by Sen. William Langer [R., N. D.] asking an investigation of any irregularities at the Philadelphia convention.

Langer's resolution was based on charges made by C. Nelson Sparks, former mayor of Akron, O., and manager of the 1940 campaign of Frank E. Gannett for the Republican nomination, in a book "One Man—Wendell Willkie."

VET SECRETARY POST URGED BY WESTERN G. O. P.

Conference Asks Aid for Returning Soldiers.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 11 (AP).—Republican leaders in 11 western states recommended a secretary of veterans' affairs in the national cabinet and demanded that every veteran "be assured a self-respecting, adequate position in our economic life."

In a declaration of principles adopted at the conclusion of a two day conference, the Republicans urged "speedy elimination" of "the present un-American system of rule by appointed burocracy."

The declaration was confined to problems which the resolutions committee, headed by Clarence Budington Kelland, Arizona national committeeman, felt concerned western states principally.

Urge Ballots for Soldiers.

In other resolutions the conference adopted the following principles:

1. Urged amendment of existing state voting laws, if necessary, to permit service men to cast absentee ballots at the 1944 elections.
2. Advocated care of disabled war veterans and rehabilitation of returning service men.
3. Asserted that "divided authority in the administration of states, counties, and municipalities is neither satisfactory nor successful. Federal encroachment is no longer to be tolerated . . ."
4. Advocated restoration to private ownership "at the earliest possible date" of industries, except public works, owned partly or wholly by the federal government.

Ask Break for Business.

5. Asked that small businesses "be relieved of handicaps."
6. Advocated a post-war agricultural program that would "seek to assure prices in the market place comparable to the prices of other commodities."
7. Favored adoption of collective bargaining between management and labor "guaranteed by a law that does not discriminate . . ."
8. Asked relaxation of "governmental restrictions" to "encourage prospecting and exploring" for metals and oil.

WILLKIE SURVEYING OUTLOOK FOR THIRD PARTY, PAPER SAYS

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 11 (AP).—The Post-Dispatch asserted tonight in a copyrighted story that Wendell Willkie had "thoroly explored the possibility of forming a third political party" and had canvassed the technicalities of getting a third party candidate on the ballot in each of the 48 states.

The story, by Marquis W. Childs, one of the newspaper's Washington writers, quoted "an authoritative source." It said Willkie "presumably" had "the thought of leading an independent movement out of the Republican party should the convention next summer compromise on the foreign issue and name a compromise candidate unacceptable to him."

Willkie, asked in New York about his "possible third party intentions," was quoted by the newspaper as saying:

"So many stories are circulated about me by both by friends and my enemies that I do not bother either to confirm or deny them. I do not think I care to comment further at this time."

FOOD RETAILERS WARNED TO LIST TOKEN DEMANDS

Food retailers who fail to file an estimate of their ration token requirements with the banks handling their ration accounts by next Wednesday may be without these necessary change points when tokens go into use Feb. 27, Russell A. Wilcox, ration banking specialist of the regional office of price administration, said yesterday.

Estimates are to be made on form 749-23, copies of which may be obtained from wholesalers and food trade associations, Wilcox said. He asserted the fact that only a few days remained in which to file should give merchants no concern since the forms are simple and can be filled out in a few minutes. Forms are to be mailed or delivered to the bank at which the merchant maintains his ration account, while those retailers whose annual gross receipts are too small for such an account may file their estimates with any bank handling ration business.

Tokens will have no expiration dates and may be used for purchases alone or in combination with ration stamps. The tokens will be distributed to retailers about Feb. 22, the OPA said.

BADGER PARTY SESSION BACKS F. D. R. 4TH TERM

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 11 (AP).—The Wisconsin state Democratic convention indorsed President Roosevelt today for a fourth term.

Voting by acclamation, the convention unanimously adopted a resolution which stated that "national and international events, coupled with this World war has placed his [President Roosevelt's] name far in advance of any other in America as the leader to bring victory to our nation and permanent peace to the world."

The keynote address was given by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago.

TRIBUNE'S BEST STORIES, PHOTO IN 1943 PICKED

E. S. Beck Memorial Plan Created by Widow.

The establishment of the Edward Scott Beck Annual Prize foundation, and the names of the first persons to win awards under its provisions, were announced yesterday by a jury of Tribune news department executives which made the selections.

The foundation has been established by Mrs. Clare B. Beck in accordance with the desires of her late husband, Edward S. Beck, who was a member of the Tribune staff for 45 years and managing editor for 26 years. He died last Christmas.

The foundation provides for three awards of $500 each to Tribune employes. One award is to go to the staff reporter who, during the 12 months preceding each Nov. 30, writes for Tribune columns what is judged to be the best foreign news story. Another award is to go to the staff reporter who writes the best domestic or local news story. The third award is to go to the photographer who takes the best photograph.

Jury of 3 Decides.

The decision is in the hands of a three man jury composed of THE TRIBUNE'S managing editor, its city editor, and its news editor. The jury was appointed by Col. R. R. McCormick, president of the Tribune company.

The 1943 prize for the best foreign dispatch was awarded to Clay H. Gowran, who has been on the Tribune staff since January of 1938 and in foreign service for the last 20 months.

Because the judges were unable to agree on a single "best" story from the output of the paper's foreign correspondents, the names of four of them who had written great stories of experiences under enemy fire were put into a hat and a drawing held. Gowran was the winner.

His prize story was his account of the journey of a little band of marines thru New Georgia jungles and their victory over a Japanese force at Viru harbor last June and July. The dispatch was printed July 10.

Shared Hardships of Trek.

It was a realistic, eye witness account of the behavior of American troops under frightful living and fighting conditions. No one who read the dispatch will forget soon its description of the marines' trek thru jungles and swamps, up muddy, slippery hills, and across chin deep rivers.

Gowran, who had not had the intensive, hardening training the marines had received, nevertheless kept up with them on their fearful march and shared the experiences of sleeping in mud and rain and living on rations.

At the end of this 88 hour march, exhausted Americans faced fresh, specially trained Japanese troops—and swept them into the sea and the jungle.

The award for the story written by a local staff reporter was divided between Orville Dwyer and George S. Hartmann for their joint series exposing the stranglehold which gangsters had obtained on many working men and women thru control of some of their unions. The stories ran in a series of 11 daily instalments from March 17 to 27.

Patient Research Factor.

This series constituted one of the greatest public services which any reporters have performed. The stories named names, gave dates, and coördinated and brought into the realm of fact what long had been the subject of disconnected rumors and hearsay.

The stories cast a blinding light into one of the foulest corners of the domestic scene. Men who had not been above defrauding scrubwomen of their pennies and who regarded murder as legitimate were exposed and pilloried.

The patience and ingenuity which went into the reporters' investigations, as well as the clarity and forcefulness of their presentation of facts, were considered by the jury in making the award.

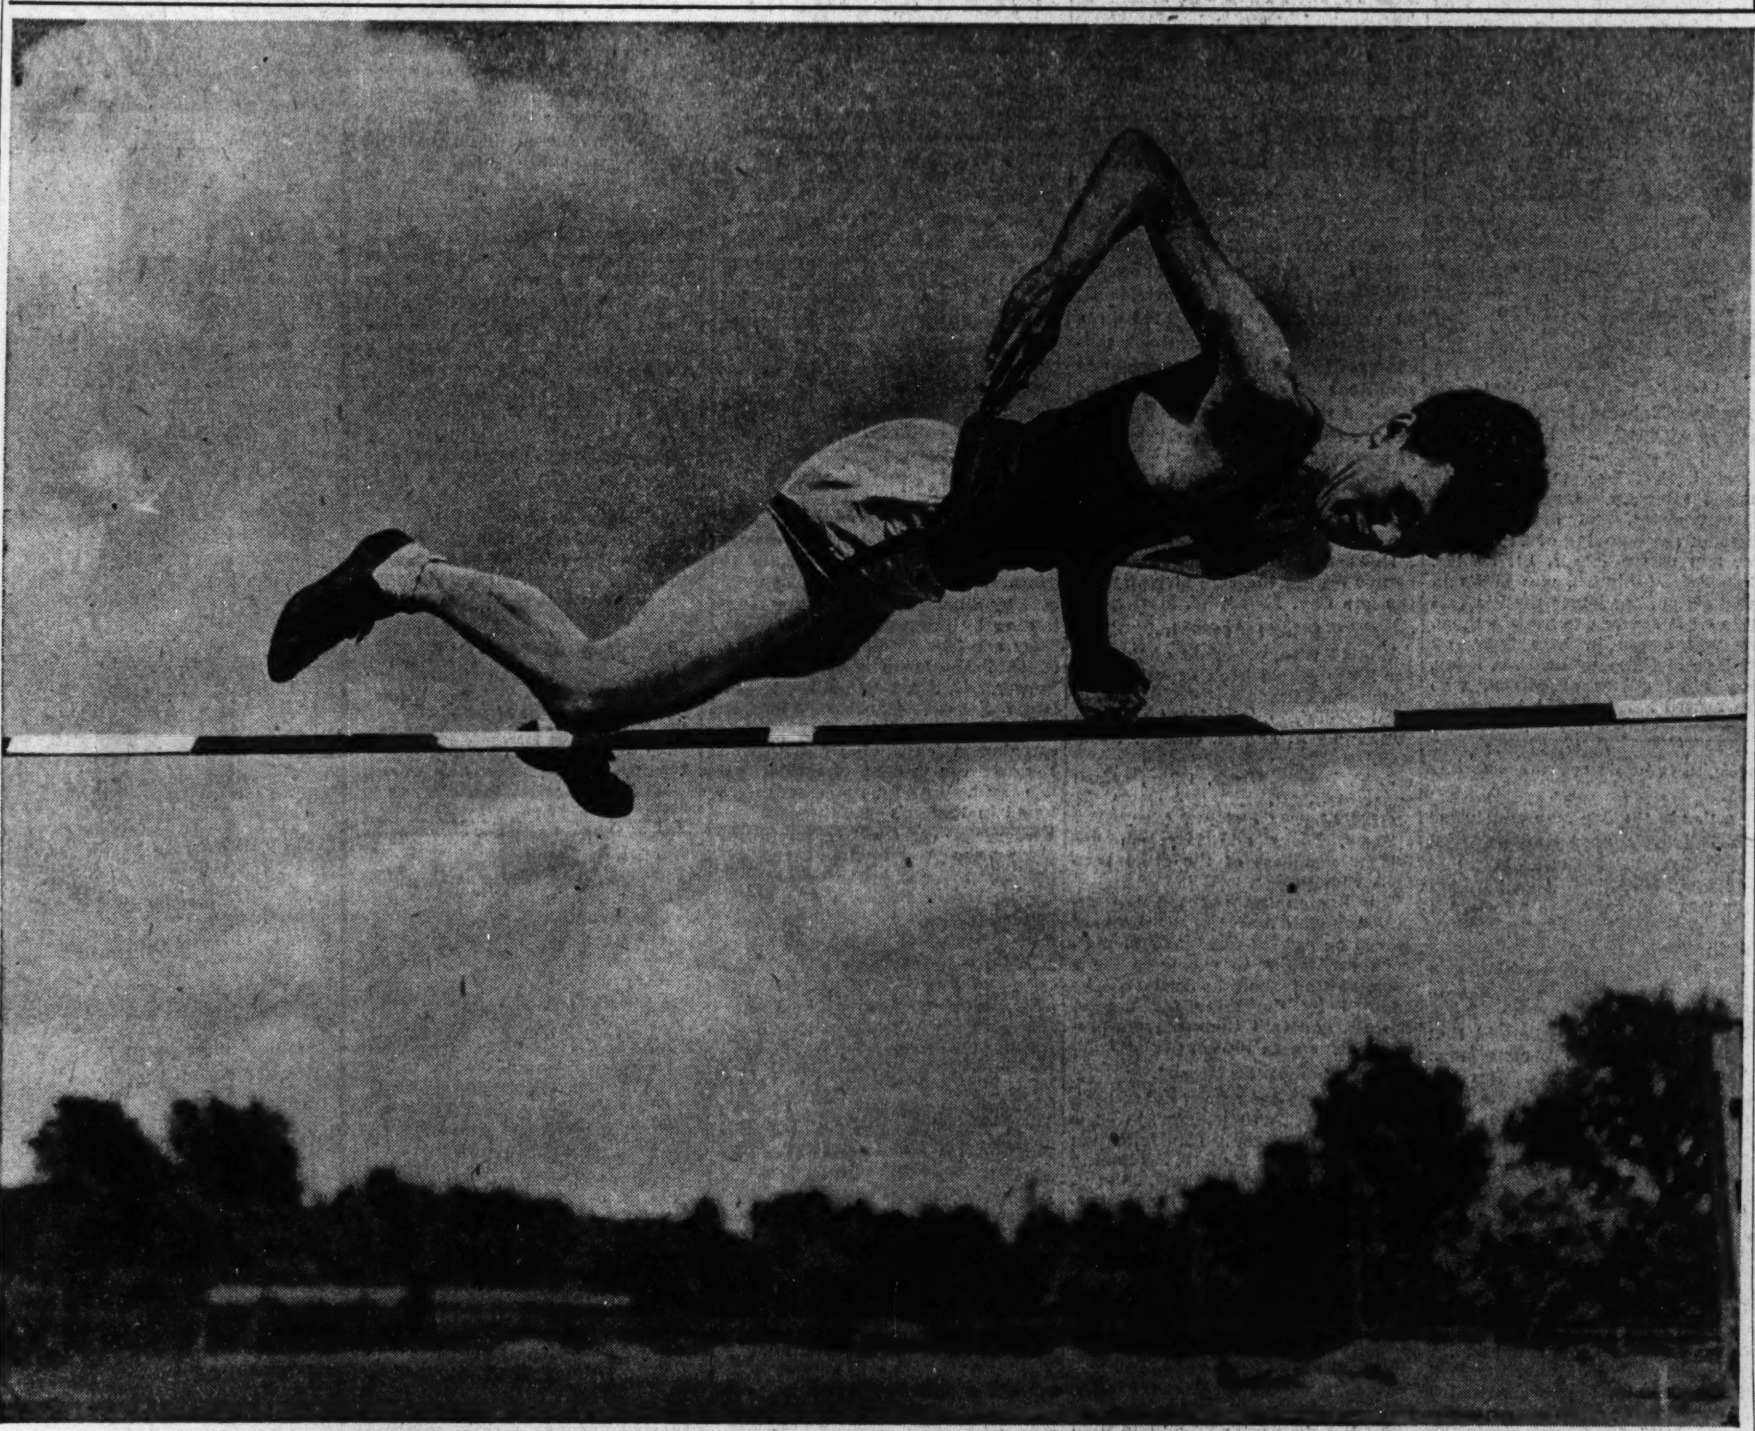
Dwyer has served a total of 15 years on THE TRIBUNE. Hartmann has been with the paper 11 years.

Action Picture Rewarded.

Swain Scalf, a Tribune photographer for 16 years, was awarded the $500 prize for the best photograph of the year — a photograph of a high jumper in the act of clearing the bar. Scalf took the photograph at Dyche stadium, Evanston, on June 12 during the 23d annual national collegiate track meet. It was published June 13. The jumper was Fred Shefield of Utah.

The photograph was judged outstanding because of its perfect timing. The exposure was made at the exact instant at which the jumper was crossing the bar. The photograph's sharpness and composition were also praised by the jury.

Winner of $500 E. S. Beck Prize for Best News Photograph of 1943 by Tribune Camera Man



Photograph by Swain Scalf, which was adjudged to be the best news photograph taken by a Tribune photographer during 1943. As such, it wins the first photographic award to be given by the Edward Scott Beck Annual Prize Foundation, established in memory of Mr. Beck, a member of the Tribune staff for 45 years and managing editor for 26 years. He died last Christmas. His widow, Mrs. Clare B. Beck, established the foundation in accordance with his wishes.

WAR FUND DRIVE LAGGING MILLION DOLLARS BEHIND

Greater Effort Urged in Closing Days.

Don't stop now!

This plea was voiced yesterday by Elmer T. Stevens, Chicago area director of the National Community and War fund, in his efforts to increase employe solicitation by management during the last 10 days of the drive. He emphasized that the campaign is in danger of falling short 1 million dollars of the $12,806,424 quota by Dec. 22, the end of the drive.

"Some people will say, and have said, that even if you stop at $11,500,000 or $12,000,000, it is the biggest thing Chicago ever has done, and is a swell job," he declared. "It isn't! It figures out just about $3 per capita. Add another dollar to that for contributions to local and suburban charities and you have $4 per capita.

"Cleveland just finished its drive with $6. Boston, Minneapolis and St. Paul have subscribed $5 or better. Philadelphia, Los Angeles and San Francisco look better than $5. Others are near that. Is Chicago unable to play in this league? None of us can accept the 'well enough' theory without participating in the burial of that spirit that made Chicago famous."

Stevens said he thought that one factor which has slowed employe solicitation among Chicago firms is a feeling by employers that, man power problems being what they are, the employe should be "protected" from anything piled on top of existing pay roll deductions. Stevens disputed this attitude.

"In many cases," he pointed out, "the employe is much closer to the local situation than top management ever can be.

"The employe sees juvenile delinquency increasing right in his own block. He sees the needs for nurseries, for clinics, for hospitals, for nursing care, for homes for the aged. There are more fellows from his block in service than in his employers' block, and these fellows do not have the money to make things easy for them.

"The U. S. O. means something to him. Furthermore, he stems in many cases from one of those persecuted nations, or his next door neighbor does."

"There are a great many cases where management has thrown its weight behind the drive and where the drive has been understood by lesser executives. Where they have set an example, the result has been splendid. Quotas have been doubled in some cases, and exceeded in many others. If that is the case in some, there is no reason why it shouldn't be the case in others."

Despite the fact that employe gifts may be under expectations by 1½ million dollars, Stevens declared that this drive, which is a merger of 203 drives usually held separately, will accomplish far more than last year's Community fund drive.

MOVE TO DELAY FATHERS DRAFT IN NEW ORDERS

Boards Directed to Call Eligibles in Sequence.

Local draft boards received orders yesterday to postpone induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers as long as possible by calling up all eligible men for service in the sequence of their order numbers.

The immediate effect of the new directions given in Washington, D. C., by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, will be to prevent the induction of so-called nondeferable pre-war fathers who had been ordered to report regardless of out of order sequence.

Hershey testified at a closed session of the house military committee. Chairman Andrew J. May [D., Ky.] said Hershey assured the committee that, in keeping with the intent of the new deferment bill signed Friday by President Roosevelt, pre-war fathers will be drafted in the future only in cases when there remains no other way of filling quotas.

Two Plans Considered.

To help delay the draft of fathers, Hershey announced that these two plans are under consideration:

1. Abandonment of group occupational deferment of men up to 22 years of age. In this event, decisions will be made individually, regardless of occupation.

2. A review of all men classified 4-F, or physically unfit. Hershey said this classification "is a fertile pool of additional man power if physical standards are relaxed."

Abandonment of the group occupation deferment plan, under which no applicant under 22 years old would be granted deferment because of his job—except in cases where the law makes such deferments mandatory—would produce, it is believed, sufficient numbers of draft eligibles to spare fathers for a longer period.

Study Physical Standards.

The new draft law calls for a five man medical commission to determine whether physical standards of the fighting forces are unnecessarily high.

Earlier in the day May announced that Hershey's new plan provided that fathers to 22 years old would be drafted before older father, but later this was described as a statement resulting from a misunderstanding, and was in error.

Hershey told the committee that selective service will be obliged to call a million more men before June, altho the army has announced that it needs only 300,000 more men aside from replacements. Hershey explained that the man power requirements of the navy are twice those of the army.

The army strength was announced by Hershey as 7,400,000 and that of the navy as 2,700,000.

Andrea Roberta Linden, taking oath as WAVE.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11 [Special].—Andrea Roberta Linden, whose mother, sister, and brother were killed in the bombing of Pearl Harbor, and whose father, Lt. Comdr. Allen Robert Linden, was killed in naval action, has joined the WAVES to do what she can to avenge them. She was sworn in here today on her 20th birthday by Lt. E. P. Riley, navy legal officer at Miami, who was named her guardian by courts.

Refused a Drink, Shoots Bartender and Escapes

George C. [Cy] Swienhart, 40 years old, 126 Leclaire avenue, bartender at the 2530 club at that number on Milwaukee avenue, was shot thru the right forearm and in the right side of the chest last night by an unidentified man to whom he earlier had refused to sell a drink. Physicians at St. Elizabeth's hospital believed that Swienhart's rib had deflected the bullet and that he was not critically wounded. The assailant escaped.

JURY INDICTS 8 ON SCHOOL BOOK FRAUD CHARGES

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 11 (AP).—The Tulsa county grand jury today indicted eight prominent Oklahomans, including two college presidents, on charges they participated in a conspiracy to defraud textbook purchasers by controling prices and adoptions of certain books. Those indicted were:

A. L. Crable, state superintendent of public instruction.

Dr. Henry G. Bennett, president of Oklahoma A. and M. college.

J. T. Daniel, former speaker of the state house of representatives.

Others Accused.

J. E. Peery, Minco, Okla., school superintendent.

O. E. Shaw, Oklahoma City.

Shaw, Peery and Morrison are former members of the state textbook commission.

The indictment charged the defendants solicited "large sums of money as bribes" from several textbook companies in exchange for a promise that their books would be adopted by the state for use in schools, and that the contracts provided for excess prices.

Companies Named.

The indictment named as textbook companies participating in the alleged conspiracy: The American Book company, Follett Publishing company, Laidlew Brothers, John C. Winston company, and Lyons-Carnahan.

"It was the object and purpose of the conspiracy and of each of the conspirators that they would control the adoption of textbooks by the Oklahoma textbook commission for use in the public schools," the indictment said.

In Oklahoma, which has no free textbook law, the state authorizes the titles for use in grade and high schools.

The indictment charged a conspiracy reaching back into the administration of Marland, who was governor from 1935 to 1939, and still continuing.

NMU WANTS ITS VICE PRESIDENT DEFERRED, TOO

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—The CIO National Maritime union, which obtained draft deferment of its president, Joseph Curran, thru a Presidential appeal, has asked for the deferment of its vice president, Jack Lawrensen.

Col. Arthur V. McDermott, New York City draft director, to whom the NMU appealed after local board No. 16 placed Lawrensen, 37 years old, in 1-A and was upheld by the appeals board, said he would announce a decision in several days.

The NMU claimed in its appeal that Lawrensen was essential to the war effort. Lawrensen is married, but has no children.

3 Caught Transferring Rum Held for G-Men

Seized while transferring a case of liquor from one automobile to another, three men yesterday were held by Summerdale police for questioning by internal revenue agents. They are Nils Wikell, 37 years old, of 5016 Winthrop avenue; Myers Berger, 42, 3838 Broadway; and Louis Schear, 42, 5016 Winthrop avenue. When arrested they were carrying a case of whisky from Berger's car to that of Schear, police said. Five more cases were found in Berger's car, they said.

SEIZE MOTHER FOR LEAVING 3 ALONE IN FLAT

Mrs. Mary Mounts Micelli, 27 years old, of 804 Loomis street, was booked yesterday by Maxwell police on charges of contributing to the delinquency of her three children and disorderly conduct and will appear tomorrow in Domestic Relations court. Mrs. Micelli, who is being held in the women's annex of the Central police station, said her husband, Michael, went off with another woman four months ago and since then she has had to get along on $25 monthly relief allotment.

With Christmas coming on, she wanted extra money for the children so she went to work in a bookbinding shop. Louis Kalinsky, 1547 South Christiana avenue, a milkman, discovered the youngsters alone in the three room apartment on Friday. Police took Shirley, 7, and Rose Mary, 3, to the Juvenile home, and Michael, 7 months, to St. Vincent's orphanage.

5TH ARMY TAKES NEW HEIGHT IN 1 MILE THRUST

8th Captures Town North of Moro River.

ALLIED HDQ., Algiers, Dec. 11 (AP).—The American 5th army has increased its threat to the Germans blocking the road to Rome in the upper Garigliano valley by making a one mile thrust that captured an important height. The British 8th army, in fighting as bitter as any in the Italian campaign, has taken San Leonardo on the north bank of the Moro river, allied headquarters announced today.

One section of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's 5th army was battering its way toward Cassino from the east. Others of his troops were fighting their way toward Cassino from the south. These units ran into a battle for San Pietro, fortified village southeast of Cassino.

Launch Counter-attacks.

The 5th army encountered the stiffest kind of resistance, notably west of Filignano and on ridges near San Pietro where the Germans launched unsuccessful counter-attacks at the new allied position on Monte Samucro, two miles north of the main road to Cassino and Rome.

Detailing fighting on the 8th army's sector of the front, the allied bulletin said, "a second bridgehead has been established over the Moro river despite considerable opposition."

Allied headquarters previously had reported two crossings of the Moro, but it was explained today that these were both made at the same bridgehead, near the coast. The second bridgehead reported established today ih farther inland.

Tank Duel at Orsogna.

After fierce action lasting all night the new bridgehead was reported firmly established at dawn yesterday in the area of Frisa, four and a half miles from the Adriatic. German counter-thrusts were beaten off.

At Orsogna important inland town guarding the road to Chieti, a heavy tank duel took place. Orsogna has changed hands twice within a week.

Allied fighter and fighter bombers ranged the battlefront in strong support of the ground forces. American, British, Australian, and South African units destroyed 53 motor vehicles and damaged 125 in strafing attacks around Chieti.

Report Fleet Aids Army.

LONDON, Dec. 11 (AP).—A Vichy [Nazi controled] broadcast said today that allied fleet units had gone into action along Italy's Adriatic coast in support of Canadian troops driving strongly toward the important port of Pescara.

Decorate Yank Chaplain Who Rescued 2 Officers

NAPLES, Italy, Dec. 11 (AP).—Lt. Albert C. M. Steffens, 5th army chaplain and former assistant to Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York, has been awarded the soldier's medal for saving an American and a British officer from drowning off the Algerian coast last summer.

SINK 5 U-BOATS AS 20 MASS FOR RAID ON CONVOY

Planes, Ships Win 2 Day Battle.

LONDON, Dec. 11 (AP).—In a furious 48 hour day and night battle in the North Atlantic, British and American planes and warships beat off a pack of at least 20 German U-boats recently. Five Nazi submarines were sunk and three damaged and two valuable convoys were brought thru virtually without loss.

The submarines fought back with their newly installed anti-aircraft guns and forced down two allied planes, but a joint admiralty and air ministry bulletin said "More than 99 per cent of the escorted ships reached harbor in safety."

No Allied Ships Lost.

British destroyers and corvettes escorting the convoys escaped without loss. Most of the crew members of the Sunderland coastal patrol plane and Liberator bomber which were forced down were rescued. In the engagement Iceland-based Liberators joined with coastal command bombers and between them sank three U-boats and damaged at least three others.

Spotted while on the surface, at least two U-boats split in two before they sank. Germans scrambling from the abandoned craft were captured by British ships.

Planned Major Attack.

The bulletin said the submarines had been preparing a major attack on allied shipping. Destroyers made the first strike, hunting for the U-boats and releasing depth charges. A coastal command Liberator at dawn saw one submarine 15 miles from one of the convoys. In attacking the plane was badly damaged by the submarine's fire and was unable to release its depth charges. A second Liberator, which the first guided to the scene, also was damaged, but made two attacks and hit the submarine which submerged.

Later another Liberator found a submarine but was driven off by intense cannon and pom-pom fire. Keeping watch from a distance, it sneaked in and depth-bombed, sinking the submarine whose men escaped to rubber boats.

BRITAIN'S FLU EPIDEMIC TAKES ALARMING JUMP

LONDON, Dec. 11 (AP).—The worst epidemic of the war threatened Britain today as the influenza death toll was disclosed to have jumped to 709 in 126 major towns of England and Wales for the week ending Dec. 4. Tens of thousands were sent to bed by the disease, approaching plague proportions alarmingly early in the winter.

This outbreak was far from the scope and virulence of the epidemic of 1918 which killed 112,329 in England and Wales, but threatens to eclipse that of 1940, previously the worst year of this war, when influenza caused about 4,500 deaths in the traditionally most dangerous months of January, February, and March.

In that winter the comparable week of December saw only 23 deaths, and the worst week—at the end of February—brought only 629.

F. D. R. UNFOLDS 'MASTER PLAN' TO EISENHOWER

Meets Africa Army Chief at Carthage Site.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—The war's greatest mystery—when and where the invasion hammers of Anglo-American forces will strike—apparently drew nearer a solution today with allied leaders laying the final pieces in the military jigsaw puzzle.

Gen. Eisenhower.

Latest reports from the White House disclosed that President Roosevelt has unfolded the details of the newly conceived victory strategy to his allied commander in North Africa and Italy. Gen. Eisenhower, thus readying the stage for at least one of the blows to be aimed at Germany from the south, east, and west.

Meanwhile the Nazi radio quoted dispatches from Lausanne, Switzerland, saying that the President was reported to be "somewhere in southern Italy" and was supposed to "pay a short visit to the front."

The belated report of the Roosevelt-Eisenhower conference came from Maj. George E. Durno, former White House correspondent traveling with the President.

"Mr. Roosevelt," he said, "constructed a final and complete picture for Eisenhower at Carthage, apprising him of the myriad details agreed upon by the joint staff to make possible execution of the new over-all strategy."

The report to the general was given during a 48 hour stopover at the ruins of the ancient city in Tunisia on the President's roundabout trip home from conferences with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin at Teheran and with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Churchill at Cairo.

Leadership Still a Question.

While Eisenhower participated in some of the strategy discussions at Cairo, Durno emphasized that Mr. Roosevelt's report to the general disclosed "the grand Mediterranean strategy determined upon" in collaboration with the British leader and the combined British-American staffs.

Whether Eisenhower would direct the further offensives previously indicated for the Mediterranean area will remain an allied secret. It was believed in Washington, however, that the North African commander eventually would replace Gen. George C. Marshall when the army chief of staff goes to London as grand commander of Anglo-American forces.

The date of the President's meeting with Eisenhower was not disclosed in the latest of the series of dispatches on his activities.

Eden Returns to London.

LONDON, Dec. 11 (AP).—British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and United States Ambassador John G. Winant returned to Britain today from the middle east conferences.

Farouk Invited to Visit U. S.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 11 (AP).—President Roosevelt has invited King Farouk of Egypt to visit the United States after the war, it was disclosed today. The king was said to have expressed his thanks but did not commit himself definitely on the trip so far as could be learned.

Bombed by Yanks

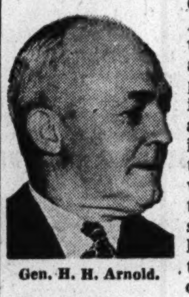
Scene of new blow at Nazis.

BOMBS'LL HAVE NAZIS GROGGY SOON—ARNOLD

Air Chief Tours U. S. Bases in Italy.

AN AMERICAN FIGHTER BASE IN WESTERN ITALY, Dec. 11 (AP).—Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the United States army air forces, predicted today in the course of a tour of the Italian fighting front that Germany would be unable to offer much resistance to the allied assault from the west when it comes.



Gen. H. H. Arnold.

If the Germans are not knocked completely out of the war by the time a new invasion comes, Arnold said, "they are going to be too groggy" from air attacks to put up much of a fight.

Describing the new American bombers being thrown into the attack against Germany, Arnold told a press conference that "we hope to bring over Europe such air types that with Russia we will have 360 degree bombing of Germany—hitting her from every side."

Yanks Improve Defenses.

"The Germans have tried everything to halt the Fortresses," said Arnold, but he added that American technicians had been able to meet every form of attack yet encountered.

Gets Pilots' Suggestions.

Arnold pried into field kitchens and questioned fighter and invader-fighter pilots between missions over the battle front. He encouraged the soldiers—cooks and pilots alike—to pour out their troubles to him and to give him any ideas they might have.

Spaatz and Arnold singled out two Warhawk fighter units for special attention in their tour of the Adriatic side of Italy. They were the 79th and 57th groups.

On a rain drenched field that was little more than a "strip," Arnold inspected the 79th, which had just completed its 10,000th sortie since going into operation November, 1942. The group is commanded by Col. Earl E. Bates, Winnetka, Ill.

CROUP VICTIM AIDED.

After a croup seizure, Vincent Peterson, 12 years old, 852 East 73d street, was revived yesterday by fire department inhalator squad 5, under Lt. John Fitzgerald.

Finnish Minister Resigns; He Displeased the Nazis

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Dec. 11 (AP).—Finnish Minister of Social Affairs K. A. Fagerholm, whom the Germans repeatedly have tried to force from office, has resigned "at his own wish," it was officially announced today. The Nazis demanded Fagerholm's ouster after he had written a newspaper article that displeased them.

SHAPING OF WAR IN PARLEYS TOLD BY COL. LANZA

Turkey's Place in Plans Still Not Clear.

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

[Regular contributor to the Field Artillery journal and recognized as an authority on military matters.]

Following the Quebec conference between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, in which Russia had no representation, a conference with that nation was desired. The American secretary of State and the British and Russian foreign ministers met at Moscow between Oct. 19 and 30. Prior to this conference, press dispatches from London, dated Oct. 14, stated that Russia had advised that she desired assurances about the expanding American army in Iran, and that the forces would be withdrawn at the end of the war.

British officials were reported as saying that Great Britain would not risk disagreement with Russia as to the Baltic states. Neither Russia nor Britain was to bring up this question, but there was doubt at that time as to whether something could be arranged as to the future of Poland.

Several announcements and declarations of this conference were issued on Nov. 1, giving as much of the conclusions arrived at as was considered advisable to make public. Nothing in them related to Iran, the Baltic states or Poland. These problems seemingly were left for future determination.

Mention of Second Front Omitted.

There also was nothing relating to a second front, which the Russian press had announced was to be a prominent subject for discussion. Neither was anything issued relating to Turkey and her part in the war. But this must have been discussed.

For immediately following the close of the Moscow conference Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, went to Cairo, Egypt, where he held long conferences between Nov. 3 and 7 with the Turkish foreign minister, Numan Menemencioglu. There was no official announcement relating to what was discussed.

But as early as Nov. 4 press dispatches from London and Ankara, Turkey, said the allies had began diplomatic moves to gain bases in Turkey with a view to diverting German troops from the Russian front and to obtain air fields to drive the Germans out of the Dodecanese Islands as well as to discourage political moves at Sofia, Bulgaria, and Bucharest, Rumania.

Predictions that Turkey would enter the war on the allied side were frequent at that time. The fact that Eden went to Cairo, the prominence given to the desire to force Germany to withdraw troops from Russia, and the presence of the Russian ambassador to Ankara, point strongly to the probability that it was Russia which desired Turkey's entrance into the war.

Nazis Mass Troops.

Germany has good sources of information within Turkey. She was aware of what was going on. Very promptly came reports that German troops were assemblying on the borders of European Turkey.

In any case, Turkey has not yet granted any bases to the allies, and hasn't entered the war.

At Teheran, Iran, President Roosevelt, Churchill and Premier Stalin met from Nov. 28 to 30. In a joint declaration issued Dec. 1, the three statesmen agreed to the maintenance of Iran as an independent state. This seems to be the answer to the Russian demand for assurances that the American army in Iran would be withdrawn at the end of the war.

Nothing was issued definitely as to the second front, but the inference drawn from the announcement is that a date was arrived at, by which, it would come. Neither was anything said regarding Turkey.

However, just as after the Moscow conference Eden rushed to Cairo and sent for the Turkish minister, so after Teheran, Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill also went to Cairo. As little effect seems to have been obtained from Eden's prior visit, this time President Ismet Inonu of Turkey was invited to attend. The invitation was sent after the Teheran meeting, and it seems that the discussions there prompted such action. Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill had conferred at Cairo prior to the Teheran meeting and could have asked Turkey's president to join them at that time, but since they did not do so, it is probable that Russia desired that if the second front in the west could not be opened soon to relieve the Russian armies, something should be done to open a Balkan front. For this purpose, Turkey would undoubtedly be in the best position to start off.

TITO PARTISANS HOLD SLOVENIA LINE UNBROKEN

LONDON, Dec. 11 (AP).—Marshal Josip [Tito] Broz' Partisan Jugo-Slav army, which has breasted for a week the full shock of a heavy German offensive, held firm tonight in the most important area of Slovenia athwart the enemy's Fiume-Trieste supply head in the upper Adriatic.

The broadcast army of liberation bulletin said today that Tito's units are being pressed by superior German forces thruout eastern Bosnia. In central Bosnia Tito was using cavalry to bolster his land forces and in one engagement they killed 20 Germans and wounded 33 others. The Jugo-Slavs ambushed a column of Germans in northwestern Croatia on the Delnice-Vodice road and killed 30 of the enemy.

A small but spectacular example of the help already being given Tito by the allies was provided in the story of a United States army transport plane dashing down onto a little air field in German occupied Jugo-Slavia, landing supplies and British and American liaison officers, and making off with German prisoners for intelligence purposes.

[Radio France at Algiers reported that allied planes had raided Split, Jugo-Slavia, on the Adriatic sea across from central Italy.]

The Turkish radio said in a broadcast that the soviet government had decided to recognize Marshal Broz' Partisan Jugo-Slav government as the legal representative of that country instead of King Peter's regime.

YANKS BAG 7 JAP PLANES IN NEW RAID ON ATOLLS

Blast Marshall Isle Second Day in Row.

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Dec. 11 (AP). — Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today that 7th air force Liberators shot down four and possibly seven Japanese Zeros on Thursday in their third raid in two days on Mili Atoll in the Marshall Islands. Both Mili and Jaluit atolls, key Nipponese outposts, were twice bombed on Wednesday.

In the latest attack the Liberators dropped 15 tons of bombs. Twenty enemy interceptors rose to meet the four engined bombers, compared with only 10 on the previous day, indicating Japanese reënforcements have been coming in to meet the threat of an amphibious invasion.

Four of the Zeros were definitely shot down. Three more were probably destroyed, Adm. Nimitz reported, and another was damaged.

All U. S. Planes Return.

Against this, all of the United States army planes returned to their equatorial base, despite the Japanese fighters' attempt to bring them down with aerial bombs, machine guns, and cannon. All six aerial bombs the Japanese used missed their targets. Some American airmen were wounded and part of the bomber contingent was damaged.

On the previous day the Liberators also returned with slight damage and one wounded man after shooting down two of the 10 interceptors.

Allied planes carrying on raids of sustained intensity over New Britain, where Cape Gloucester had been hammered for 11 successive days, had the benefit of a new advanced air field. It was on the Empress Augusta bay beachhead, on the western coast of Bougainville Island of the northern Solomons.

Aussies Gain in Guinea.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC ALLIED HDQ., Dec. 12 [Sunday]—(AP).—Australian troops have captured another Japanese strongpoint a mile and a half west of Wareo, New Guinea. Wareo, which was captured Dec. 8, is 12½ miles northwest of Finschhafen.

In the near-by Ramu valley sharp clashes between ground patrols also were reported in Gen. MacArthur's war bulletin today.

Allied aircraft and surface vessels struck at enemy shipping from the New Guinea coast to New Ireland. American patrol torpedo boats sank 10 barges off the coast of the Huon peninsula and a navy Catalina flying boat sank an 8,000-ton freighter off New Ireland.

LT. HERTHNECK, NAVAL DENTIST, DIES A PRISONER

Lt. [j. g.] Robert G. Herthneck, a navy dentist taken prisoner by the Japs on Corregidor, died Oct. 4 of acute myelitis [inflammation of the spinal cord] according to a Red Cross report forwarded by the navy department to his wife, the former Dorothy Leighton of Joliet.

Lt. R. G. Herthneck.

Lt. Herthneck formerly was employed by the United Air Lines in Chicago. Mrs. Herthneck now is a member of the WASPS in training at Sweetwater, Tex. Besides the widow, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Herthneck of Seattle, Wash., survive.

Lt. Herthneck came to Chicago from Seattle in 1931 as an employe in the auditing department of United Air Lines. In 1933 he began the study of dentistry at Loyola university and received his degree in 1940. He was a member of Alpha Sigma Nu and Omicron Upsilon, honorary dental fraternities, and held the offices of scribe and worthy master in Delta Sigma Delta. He was commissioned in the navy in 1941 and, after being stationed at Annapolis, was sent to Manila in August of that year.

MAJ. DIXON, WHO IS IN ITALY, GETS LEGION OF MERIT

Maj. Arthur Dixon, 1015 North Green Bay road, Lake Forest, intelligence officer for the 47th bombardment group of the army air force in Italy, has been awarded the Legion of Merit, his wife was notified yesterday.

Maj. Dixon, who is 49 years old, has been overseas since September, 1942, and has gone thru the African, Sicilian, and Italian campaigns. He was a captain in World War I. The citation that accompanied the Legion of Merit award stated: "Maj. Dixon's untiring devotion to duty contributed substantially to the highly successful operational record of the group."

Maj. Dixon is a grandson of the founder of the Arthur Dixon Transfer company. Prior to joining the army in April, 1942, he was an attorney in Chicago.

CHICAGO YANK MEETS COUSIN, ITALIAN SOLDIER

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—Sgt. Frank Rio of 719 South Paulina street, Chicago, on duty with a B-25 Mitchell medium bomber squadron of the northwest African air forces, recently struck up a conversation with some Italian soldiers who were manning an anti-aircraft battery, the army announced today. One of the Italians recognized Sgt. Rio as an American.

"My name is Rio," the Italian said, "and I have an uncle living in Chicago at 719 South Paulina street."

The American sergeant and the Italian soldier are cousins. Sgt. Rio's father is Vincenzo Rio.

TARAWA! WHERE U. S. MARINES DID THE IMPOSSIBLE

Combat Cameraman Tells of Heroic Battle.

best men. They went in there with all they had, in and in and in, and those that came thru took the island.

It was incredible that it could happen the way it did. When the first geysers of water shot up around us as we tried to go in at H hour on D day, I couldn't believe my eyes.

"My God!" I yelled. "They're firing at us!"

That's the way every one felt. It was impossible to conceive of any one on the island being alive. We didn't think any one could have lived thru our bombardment.

Aids Kitten Amid Battle.

The funny thing was that we later saw chickens running all over the place, red little Jap chickens, and pigs, a dog, and a gray kitten. One camera man saw a marine stop fighting beside a ruined Jap tank and give that kitten a drink of water from the precious store in his canteen. There was firing all around and a Jap pillbox 10 feet away. He took a picture of it. It's the best picture from Tarawa.

But we thought it impossible for any one to be alive. Then you'd see those guns on the beach and those 6 inch shells hitting the water. The Japs had gun positions 6 feet back and 4 feet back and 2 feet back and then right on the sea wall. They threw them all at us. They threw everything.

I've been a marine 11 years. I was in the Yangtze campaign and the North China expedition and in a foxhole on Guadalcanal for 53 days, but I'd never been thru anything like Tarawa. We thought it would be a cinch. It never was, not even the fourth day when our flag went up. We were fighting the worst kind of enemy, an enemy we could never see, moles hidden in tunnels of iron, and around us all the time was that other enemy you couldn't see—death. For four days it looked like those two would win.

Keyed Like a Football Team.

But, when we went in, it was just another job, like another maneuver. The men were under no tension. On the way we gone thru the whole landing, exactly as we were to have done it on D day. It was perfect.

Most of the men were Guadalcanal veterans. We had been in training for four months. Any one who was rocky was weeded out. However, every man was restless to the point of disintegration. They were like a football team that gets keyed up and want to be mowing them down.

Not more than a dozen officers knew where we were going. Some said Burma. Some said North Africa. Some even said Tokio. It wasn't until five days out that we knew where we were going.

Then every man was given a complete picture of what was going to happen at Makin, at Bougainville, everywhere. Every private knew as much about the operation as the colonels.

We had relief maps and contour maps and overlays showing all the installations. Every man knew every place he was to go, just what he was to do. We knew the beaches as Red Beach I and Red Beach II and Green Beach I and Green Beach II. We knew what battalions were going to each and when.

Knew Every Jap Defense.

We knew the beaches where the Japs had built tank and boat obstacles and we weren't going that way. We were going in the way they thought we could never make it—thru the narrow lagoon.

We knew the fleet was with us, and we knew its strength in aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers, and auxiliary craft. We knew Tarawa was a string of islands 32 miles long.

Even when the men knew our destination there was no tension. In the Higgins boats going in they joked. One had a Varga drawing. They were looking at it 1,000 yards off shore with the Jap shells popping all around.

There was activity all the way. The last day out we shot down a Jap bomber. The men had exercises every day to keep fit and prepare for combat. They tested the guns on the ships and loaded the boat guns, every third bullet a tracer.

We were combat loaded, really stripped down. Every one was in combat uniform, about half of them in camouflage. We carried only field rations, a change of clothing, and two canteens, not even a bedding roll.

Mass Sung on Eve of Attack.

D day was Nov. 20, H hour was 9 a. m. The afternoon before we were issued one day's rations. The assault troops would go ashore with that, two canteens of water, and ammunition. Every man got one-third ration K, one-third C ration, one-third D, but I lost mine.

The sun went down in a ball of flame. We thought it a good omen.

At 7 p. m. they had mass. It was sung by Father Francis W. Kelly of Philadelphia, who had been on Guadalcanal. He's a wonderful guy, a real man. He's fearless and he went in with the assault troops. He didn't have to, but he always does.

I am not religious, but he doesn't mind that. He saw me after mass and said, "Well, Leopold, if I can't convert you, I still won't forget you. I'll take care of you in there."

"O, no, Father," I told him. "Not me. I'm coming out."

Now I recall how Father Kelly had ended the mass service. He said, "All right. Go in now and bring glory to our corps. God bless you, and God have mercy on the Japs."

Dine on Steak and Eggs.

At 10 p. m. we had breakfast of steak, eggs and coffee. We ate early so they could secure the watertight doors on the transport before we got into the transport area, about 11 miles out.

After that we lay around in our Mae Wests [life jackets], ready to go. Suddenly the ship stopped. It was 3:30 a. m. and pitch dark. We were there.

There wasn't a sound on the ship. Then the commands began coming over the loud speaker. We took to the small landing boats.

The sea was rough and the boats bounced against the ship's side, jumping up and down with the waves. I went down the cargo net.

Then the moon came up. It was about 4 a. m. H hour was five hours off. We couldn't see the island and the Japs couldn't see us until we were ready for them. Then we began to circle around the transport.

[In tomorrow's instalment Warrant Officer Leopold will tell of the naval bombardment which preceded the marine attack on Tarawa and of the holocaust that met the first wave of troops.]

Tarawa Photographer

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Frank Filan, breakfasting with daughter, Sheila, 3 years old.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 11 (AP).—Frank Filan came back from the Pacific wars today, saying little about the pictures he got but complaining loudly about the ones he lost thru destruction of his cameras in the landing at Tarawa.

Filan, the Associated Press photographer whose pictures of the Tarawa landing, made for the war time picture pool, have been termed among the best of the war, said he returned primarily to get some new equipment.

"The first two days I spent on Tarawa were the worst of my life," he said. "There I was, with a war going on all around my ears and not a thing to take a picture with."

The third day, Filan borrowed a camera from a coast guard photographer and with it took his Tarawa pictures.

He expects to spend a couple of weeks with his wife, Katie, and their 3 year old daughter, Sheila, leaving aagin shortly after Christmas.

TIRPITZ STILL IN NORWAY.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 12 (AP).—The 35,000 ton German battleship Tirpitz, damaged by British baby submarines in an attack several months ago, is still lying at anchor at Alta Fjord, Norway, with two old Norwegian armored cruisers nearby to serve as anti-aircraft ships, reports from Norway said today.

REDS CHECK NAZI DRIVE ON KIEV IN BIG TANK BATTLE

Wreck 103 Enemy Craft Along 40 Mile Front.

LONDON, Dec. 12 [Sunday]—(AP).—Russian troops, absorbing the power of massed German armor attacking west of Kiev, yesterday hurled the enemy back from momentary gains, wrecked 103 tanks in one of the greatest armored clashes of the war, and killed 1,500 Nazis, Moscow announced today.

In addition, as the soviet forces checked an apparent all-out Nazi effort to retake the Ukrainian capital, they wrecked 70 troop carriers and took many prisoners along the 40 mile front before Kiev.

The battle was centered on Malin, 55 miles northwest of Kiev on snow covered steppes that permitted the German tankmen to use the type of warfare they have made famous.

Two hundred miles to the southeast in the Dnieper bend, the Russians won 12 towns as they spread out along vital rail lines toward Kirovograd and Krivoi Rog.

Gain on Two Sides of Kirovograd.

Among the Dnieper bend towns won by the Russians was one 19 miles southeast of Kirovograd, fall of which marked an eight mile advance, and a railway station 17 miles northeast of their goal. On this front 1,300 Germans were slain.

But the most important fighting was in the Kiev sector, where the Russians still had avoided a major Nazi break-thru despite German claims of new advances.

Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press correspondent in Moscow, called the Kiev bulge conflict "one of the most serious battles of the war," exceeding even "the big tank battles on the Don steppe before Stalingrad."

The Germans have prepared for this drive for weeks and have 1,700 tanks in the battle.

"More German break-thrus may be expected as the Nazis have too much armament here," Gilmore said in a dispatch cleared by the Moscow censor.

The active front before Kiev ran from Malin, southeast to the vicinity of the rail junction of Fastov, 40 miles from Kiev.

The Moscow war report, recorded by the soviet monitor, told of the latest action in which the Russians "launched successful engagements against enemy tanks and infantry" in the Malin sector.

The Germans acknowledged they had evacuated Chigrin, midway between Cherkasi and Kremenchug, before the Russian drive westward in extension of the Kremenchug bridgehead. They also acknowledged the Russians of the Cherkasi bridgehead had broken into Cherkasi itself.

Red Attacks Continue.

Berlin added that the Russians were continuing their attacks west of Kremenchug "with strong forces."

The German war bulletin reported German and Rumanian troops had captured a dominating height at Kerch, on the eastern end of the Crimean peninsula, and frustrated new Russian attempts to land from the Caucasus.

CHINESE, AIDED BY U. S. PLANES, HIT AT HANKOW

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 11 (AP).—Stabbing straight for the heart of Japanese domination in central China, Chinese troops and American planes have hit at the great metropolitan area of Hankow in order to relieve pressure around Changteh, it was revealed today.

A bulletin said that Chinese troops had advanced within 30 miles of Wuchang, a large city across the Yangtze river from Hankow, and had caused much damage with their raiding activities, especially at Tutitang on the Hankow-Canton railroad.

U. S. Bombers Set Fires.

It was the first mention of any thrust against the Hankow sector and because of slow communications from that strongly held Japanese zone, the information announced today concerned the location of the Chinese force as of last Sunday night—four days before the Chinese recaptured Changteh to climax the bloody, six weeks' battle in the vicinity of Tungting lake.

A report from the 14th United States air force today said that Mitchell bombers had attacked both Hankow and Wuchang Thursday night, starting many fires.

Pursue Battered Foe.

Widespread successes were reported, particularly against enemy units west of Linli, 25 miles north of Changteh.

In western Hupeh, where the Chinese were attempting to close another possible avenue of enemy withdrawal, the Chinese troops were said to have made headway.

CHIEF OF POLICE ADMITS HE SET SERIES OF FIRES

Put Blame on Boy Judged Feeble Minded.

St. Joseph, Mich., Dec. 11 [Special].—Herbert H. Winkler, 70 years old, police chief of the near-by village of Coloma, was held here today on a charge of arson following his confession that he set a series of fires which he originally blamed on a 9 year old boy now confined to a training school.

Winkler said he started the fires for a thrill.

The boy, whom the chief wrongfully accused, is Jack Pappas, who was committed to the Coldwater Home and Training school as feeble minded by the probate court last summer. Authorities said Pappas was questioned by the police chief and that the chief said the boy confessed setting two of the fires which the chief now admits were started by himself.

Boy May Stay in School.

Winkler's confession probably will not result in the freeing of Pappas, Erwin Kubath, chief deputy sheriff of Berrien county, said. The commitment of Pappas as feeble minded took place after the boy had been examined by psychiatrists, Kubath said, and he will be held in the state school until his release is justified by his mental condition.

Five fires that Winkler has admitted starting caused losses totaling $125,000. All were in Coloma.

They were the Loma theater on April 26, 1943; the lumber yard of the Michigan Shore Lumber and Supply company on April 22, 1942; the cattle barns on the farm of Dr. T. C. Tiedebohl in the fall of 1941, and two fires at the Coloma Fruit Exchange during the last two years.

Confesses in Automobile.

Kubath said Winkler confessed to him last night in an automobile in which the two were returning from East Lansing where Winkler had been under questioning all day in connection with the fires.

Authorities had never been satisfied with Winkler's explanation that the Pappas boy set the fires, Kubath said, and took the police chief into custody yesterday morning after suspicion had been directed to him by an investigation conducted by Purlette Hinckley, arson specialist of the state police force.

Winkler successfully withstood a lie detector test at the East Lansing police headquarters, Kubath said. He will be arraigned Monday in justice court here.

She's First Again

[U. S. Navy Photo.]

JULIA B. ZELENKA.

Julia B. Zelenka, 7143 South Talman avenue, first women reservist to report for duty at Great Lakes, scored another first this week when she became a petty officer, first class. She is the only woman bluejacket to hold that rating at the United States naval training there.

Miss Zelenka was graduated from Lindblom High school in Chicago, and then, for two years, attended Crane Junior college. Prior to joining the navy, she worked as a secretary.

LIQUOR COMPANY WARNED BY OPA ON TIE-IN SALES

Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago area OPA director, said yesterday he had issued a warning notice to the Maryland Wine and Liquor company, 157 Madison street, in connection with the OPA ruling against tie-in sales. The complaint charged the firm required the Standard-Knapp corporation, 221 North La Salle street, to buy rum and brandy before it would fill an order for 13 bottles of blended whisky. Mulcahy also disclosed the issuance of a warning to Harry Newar, a butcher at 558 East 63d street, for two sales of turkeys Nov. 24 allegedly at prices above the OPA ceiling.

ARRAIGN 4 MEN SEIZED IN RAID ON $20,000 STILL

Four men seized Friday night by agents of the alcohol tax unit in a raid on an elaborate and well concealed still at 1315 Van Buren street were held in bonds of $2,000 on charges of operating a still and possession of alcohol upon which no tax had been paid when arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. The men pleaded not guilty and the hearing was set for next Thursday.

E. C. Yellowley, district supervisor of the federal agents, described the still as a recooker of 375 gallons capacity, designed to redistill "first run" alky and turn out 100 proof product.

The cooker, he said, was found in the basement and the vents and column ran up to the second floor, hidden behind partitions. He estimated the equipment cost $20,000.

The men seized as they left the building were identified as: Phil Colucci, 39 years old, 4817 Polk street; Joseph Maschiano, 34, of 1117 South Campbell avenue; Daniel Beneduce, 41, of 204 South California avenue, and Mike Greco, 32, of 1523 Flournoy street. Greco and Beneduce had been arrested before for similar violations, Yellowley said.

DUNNE TRACES DELINQUENCY TO BROKEN HOMES

Juvenile delinquency, Judge Robert Jerome Dunne of the Circuit court said yesterday, is attributable in large part to divorce—broken homes and the failure of parents in the education of children in faith and morals.

By indirection, the jurist indicated that war as the usual excuse for such delinquency was at least secondary, as he spoke as guest lecturer before the regular De Paul university class in moral problems of modern youth. He said the breakdown of responsibility for youth training has gone so far as often to change the contest for youth custody between parents to one of "who is to take them."

Judge Dunne declared that research has demonstrated that adult crime has its beginnings in juvenile delinquency.

POLES ABANDON SLAV CONGRESS RULED BY REDS

A meeting of 300 delegates of the American Slav congress from four states held to discuss methods of insuring greater amity among the 10 racial groups represented, broke up on a sour note yesterday.

Dr. Wencel F. Hetman of Chicago, secretary of the group and director of the congress, charged that the meeting, in the La Salle hotel, was taken over by the Communists, and that resolutions calling for a fourth term for President Roosevelt and condeming THE TRIBUNE were steamrollered thru. The latter resolution grew out of the printing by THE TRIBUNE of charges made by workers at the Studebaker plant that they were forced by the union to curtail production thru orders to "slow down." It was introduced by representatives of local 998 of the United Automobile Workers [CIO] at the plant.

As a result of the squabble, Dr. Hetman said, Polish delegations from Chicago and Milwaukee withdrew from the gathering, but indicated they would attend sessions this morning. A massmeeting has been scheduled for 2:30 this afternoon at Amalgamated auditorium, 333 South Ashland boulevard.

CHILD'S DEATH ACCIDENTAL.

A coroner's jury decided yesterday that the death of 13 month old Doris Putnam, 3235 West 53d street, was accidental. The baby died Friday in Woodlawn hospital of pneumonia which followed a scalding when the child upset a coffee pot on herself Dec. 9.

DROP IN OUTPUT FROM MACHINES CALLED 'SHAME'

Worker Pays Tribute to American Engineers.

W. Edward Bostelmann, winner of today's $50 in the prize letter contest for war workers, asserted it is "an everlasting shame" that war production should lag anywhere in this country in the face of America's engineering genius.

W. Edward Bostelmann.

"I didn't know anything about machines when I went into a war plant to make airplane engine parts," he said. "There are thousands of others like me—men who never touched a tool or a machine before, boys who never worked, girls right out of high school.

Novices Can't Go Wrong.

"Yet American engineering genius has created machines on which such workers can't go wrong. All that is necessary is to show them the operation and the machine does the rest. With such brains providing the means, there should be no letup, halt, or slowup in war production. The workers should be induced to do their part and management its part. Nothing should be allowed to go wrong or to interfere with that."

Bostelmann, 36 years old, lives with his wife, Juanita, and two daughters, Gail, 10, and Diane, 4, at 218 Willow road, Elmhurst. He is a partner in a soft drink plant and in order to help win the war is doing double duty.

Works from 11 A. M. Till Midnight.

Bostelmann goes to work in his own small west side plant at 11 a. m. every day. At 3 p. m. he drives to the Buick war plant, in a suburb west of the city, where he works from 4 p. m. to 12 midnight, operating a turret lathe.

Since Bostelmann will be an employe only for the duration of the war, he said, he has not joined local 6 of the United Automobile Workers [CIO] at the war plant. He has explained, he said, that as soon as the necessity for his war services is over he will resume full time work at his soft drink business; therefore he has not wished to go temporarily into a labor organization.

Winning War Work Letter No. 8

Nov. 26, 1943
218 Willow road,
Elmhurst, Ill.

War Workers Editor,
THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.
Dear Sir:

The first thing that I have to say is that the idea I am proposing would not work in peace time, nor would I propose it then, but this is war and I think both management and labor could suspend the peace time rules of this game of production for the duration. In other words, the law of supply and demand determines what either one has to stand for, or what they can get away with, and the abnormal demand of the war should not be the means of giving a group the opportunity to gain the upper hand.

I am part owner of a nonessential business, so I took a job in a defense plant, one of the largest in the Chicago area. I started in, filled with much patriotic zeal. I now know from war workers in many plants that leaders and instructors are past masters at the art of stalling, slowing down, and all other manner of job stretching and I am much disgusted. However, by observation and by talking to workers in my own and other plants, I believe that the majority would not be like that if they were properly appealed to and shown what their work really means in the war.

I have an idea that I am confident would result in much greater production. I outlined my idea to a representaive of the management. He said that it sounded very logical, but he didn't think the union would stand for it. When I approached another, he said management would not stand for it, so now I'll see what THE TRIBUNE thinks of it.

Practically all operations have a definite rate of production per hour, set by time study of the operation. Anyone producing more than the "rate" is looked down on and ridiculed by fellow workers because continuous overproduction will boost the "rate," making it hard for some to meet it. The "rate" is an average, taking into consideration changing of tools and minor troubles, so that some days, when an operator runs into a lot of trouble, it may be very hard to meet his "rate." On other days, everything "clicks" right, and an operator can make his "rate" an hour and a half to two hours before quitting time.

This remaining time is then spent in "horsing around," stalling, cleaning the machine, or down in the wash room. It is this wasted time that could be used for greatly increased production.

My suggestion is to ask management to set all "rates" at their present levels for the duration so that no overproduction by individuals would boost these "rates." Then ask the unions for no interference in a general appeal to all workers to produce all that they can for the duration, a little extra keyed up effort.

The unions allow workers to be asked for money for the Red Cross, War Fund, and other charities, so I see no reason why they shouldn't allow them to be asked for just a little more effort to speed victory.

All of us fear ridicule. This fear of ridicule for overproduction must be removed. If it were possible to make it appear as ridiculous to stall as it now does to overproduce, I think the results would be amazing. The American worker can be asked to do much that he would balk at like a mule if forced.

The appeal for a little extra effort can touch almost every one. There are very few men working in war plants that don't have some one close to them in the fighting forces. The women should be more touched by this appeal because so many have a son, brother, husband or sweetheart that they are anxious to have home again.

We've got the axis on the run, so let's not lay down until they're completely licked, then let the hot stove leaguers and the barber shop theorists argue about who did the most for the war—who made the biggest mistakes, and who got the most out of it.

Yours for a speedy victory,
W. T. BOSTELMANN,
Buick Motor, 0424-140.

TRAIN STALLED ON NORTH SIDE 'L' FOR 2 HOURS

Loop bound elevated traffic on the north side was disrupted yesterday when a six car Jackson Park express stalled for nearly two hours at 7:40 a. m. at the Granville avenue station.

Some passengers on the crowded platforms from Granville avenue to Lawrence avenue rode north bound trains to the Loyola station, where express trains, which run on a separate track, were available.

Others found taxicabs or crowded onto packed motor coaches. Thousands were unable to find any transportation downtown, and crowded into telephone booths to inform their employers of the delay.

Cutback in Production for 1944 Indicated.

Plan Food Disposal

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 [Special].—The war food administration has been working with representatives of industry on a program to prevent the dumping of the government's huge food supply on the market should peace come unexpectedly, it was learned today. Officials of the food distribution administration, a WFA agency, said the problem is to work out means for coördinated disposal and orderly distribution thru normal trade channels of stocks set aside for the army and navy and the foreign economic administration, and of surplus supplies already in their possession. One proposal contemplates legislation for the establishment of an organization to liquidate food surpluses and arrange for their disposal.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—A cutback in cargo ship production for 1944 appeared in store tonight as the maritime commission ordered all shipyards to close down every Sunday starting Jan. 1.

A commission spokesman, confirming the shutdown order, said the Sunday holidays were intended mainly to give a regular day of rest to shipyard workers who have put in millions of overtime hours in achieving the present five-ships-a-day production pace.

However, since most major yards now are working on a seven day, 24 hour schedule, it was evident workless Sundays would cut next year's production well below the present rate of 20 million deadweight tons a year.

Situation "A Lot Easier."

This was tacitly acknowledged in the spokesman's assertion that the "ship situation is a lot easier," thereby making the Sunday holiday possible.

However, high commission officials were not immediately available for comment on whether the order meant an actual decline in tonnage or whether the commission intended to make up the loss by other means.

The action also would cut considerably the government's financial outlay for cargo ships, for Sunday work is paid at overtime rates under zone wage stabilization agreements.

The 1944 goal originally was fixed in August at more than 20 million deadweight tons, compared with this year's schedule of 18,890,000 tons. The larger figure was approved by the joint chiefs of staff.

Some officials predicted at the time, however, that so large a 1944 program—itself equal to the entire United States merchant marine on Jan. 1, 1941—would not be necessary from the military standpoint and that cutbacks would occur early next year.

If Sunday is as productive a working day as the week's other six, the action would mean a drop of more than 2½ million tons under the present production rate.

No Effect on Landing Craft.

There was no indication, however, that the action affected landing craft, some of which are being produced in maritime commission yards. All types of invasion craft are being rushed to completion in a vast program to build 80,000 landing vessels in a few months, under an overriding priority which gives them precedence over any other item in the munitions program.

Whether the order applied to merchant yards producing other types of military craft was not known, however. Besides tank-landing craft, commission yards are producing escort aircraft carriers, troop transports, and the small, speedy frigate, which is an anti-submarine vessel intended for escort duty.

The effective date of the order means it will not interfere with attainment of the 1943 production goal.

HOW INFANTRY TUNES EYES AND EARS TO JUNGLE

BY ALEX SMALL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ON THE INDIAN FRONT, Dec. 1 [Delayed]. — In the jungles of Assam and Burma, where troops can hide with ease from enemy scout planes, infantry patrols are the eyes and ears of opposing armies. To learn how the allies are preparing for their march against Japan I joined a patrol of eight men in their intensive jungle training.

The corporal, who was leader of this patrol section, had received a compass bearing with a magnetic variation from the starting point. He had a pencil and a scrap of paper marked off in squares and could fix any point he wanted on it as a start but had to chart thereafter with reference to it such things as obstacles, paths, forks, and signs of the enemy.

Knew Their Maps.

All these men already had been trained in general soldiering as well as ordinary map and compass reading and before the start the corporal designated one man as scout. He went ahead carrying a big cleaver — a machete, if you will — and cut a passage thru which the others followed single file.

Another man was designated as pace courier. In this case, where the ground was relatively clear, a count of 140 paces to 100 yards was decided upon.

It seemed to me we made an unholy racket mostly on account of the abundance of unavoidable dead wood underfoot, but this was not true. Nevertheless, to avoid the noise of talking and even whispers, all directions and orders were given by gesture. An officer was following us to check on the patrol's work.

Not Too Good.

We reached our destination and found we had not made a brilliant job of it. We had missed, for instance, one new and wide logging road—for much teak is taken out of this region—which was marked on regular maps, tho it made a fork with a marked road.

At every conference which follows patrol training, it is emphasized how vital accuracy is in scouting. Incomplete, inexact, or incorrect reports may throw out of line all the calculations of a battalion or divisional information officer.

After a patrol has had a little experience, it is not accompanied by an officer and must learn by its own mistakes. During my stay at this battalion camp, one patrol lost its way and was missing three hours without food. Strange as it may seem, amid so much rank vegetation it is difficult to find anything to eat. The jungle is about the last place an army may expect to live off the country. Of course, there are berries or shoots which won't kill a human being or make him violently ill, but persons who know how to choose them are rare.

Water Can't Be Trusted.

No pools or springs in the jungle, no matter how crystal clear, can be trusted. All drinking water must be boiled or, if that is not possible, chlorinated with the tablets every soldier is supposed to carry.

A platoon of Indian soldiers I once met out on an extensive patrol operation tried to live off the country. Using spices they had brought along, they made curry with bamboo shoots. It had the consistency of heavy thread—something like the wrong end of large and coarse asparagus. Its nutritive value was probably small, also, but it did ease the gnawings of a hungry stomach.

ARMY ABANDONS ITS SPECIALIZED TRAINING COURSE

Liquidation Comes After Bitter War Dept. Row.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—The army specialized training program, under which some 140,000 young men are being trained as specialists in 222 colleges and universities, is to be gradually liquidated, it was learned today.

The decision came after a bitter quarrel in the war department. The issue was carried all the way to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

War department reports have it that the conflict between opponents and supporters of the ASTP a few weeks ago almost passed from the stage of argument into the stage of fisticuffs.

Immediate Shutdown Sought.

At present supporters of ASTP grudgingly acknowledge defeat but are fighting vigorously for gradual liquidation of the unit as against an immediate shutdown. The general staff, which never was warm to ASTP, would like an immediate shutdown and a switch of the 150,000 men in specialized training to the army.

The root of the conflict lies in the surplus of officers. The officer strength of the army has skyrocketed from 93,000 in 1941 to 650,000 as of Dec. 1, 1943.

Candidate Schools Curbed.

After Pearl Harbor the army worked feverishly to increase its officer personnel. Men were commissioned from civilian life, officer candidate schools were expanded tremendously and the ASTP was initiated for the purposes of training officer material.

The result was the army found itself with a surplus of officers. The first step was to cut officer candidate schools and their enrollment.

The surplus continued, altho it became increasingly difficult to secure a commission. The return of 25,000 officers to civilian life was ordered. At about the same time the general staff lighted on the ASTP in looking about for other places where cuts might be made.

In the general staff it was felt that the cutting of ASTP would reduce the draft of fathers by 150,000. When the general staff advanced this program, supporters of ASTP rallied to the organization's defense.

SAYS MARSHALL READYING STAFF AS ALLIED CHIEF

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—The Army and Navy Journal said today the recent appointment of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord as provost marshal for the European theater "may be taken as the first public indication that Gen. George C. Marshall is beginning the setup" of his staff as allied commander in that theater.

The unofficial service publication said that Reckord, recently commander of the 3d service command, "apparently is Gen. Marshall's personal selection for the European post."

The Journal noted that "Gen. Reckord announced his orders for overseas duty came to him in a personal note from the chief of staff." Reckord succeeds Brig. Gen. Gordon C. Hollar.

WILLIAMS CALLS EGAN 'A LIAR' IN MURDER TRIAL

Fate of Three May Go to Jury Tomorrow.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

Denials came rapidly yesterday from the lips of John J. Williams, 29 year old gambling house boss, in the trial over the murder of Martin [Sonny Boy] Quirk, gambling syndicate agent.

Williams denied almost everything James Egan, his former employe, had said about the Quirk murder. He was staking his testimony against Egan's, and his fate and that of Anthony De Lordo and John Enright may hinge on whom the jury of nine women and three men believes: Egan or Williams.

Williams, Enright, and De Lordo are on trial before Judge Harold G. Ward in the Criminal court. Egan had accused all three—and himself—and the state had concluded its case against the three Friday night.

Makes Denials for All.

Williams, it was admitted privately by Attorneys James M. Burke and Emmett Moynihan, who represent the three, had to do the denying for all three. De Lordo and Enright are both ex-convicts and in the opinion of their attorneys it would not be wise for them to testify in their own behalf, Burke said. A particular reason for this opinion was that De Lordo once confessed to State's Atty. Thomas J. Courtney that he helped kill Quirk, the lawyer explained.

The boss gambler told of owning two big automobiles and a stable of six racing horses with his handbook business at 3227 West 63d street, his interest in a tavern and an interest in a nightime gambling resort. De Lordo, he said, was his chauffeur and handyman in the gambling houses; Enright, he said, he barely knew as an employe of the man who had the dice concessions in his casinos.

Egan, Williams said, was a liar, thief, gunman, drunkard, troublemaker, and holdup man. A dozen witnesses called in his behalf said Williams was a peaceful citizen and some of them said they wouldn't believe Egan under oath.

May Rule Tomorrow Night.

If no other witnesses are called tomorrow—and the lawyers said they didn't believe there would be—the lawyers will then make their closing arguments and a verdict may be obtained tomorrow night.

"Johnny, keep your voice up," Atty. Burke said as Williams took his seat between Judge Ward and the jury. Williams was dressed in a dark suit, with a dark blue silk shirt, and a natty necktie showing. It was the fourth suit he had worn in four days on the trial.

Williams said he was born in Chicago and had gone as far as the second year in high school before he started working. Then he got a few jobs as office boy and after a time was a fireman for the board of education, then timekeeper for the city street department. Burke continued the questioning:

Q.—What did you do next?

Employed in a Handbook.

A.—I worked in a handbook for three or four years, then started in business for myself.

Q.—Did you own a tavern? A.—Yes, I bought the Boulevard Tavern at 55th and California avenue and later changed its name to the Miami Lounge. Harry Roberts was my partner.

The defendant then told of other addresses at which he had gambling houses. He said he didn't own the tavern known as the Oak Lounge, at 3219 West 63d street, but received 75 per cent of its profit in repayment of a loan he made to Walter Knapp, the proprietor.

Williams denied any friendship with James Fawcett, Robert Bock, Jerry Johnckneere, and Ray Deskovitch, who have been accused by Egan of being involved in the Quirk murder plot but who have not been arrested. He said he had never been "properly introduced" to Fawcett, the man said by Egan to have induced Williams to plot the Quirk murder. But at the race track Fawcett asked him for tips, he said.

Q.—Did Fawcett ever tell you that Martin Quirk was going to try to muscle you out of your handbooks? A.—No.

Q.—Did any one ever tell you that? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any reason to kill Martin Quirk? A.—No.

Q.—Did you kill Martin Quirk or conspire with any one to kill him? A.—No.

On direct examination Williams gave instances but not names involving acts of violence he charged against Egan, one being the beating of a woman in a barroom.

Tells of Loan to Egan.

He told of the $700 Egan got from him on Aug. 14 as follows:

"The door of the safe was open and I was open and I was kneeling to take out some money. There was about $1,200 in the safe. He said he wanted to borrow $700 and I said his reputation for paying back wasn't good.

"He said to me, 'Quit crying and hand it over.' He always packed a .45. I gave him the $700, but not willingly. A few days later he handed me back $400 and said, "Quit moaning,' and he added that he just made a score [a holdup]."

First Assistant State's Atty. Wilbert F. Crowley cross-examined Williams on the subject:

Q.—You took the $400, even tho you thought he had obtained it in a robbery? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have much trouble with Egan? A.—Yes, he was always getting drunk and making trouble.

Q.—Did you ever fire him? A.—No.

Williams' last words to the jury were: "Egan is a liar."

Routs Assailant

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Louise Paris and "Penny." Dog is looking thru coat ripped by attacker.

Putting up a desperate fight, Mrs. Louise Paris, 32 years old, 4130 Kenmore avenue, yesterday routed a Negro who seized her in an areaway near her home. Her husband is in the military service, and she is an employe of the war labor board. The man grabbed her around the throat, then tried to cover her eyes with one hand. Mrs. Paris screamed, and he struck her in the mouth. Then he tried to drag her thru the areaway, but she locked her legs around a fence post. The Negro finally gave up, and fled with her purse, containing $2.

IN A PERSIAN GARDEN.

Mr. Roosevelt's meeting with Mr. Stalin may be regarded as rounding out the careers of both statesmen. Mr. Roosevelt has left nothing for any other imaginative American President to do. He has dissipated any dream life any of his possible successors might have had. When he relinquishes his tenancy in the White House, or is handed a canceled lease, the book of the new Arabian Nights will be closed. The magic carpet will get its exercise from the vacuum cleaner. Mr. Roosevelt's successors will be confined to the simple life of trusteeship and responsibility, enlivened, according to taste, by dedicatory or memorial speeches, a few quarrels with congress, and possibly an occasional poker game.

Mr. Roosevelt has been the cousin of kings, queens, and crown princesses. He has fed some of them hot dogs and filled their mugs with beer. Winston Churchill knows him as the boss. He also knows him as the great almoner with fabulous treasures within his reach. Such a boss Winston should have. Mr. Roosevelt has almost, but not quite, exhausted his own possibilities. He still may be able to ride in a chariot thru the streets of Berlin or receive the submission of Hirohito at the shrine of the Son of Heaven's ancestors.

An intimate picture taken in the shade of the pyramids shows our chief executive chatting with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, with Mr. Churchill engaging the smiles of the general's wife. She attended the Cairo conferences, it was reported, to act as interpreter for her husband. The picture is worth noting as indicating that our versatile commander in chief must have picked up some pidgin English or Chiang has laid hold of some basic English. The pyramids, having seen everything, gave no sign of astonishment.

It has been remarked that Mr. Stalin has a Mona Lisa smile. He also has the appearance of a country gentleman watching the stock fatten. Mr. Roosevelt's desire to meet the interesting Georgian, the former Marxist revolutionary terrorist and now the commander in chief of the hardest fighting armies in the world, was consuming. It had to be satisfied, and indeed Stalin owed it to him. Our President has been Mr. Stalin's most consistent foreign public. He remained a fan when the Russian purges caused a cooling off in the warmest fellow traveler circles here. Moreover, Mr. Stalin must have had some curiosity himself. He could understand Mr. Churchill, who is himself a subdivider. But Mr. Roosevelt is the head of what Stalin, if he recalls anything of his early indoctrination, would recognize as a plutocratic, bourgeois state dressed up in democratic garments.

Such a state, according to the dialectic, is by this time as dead as the dodo. Maybe it is, or maybe Stalin has changed his mind. The Georgian is now in the third stage of his development. The first was when he played a minor part in the Communist cells of the pre-Lenin period and with some of his associates was betrayed by one of the curious dual personalities fostered by proletarian revolution. He became a figure in the revolution, altho distrusted by Lenin for certain characteristics he later revealed to his old bolshevist revolutionary comrades in the state trials which cost them their lives.

Stalin's second phase culminated in these trials by which he rid Russia of all party dissent and dissenters, killed all the various wingers on their own confessions, and made Russia a dictatorship and not a debate. Now he has ripened into a cosmopolite. He is no longer a dark conspiratorial figure in the Kremlin. He has emerged. He is around clinking champagne glasses with the imperialists and the bourgeoisie, a bon vivant and jolly fellow who likes to throw large parties. Imagine Lenin or Trotsky doing that.

Mr. Roosevelt met him in Persia. That was worth patience and perseverance. What better place for the romance? Mr. Churchill is of the Kipling vintage. In Teheran he may occasionally have thought in this gateway to India of the bear that walks like a man. Mr. Stalin kept his Mona Lisa smile. If he has picked up any American English he may have said to Mr. Roosevelt: "So long, chum, I'll be seein' yu." And he probably will be.

THE OUTWORN FCC.

The federal communications commission was described at a recent session of a house investigating committee in Washington as a haven for draft dodgers.

One employe reported that it took all of his persuasive power to keep the commission from obtaining a draft deferment for him, despite the fact that he was a 4-F, judged unfit for military service because of physical defects.

This employe told also how the FCC engaged in needless duplication of radio intelligence work already done by the coast guard. He said that he was told the commission wanted its employes to appear busy so that it might secure larger appropriations from congress and so that the employes would not have to go into the army.

As far as made work is concerned, there is little difference between FCC and the defunct WPA except in the size of the projects. From its legitimate task of policing of the airlanes, FCC has turned to censorship, political activities, radio spy work, regimentation of broadcasters, and sociological readjustment of the ownership of radio stations and communications facilities.

None of these jobs was delegated to it by congress, and all of them were undertaken as the result of New Deal conniving. When the FCC asks for more money, it is to pursue these New Deal objectives and not to keep order in the broadcasting industry.

In fact, whatever need there may have been for the FCC is disappearing. The radio industry, one of the most progressive in America, is cutting the ground from under the commission. Frequency modulation was in operation before the war, and when peace comes and the industry is able to resume FM development congress will be able to junk the FCC and end its expensive political and sociological experiments.

FCC came into being because there are only a limited number of transmission channels available to regular broadcasters and to communications stations, and they must be made to share them without interference. When frequency modulation comes into its own, the number of broadcasting channels will be almost unlimited and the possibility of interference between stations will be remote. Licensing will not be needed. An FM broadcaster can have a full property right, not only to his physical properties, but to his channel as well, and there will be more than enough of the latter to go around.

The FM broadcasters can be regulated as far as their programs and operating technique are concerned by the same laws that govern the publication of newspapers and magazines. It costs much less to build and operate a frequency modulation station than it does to build and maintain a similar station of the type now in general use. The fidelity of the broadcasting is so much greater that frequency modulation appears certain to supplant the regular broadcasting of today in most parts of the country.

The few commercial transmission systems that retain their original broadcasting equipment for distance-covering purposes can be regulated adequately by the interstate commerce commission, which has a much more savory reputation for impartiality and efficiency than the FCC and is too busy maintaining that reputation to embark on New Deal social reforms.

With its only excuse for existence erased by the progress of the industry it was set up to regulate, the FCC can sink back into oblivion alongside its New Deal counterpart, the WPA.

WHAT A PAL!

James F. Byrnes, war mobilization director, in his speech over the radio Tuesday night declared that failure to halt the rise in the cost of living would work a great hardship upon people with fixed incomes. He said that the plight of white collar workers, unable to make organized appeals for raises, would be serious. He pointed out that the dollars payable under insurance policies would be insufficient to provide the protection sought when the policies were bought.

All true. But look who is talking. Jimmie Byrnes has been a prominent member of the New Deal family from the very beginning. And the New Deal from 1933 onward did everything possible to ruin precisely the people in whom it now professes to be interested.

Let's mention a few of the steps taken. The New Deal cut the gold content of our money. It reduced by 41 per cent the gold back of each dollar. The object was to boost prices to the 1926 level. When the purchasing power of the dollar had been reduced to the desired point, Mr. Roosevelt said in a well remembered address that it would be stabilized there even into the next generation. In other words, having robbed the man of fixed income of much of his purchasing power, the government would see to it that he never got the lost purchasing power back.

The New Deal killed millions of pigs and hundreds of thousands of sows, and destroyed the meat. The New Deal plowed up fields of growing cotton. The New Deal paid farmers to refrain from growing many crops. It dumped large quantities of food and other farm produce abroad. The objective in all this was a transfer of purchasing power from the white collar workers and the people with definitely determined incomes to the groups which the New Deal found it profitable then to subsidize.

The New Deal severely cut the number of hours worked in a week, while requiring the same wages to be paid. For overtime, it required pay at penalty rates. The effect of this was to increase costs of production and therefore the selling prices of manufactured products. Those with flexible incomes or who were able to use their economic power to obtain increases approved. But persons not in a position to obtain increases in their remuneration and those relying upon the proceeds of life insurance policies were hurt again.

The New Deal's discrimination against fixed incomes and white collar workers, was carried over to the war period. Instead of freezing all incomes so that all might be treated alike in war time, the New Deal provided an escalator in the so-called Little Steel formula by which pay raises could be automatically obtained by groups already favored. Moreover, it failed to differentiate between the incomes of those who have profited from the war and those who have not. While corporations were taxed at steeply higher rates if their incomes increased during the war, individuals whose incomes have not advanced during the war have been taxed at the same rates as those whose incomes have doubled or trebled.

The New Deal now professes devotion for the groups which it has plundered mercilessly for 10 years. Those who are now wooed will be aware of the fact that the New Deal showed no sympathetic interest in them until it had lost the support of the farmers. And they will be suspicious of their new champion who now seeks authority to pay out huge subsidies in an election year. They will not forget that the New Deal has been using subsidies for 10 years to keep itself in power.

As to whisky, it is figured there is enough of the stuff around for five years. Or 10, if it continues to be served in the double bottomed glass, as an optical illusion.—Detroit News.

PUERTO RICO LOOKS AHEAD

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP).—Congress has under consideration a set of reforms for the organic act of Puerto Rico designed to give this Caribbean possession a larger share of self-government, long sought by the island's political leadership.

Persons here look on the plan as the first real test of the Atlantic Charter principles, and would have the world believe that action on them will establish a precedent for post-war treatment of colonies and possessions of the larger powers.

Perhaps they stretch a point here, for the term, colonial system, so frequently used by island politicos to describe the relationship between Puerto Rico and the United States, is an exaggeration. Puerto Rico is more than a mere colony, but there are aspects of outright colonialism.

In four decades under the American flag the people have bordered closely on the neither fish-nor-fowl classification. They are American citizens, yet they cannot vote for President. They elect their legislature, but this has frequently been nullified by continental governors who enjoy negative powers.

They can grow and manufacture things, but are limited in trading with other nations by the coastwise shipping law. Production is controled directly by the continental market.

They have been in the position of asking congress repeatedly for economic assistance. Left out of the sphere of the good neighbor policy, they have watched with some resentment while other Latin American governments have obtained concessions which Puerto Rico has not achieved by begging.

They complain that they have been under a powerful nation which until recently has shown little interest in their social and economic problems and no comprehension of their political aspirations.

On the other hand, they freely admit great benefits under American control. Public health work has cut disease and death rates, and better schools, public buildings, roads, sanitation, and hospitals are all in evidence. These have lifted Puerto Rico's economic status considerably above that of other Caribbean islands, but have done little to satisfy the longing of a politically-adult people which, in Latin Americans, displays itself with an intensity incomprehensible to most continentals.

The reforms—forwarded to congress by President Roosevelt in the same form in which they were prepared by a joint committee of Puerto Ricans last summer—ameliorate the harsher aspects of the old organic act by giving the people the right to elect their own governor who, in turn, will appoint the Supreme court, the commissioner of education, and the auditor, jobs now filled by Presidential appointment.

A provision for a federal high commissioner, attacked strongly by some senators as creating a new super-governor, may fall by the wayside. Puerto Rico would be happy if it did.

The reform program theoretically makes it possible for Puerto Rico to [1] become independent, [2] become a state, [3] wind up in a dominion-like status.

Sen. Millard Tydings [D., Md.], pioneer in the Philippine independence movement, would offer Puerto Rico independence. He has support here which is more formidable than vociferous. Sen. William Langer [R., N. D.] would offer statehood. He has support which is both formidable and vociferous.

The people know full well that the United States will not vacate vast military establishments which make this island the bristling outpost of Panama canal defenses. They would not have it otherwise, for they recognize their strategic importance and relations with the army and navy have been exceptionally good.

But they want to be allowed to govern the remainder of their island in their own way while they work out a permanent political status which will be satisfactory to a clear cut majority of the people.

If Puerto Rico is chalked off the federal relief roll and has to pay its own way, rum may foot the bill. Sugar will still be king, but molasses will find its way into rum instead of such uninteresting products as cattle feed.

The island's vision of a new prosperity from the beverage depends upon several variables: The amount of molasses left after satisfying industrial alcohol demands; the availability of shipping and bottles, and, above all, the continuation of the organic act—giving permission to sell rum on the continent without quota limitations while receiving the benefit of excise taxes collected there.

As shipping has improved and as the stocks of other liquors on the continent have dwindled, the flow of rum to parched American throats has doubled and trebled. Money has poured into the island, and excise taxes have fattened the treasury, thus helping to alleviate the sharp dislocations which Puerto Rico—cut off from the world by submarines and bereft of booming war industries—underwent after the outbreak of the fighting.

When the federal works agency's $25,000,000 two year program, successor to the defunct WPA, was introduced in congress about two months ago, most insular quarters were confident it would be passed. They were disappointed when it met a cool reception from the house insular affairs committee.

But they were stunned when Rep. W. Sterling Cole [R., N. Y.] offered his amendment, which would take 50 per cent of the rum excise taxes to finance the United States government's share of the relief program.

The outcry was as swift as it was unanimous, for Puerto Rico, rightly or not, has come to consider the excise taxes as a "right," not as a "bounty," as some congressmen termed it. Puerto Rico saw the loss of about $9,000,000 this year—approximately 10 per cent of the estimated insular government revenue for the present fiscal year—and $15,000,000 next year.

The action of the rules committee Nov. 22 in shelving the rum proposal by declining to hear Rep. C. J. Bell [D., Mo.], chairman of the insular affairs committee, apparently means that the FWA relief measure, to which it was attached, is also blocked indefinitely.

Puerto Rico is gloomy about the prospect of losing the relief funds, but happy the Cole amendment is dying, too. They feel that if those taxes are to be used by the federal government for its share of the relief program here, it would be better to leave them in the hands of the insular government and let the island run its own relief program.

But new worries have cropped up in the talk of a quota on rum to conserve the molasses stockpile for the United States industrial alcohol program.

Puerto Rico does not want to appear to be holding back the winning of the war. But, faced with the loss of federal aid, which has averaged about $30,000,000 a year for the last decade, Puerto Rico feels it should be allowed to manufacture as much rum as it can. That would not require more than half of the island's molasses, government sources say, and would be a tiny part of the more than 300,000,000 gallons reportedly available in the Caribbean area for industrial alcohol.

These totals for federal rum excise taxes returned to the island show how the rum export business has boomed: 1935-'36, $359,706; 1936-'37, $940,814; 1937-'38, $1,405,898; 1938-'39, $1,634,338; 1939-'40, $2,762,601; 1940-'41, $4,552,226; 1941-'42, $13,902,811; 1942-'43, $13,831,701. Estimated for 1943-'44, a minimum of $30,000,000. The month of August hit $5,292,273—a rate which will not hold but which is indicative.

If there are no limitations on production and exports, and if, as has been rumored, the United States excise tax is jumped from $6 to $9 a gallon, the total could easily soar past $30,000,000 for 1943-'44, still higher in future years.

THE ENDOCRINE GLANDS—A CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM.

WE think of the heart as the engine of the body, the lungs as the bellows furnishing oxygen to the tissues, and the circulation as the transportation route for nutriment. All of these services are automatic. The heart goes blithely on its way, responding to extra effort by beating more rapidly. When we run we pant, in an attempt to obtain more vital gas.

But these functions are subject to direction. The nervous system is in command but, back of this, there are certain chemicals produced by relatively small bits of tissue without which we could not carry on. We call these factories "endocrine glands" and we are just beginning to unlock many of their mysteries. They determine personality, govern and limit energy, and exert such a profound mastery over well being that they are indispensable. They pour their secretions directly into the blood stream and not into the digestive tract.

While they work independently, they all appear to be related. In other words, if one goes out of commission, others may do likewise. They are just as important as the brain and the nervous system because they regulate growth, nutrition, sex, and the behavior of the involuntary muscles.

What are some of these structures and what do we know about them? The pituitary hangs down from the base of the brain and is divided into three distinct parts, each of which has a different job to do. Complete extirpation is followed by death. First metabolism drops, mental stupor comes on, and a fatal outcome proceeds apace. If the front segment is overactive, the individual may reach an extraordinary stature—7, 8, or 9 feet. The middle lobe helps to control blood pressure and both the middle and back fractions can be removed without unfavorable results.

The thyroid is another of these endocrines and we understand how it can poison the tissues when it gets out of hand. When this organ enlarges it is called "goiter." If it is wholly inactive, the child fails to develop and thus we find peculiar dwarfs—cretins. If it is merely indolent, myxedema may ensue—with gain in weight, loss of expression, a grossly thickened skin, and some dulling of mentality.

Near the thyroid and adjacent thereto lie the parathyroids which influence the percentage of calcium in the blood. If these glands fail to perform, the amount of this mineral may reach a low level with the onset of tetany. In this condition, the muscles tremble constantly.

The adrenals are located above the kidneys. Here, again, two parts are recognized, the outer and inner portions. It is the inner cells which pour adrenalin into the blood in an emergency. They respond to the presence of danger or whenever an alarm demands that all the powers of the body shall be summoned for immediate use. In consequence, the pressure rises within the blood vessels, the heart rate increases, and the sweat glands become stimulated. In the meantime, digestion ceases altho the liver pours out a huge supply of reserve energy.

As our knowledge grows, we will be able to compensate for injury to these depots by prescribing their secretions from animal sources. But even these refined extracts will not constitute the fountain of youth. Their distribution will depend upon the integrity of the circulation.

One that is on the loose. Infection may be followed by inflammation. In consequence, a single hair may be lost. If the follicle heals over, when the new growth starts it may curl up, forming a tiny tumor. In another condition [entropion], the lid turns inward. Lashes may then scratch the eyeball.

HAIL ACAPULCO!

ACAPULCO, Mexico, Nov. 28.—I have been a globe trotter for 20 years and having visited 47 foreign countries, colonies, and islands. I have kept my eyes open for a garden of Eden, paradise, or utopia in which to spend the rest of my days. My first choice was Tahiti in the South seas but due to the war you cannot book passage there. My second choice is where I am now, Acapulco, Mexico. There is bright sunshine all day, every day. Altho it is not hot enough to make one perspire it is warm enough to go barefooted, wear tennis shorts or a sarong, and go bathing in the ocean every day in the year.

I am writing this on the veranda of my hotel which has neither screens, doors, nor walls. From where I sit I can see the bright colored umbrellas and people bathing along the beach; yachts and schooners anchored in the bay, and in the distance majestic mountains towering to a great height.

At night I move my cot out and sleep with the stars for a covering. It is a delightful sensation to feel the cool, soft tropical breeze blow on your body as moon beams dance thru the swaying coconut palms.

The rate for room and three meals is six pesos a day, $1.25 in United States money.

For amusement there is deep sea fishing that cannot be surpassed. You can buy cigarets of good quality for 3 cents a pack; a large glass of freshly squeezed orange juice, 5 cents; bananas, 1 cent each; small fish, 1 cent and 2 cents, and ride into Acapulco on the bus for 3 cents. BRENT ALFORD.

A SCOT SECESSIONIST.

IBROX, Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 28.—In the early summer THE TRIBUNE made some reference to Scotland becoming linked up with the United States, which created a great deal of interest over here. You are no doubt aware that there is a strong desire among the Scots people to return to their previous status as an independent nation. Ten years ago Lord Beaverbrook thru his newspaper, the Daily Express, took a plebiscite on the question of self-government for Scotland. The voting was open to all Scotland and the result revealed that 97 per cent of all the voting was in favor of self-government and only 3 per cent against. In the words of the Express, "opposition was practically nonexistent." The treaty of union between Scotland and England was never a success and, moreover, England never honored it by observing its commitments.

Scotland is a preponderantly democratic country. England is not. Your soldiers in Scotland tell us the Scots and English people are totally different. We have a Scottish National party fighting for our independence.

Owing to the severity of the censorship over here it is difficult to know whether this letter will reach you, and if it does I shall be very pleased indeed if you would kindly acknowledge safe receipt.

GEORGE MACL. GRANT.

REFERRED TO CONGRESSMAN RANKIN.

New York, Nov. 28.—Isn't it about time to abandon this humbug and hypocrisy about British "democracy"?

A newspaper prints a photo of Gen. Smuts with the caption: "A Warrior for Democracy." Let's see. The Union of South Africa, a British dominion, has a population of about 4,000,000, of whom about 3,000,000 are Negroes. Of these three million virtually none are allowed to vote. The country is governed by the whites. These conditions are well known to our editors who prate of "British democracy"!

XENOPHON P. MCBUNKLIN.

"CALL IN THE ARMY."

Niles, Ill., Nov. 20.—In my opinion the only way to increase efficiency and production in the Chicagoland war plants is to call the boss in. In this case the boss is either the army or the navy. They are directly responsible for ordering the war materials; they are responsible for paying for these materials; it is then their duty and their right to see that they get them, or why they are not getting them.

WAR WORKER.

THE TRIBUNE IN ENGLAND.

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Nov. 15.—My buddies and myself want to extend our thanks for sending THE TRIBUNE to us daily. It is read and reread dozens of times.

CORP. EARL F. OESTERREICH,
Formerly employed at The Tribune Roto plant.

"TEMPORARY" PAY ROLLERS.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Why is it that the city does not put the men to work that are on the civil service list for elevator operators? There are about eight openings that are being filled by 60 day men. ROBT. M.

OUR FIRST WAR FOR BRITAIN.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 27.—A correspondent, in today's Voice of the People denies that we fought for Britain in the World war, and cites the submarine. All these arguments fail because they are not fundamental, but relate to events of 1915 and after. Actually Mr. Wilson took sides almost at once. In August, 1914 the British began seizing American vessels carrying food to Bremen and Hamburg, which ports were not blockaded.

They justified this illegal action by a fantastic contraband list that included, for example, wheat and flour. Our state department merely protested, but Sen. Hitchcock offered a resolution to embargo munitions unless Britain chose to see the light. Administration pressure killed this resolution in December, 1914, and thereafter the fat was in the fire. The barbarity of the submarine is an entirely separate consideration. Germany might have used it anyway, but we can't prove it. The whole story is told in THE TRIBUNE of Sept. 20, 1939. It is noteworthy that Grey admits in his memoirs that he would, under pressure, have relaxed his contraband list. J. H. O'HARA.

HIGH SCHOOL WORKERS.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—As a high school student I have reached a state of mind in which I hope to clarify some facts with some badly informed adult critics. To those adults who believe we, the younger set, waste our spare time, I wish to give as evidence the following facts. The persons involved are my classmates, who are between 16 and 18 years of age and who will be fighting this war in the near future. I give you a schedule.

In 168 hours of the week we have: 35 hours of school; 24 to 35 hours of after school work; 10 to 14 hours of homework; 56 hours of sleep; 10 hours for eating; 10 hours for transportation; 3 hours for reading; a total of 148 to 163 hours. This gives some of us approximately five hours for ourselves, 300 minutes in which to relax, 18,000 seconds to have a date or to make a little whoopee. O! Ain't we just lucky?

W. J.

WANTS AN HONORABLE DISCHARGE.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—I am classified 4-F in the draft. I abhor all those jokes cracked about the 4-Fs. I am looking forward to the future when the boys in the army come home. According to the higher-ups, who should know, work and money aren't going to be so plentiful after the war. These higher-ups seem to be in agreement that those boys who have been in the service shall be given employment in preference to those who stayed home. Now we 4-Fs answered the call to the colors and were turned down, which was not our fault. Yet it looks like we will be classified with the lowly draft dodger after the war is over. It is my opinion that something should be done about this condition before the war is over. My suggestion is for the war department to issue us honorable discharge papers. BILL.

A SHOCK TO YOUTH.

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 27.—I have just finished reading the first editorial in this morning's TRIBUNE—"The Inside Story of Willkie." I am just a very ordinary citizen—with a boy of 15 in second year high school. All our lives we have tried to teach him the importance of being perfectly honest. What sort of a jolt is he, like millions of others his age, going to get when they come to realize that men of importance do things and get away with it? I would like to offer a slogan—"Wanted, Honest Men in High Positions."

MARTHA J. TEMPLETON.

FOR UKRANIAN INDEPENDENCE.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—There is a lot of talk about post-war plans. Ostensibly, this war is being fought to bring the "four freedoms" to all slave nations. Will Stalin's bloodstained fingers sign a post-war pledge to grant autonomy to the subjugated 55 million Ukrainians who have long suffered under Russian oppression?

These millions are ethnologically, culturally, ecclesiastically, and linguistically a separate nation but because of Russian tyranny they have been crushed under the communist heel. Ukrainians want nothing of communist Russia, Nazi Germany, or Fascist Italy. They want only to be free from all foreign domination.

Ukrainians, under Ukrainian leadership, bear the brunt of the present war against Naziism. Their heroism assuredly deserves the reward of national independence and the God-given right of self government, not the Russian exploitation of Ukrainian resources for the spread of the Communist International.

THE JEWELERS' PLIGHT.

Bloomington, Wis., Nov. 20.—Our alarm clocks went to England and we are supposed to get up early and feed the world. We have no clocks, no watches, nothing to sell, and practically no supplies to keep these necessary things in running order.

As far as getting anything to sell is concerned, the jeweler is 99 44/100 per cent out of business. We are taxed 10 per cent on what little we can scrape together and being given a final coup de grace by raising the tax to 20 per cent.

We note that we are never forgotten when there is a job to be done free or some one is soliciting donations.

The jewelers have been banged around like this for about two years, and no one seems inclined to intercede, but the moment it is rumored that there might be a whisky shortage, congress immediately becomes excited and promptly appropriates $10,000 of the taxpayers' money for an investigation to determine what became of the booze and to remedy the situation.

FRANK RIESE.

OPA'S HELPERS.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—There is no use in having price ceilings unless they are enforced. The soundness of this seems obvious to me. Evidently THE TRIBUNE cannot follow this reasoning. Just how do you expect the OPA to enforce price ceilings without an adequate staff? You employ the word "snooper" as tho you sympathize with merchants who use that word. Only merchants who violate the ceilings consider OPA union and housewife helpers to be snooping. It seems to me that housewives who assist OPA by investigating alleged violations of the ceilings are doing a good service to all consumers.

BETTY MITCHELL MURRAY.

ALL-YEAR ADOPTION.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 30.—I read in your paper of a movement to adopt a soldier, sailor, or marine for Christmas.

I think it would be a good idea to extend this to a year around activity.

I recently returned from Australia and over there this sort of thing has been going on for some time. They form groups, usually people living in a city block, and adopt a service man who is wounded or is a prisoner. They pool their money or gifts and see to it that the man is supplied with smokes, clothing, etc.

Each city, town, village, or rural community takes care of men from their own locality. DWIGHT L. DAY.

BAD BUY.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A month ago I bought a chair from a furniture company. 1. The salesman didn't tell me anything about the filling and, as I have had little experience in buying furniture I didn't think to ask about it. Now the chair is a wreck. The covering is coming apart, the filling is about to fall out, and the seat is a deep hollow. I have reported this to the store and am told nothing can be done about it. I am paying for the chair on terms. Have I no remedy? C. M.

1. If they did not affirmatively misrepresent, then we see no remedy.

2. Probably not. Sec. 15 of the sales act provides that there is no implied warranty of quality except: [1] where the buyer makes known his particular purpose and relies on the seller's skill; [2] where the goods are bought by description from a dealer. If the buyer has examined there is no implied warranty as to visible defects. If you cannot prove an express or implied warranty, the maxim "caveat emptor" would apply, which means, in substance, that the buyer takes "as is."

RENT INCREASE.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—At the time OPA placed a ceiling on rents [1] our landlord raised ours. We paid the increase for the months of April and May, 1942, but he has never refunded the overpayment. Under OPA regulations [2] isn't he required to do so? R. C.

1. We assume that you mean he did so after March 1, 1942.

2. Yes. If he refuses, take the matter up with OPA.

Call home the heart at Christmas

. . call his heart home to the warm, bright peace of Christmas, to the still moment before the family fills the living room with shouts and laughter. Call to him—for this is his real Christmas wherever he fights, longing for Christmas at home. He sees it all—the Christmas tree just where it always stands, the holly, and the fire leaping high. Now he hears the kids scrunching across the snow, then the thud of galoshes kicked off in the hall, the rush upstairs to wrap the last presents, and his favorite records playing. All the Christmasy smells will be in his imagining—pine needles scorched with candle wax, the turkey borne all steaming and golden to the table. Yes, he remembers it all. Oh, call home his heart. Keep bright the lights on your Christmas tree—they're the lights that will guide him back home.

RED BLOC FIGHTS TO WIN PARDON FOR EX-TEACHER

Schappes May Enter Sing Sing Tomorrow.

New York, Dec. 11 [Special].—The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, which the United States department of justice has termed a communist front organization, today joined in an eleventh hour appeal to save Morris U. Schappes from going to prison after his conviction on charges of perjury.

Schappes is a former teacher who admitted heading a secret communist cell at the College of the City of New York, where he was an English tutor for 13 years. He faces an 18, to 24 month term unless Governor Thomas E. Dewey grants a pardon or commutes his sentence.

Sentenced in 1941.

Schappes was sentenced on July 11, 1941, but he has not yet been in jail. He was suspended from his college position on March 15, 1941. The indictment on which he was found guilty charged he testified falsely on March 6, 1941, before a New York legislative committee investigating subversive activities in schools and colleges of the state. He is alleged to have told the committee he knew of only three Communists on the City college campus in 1938, whereas testimony by other witnesses was to the effect that there were at least 50.

The United States Supreme court on Nov. 22 rejected Schappes' appeal, thus exhausting his last legal remedy. Unless Gov. Dewey acts, Schappes will start his sentence in Sing Sing Monday morning.

The appeal by the federation came as a sequel to a similar move in the "Free Schappes" drive undertaken earlier this week by the New York CIO council headed by Joseph Curran, president of the communist ridden National Maritime union.

Deferred in Draft.

Curran, who recently was deferred in the draft, has directed all council affiliates, including the city's CIO unions, to hold their memberships "ready for emergency" in the Schappes' case.

At a council meeting Thursday, Curran, according to the Daily Worker, official communist publication, told Schappes: "We promise you, Morris, that we'll bring you back to this council." Schappes was present at the meeting as a delegate.

The Daily Worker did not quote Curran as saying when he expected Schappes would return. Later, a three column editorial signed by Israel Amter, Communist state leader, said if Gov. Dewey permits Schappes to go to prison, the Moscow conference will be turned into a farce.

BOY, 3, DIES IN HOME.

Robert Fred Boettcher, 3 years old, 1028 West 105th street, died in his home yesterday of a stomach ailment, despite the efforts of a fire department rescue squad which worked over him for 30 minutes. He was the son of Robert L. Boettcher, 27, a welder.

HOLLY HONORED BY 700 FRIENDS AS HE RETIRES

U. S. Judge Given Post Until July 1.

Seven hundred persons, most of them lawyers, attended a testimonial banquet in the Hotel Sherman last night in honor of Judge William H. Holly, who announced his retirement last week from the United States District court.

"I did not think any federal judge could be so honored when he goes out of office; this gathering of lawyers on the retirement of a judge is most unusual," said Judge Evan A. Evans, senior jurist of the federal Circuit Court of Appeals, who proposed the toast: "May joy and happiness be the twilight, and may it be occupied in a continuation of the public service for which Judge Holly is so well qualified by nature and training."

Retiring at 74 on Pension.

Judge Holly, 74 years old, was appointed by President Roosevelt to the federal bench Nov. 20, 1933, and is retiring on pension. He has expressed his readiness to hear occasional cases, and Judge Evans said he has assigned him to the northern Illinois district until July 1, 1944.

Henry P. Chandler, director of the administrative office of the United States courts, and former president of the Chicago Bar association, eulogized Judge Holly for his "open mindedness, humanity and modesty."

Mayor Kelly praised him as "a great judge, a kind judge," and messages were read from Harlan F. Stone, chief justice of the United States; Associate Justice William O. Douglas; Frank Knox, secretary of the navy, and Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior. Gen. Charles G. Dawes was among those at the speakers' table.

Arranged by Lawyers' Guild.

The testimonial was arranged by the Chicago chapter of the National Lawyers' guild, with Elmer Gertz, president, in charge, and civic organizations and trade unions cooperated.

Judge Holly, who began practice in Macomb, Ill., in 1891, and came to Chicago in September, 1902, said he was surprised and delighted by the evening's praises, and he quickly sat down after telling one story:

"A young lady told me today she is sorry I am retiring because I probably will be succeeded by some terrible New Dealer!"

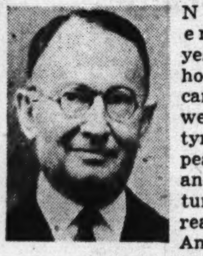
HOW AMERICAN LITERATURE WON 100 YEAR BATTLE

Dr. Snyder Tells Story of Its Triumph.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Dr. Franklyn Bliss Snyder stepped from behind his administrative desk as president of Northwestern university yesterday to tell how the American campus was weaned from the tyranny of European classicism, and of the century it took to realize that an American literature had been born.



Dr. F. B. Snyder.

Moreover, in what turned out to be a swift summary of his former famous course in American literature, the Northwestern president made it clear that the lusty, century old infant which finally worked its way into the austere curricular family and was named "American Literature," in the faculty Bible, was sound of tooth and limb.

It was the central western campus, particularly that of the upper Mississippi valley, which first listened to the wisdom of the babe and set it, at last, in full academic equality beside hoary Greek and Latin antiquities. It even came to rate with English literature!

Atlantic Seaboard Yields.

But what about the great Atlantic seaboard universities? Dr. Snyder had looked the matter up. Before he gave dates when American literature first made the Ivy league curricular team, he told of academic conservatism; how first it was solely matters of Greek and Latin literatures, then [with caution] English literature.

When American literature appeared there was grave question of legitimacy. Dr. Snyder explained that when Princeton university first introduced American literature in 1919, 173 years after that university's founding, it was apologetically entitled, "Literary History of American Ideals." Thus at least 43 under graduate generations at Old Nassau never knew of a formal American literature.

"In 1909 when I came to Northwestern, English B had been in existence some time," said Dr. Snyder, explaining that this was the American literature course. "However, the catalog explained that no credit would be given to English B students toward an English major."

Course Offered in 1898.

The Northwestern catalog of 1898-1899 listed the following literary courses:

"American literature, philology, English, French, German, Greek, Hebrew, Italian, Latin, Norwegian, Danish, Swedish, and Spanish languages and literature."

Harvard university offered a fully fledged American literature course in 1916-1917. However, Dr. Snyder added that Dr. Barrett Wendell had taught a course, "The Literary History of America," in 1897. Harvard had introduced English literature in 1851.

Yale university was the pioneer in teaching American literature of the "big three" eastern universities, with English literature taught first in 1859-'60, and American literature many years later. The course in American poetry was begun in 1894.

In answer to the delay in teaching such courses, Dr. Snyder pointed to the weight of the classical tradition which held that other literatures than Greek and Latin naturally would be acquired by the classicist.

Dr. Snyder was pessimistic about an early emergence of a literature out of the war.

Neglected Child

Shirley Czerwiec at Fillmore police station after she and two others had been found cold and starving. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Mary Czerwiec, 40 years old, 1545 South Spaulding avenue, was taken to County hospital yesterday suffering from fractures of several ribs which Fillmore street police said resulted from a beating inflicted in her home Friday night. Two children, Shirley Czerwiec, 5, and her sister, Carol, 2, were found huddled about a coal stove in the home while their step-brother, William White, 9, sought fuel outside. A piece of bread was the only food in the house, police said. William and Shirley were removed to the juvenile home and Carol was taken to St. Vincent's orphanage. Mrs. Czerwiec is estranged from her husband, Charles.

TAX MAY BOOST PRICE OF FURS IN 'WILL CALL' BOX

Customers—whose purchases of fur coats, luggage, ladies' handbags, and wallets are lingering in department stores on deposits—may emit yells of auguish if they don't watch out. If the new tax bill increasing the excise on the aforementioned items is enacted and signed by the President not later than Dec. 21, and customers fail to pay the balance and take their purchases out of "hock" before Dec. 31, the increased tax will apply, Chicago merchants indicated yesterday.

The bill will become effective Jan. 1 if signed before Dec. 21. Customers will have to pay the new tax on the unpaid balance unless they gain title to the article before Dec. 31 by paying the balance or by transferring their purchase to a charge account. Charge account customers who take their purchase home, or who actually have taken title, altho the store may be holding the item, will not be required to pay the increased tax.

One Store Advises Action.

At least one Chicago store has suggested to its customers that they adopt this plan in order to escape the increased cost. This store has sent letters to its customers who have fur coats being held for them on deposit, explaining the new tax bill.

The excise on furs will be at least doubled from its present 10 per cent tax. The house voted an increase to 25 per cent, but the senate finance committee lowered the figure to 20 per cent. The fur excise includes fur coats, fur trimmed coats, and fur lined coats.

Tax on Other Items.

Luggage, ladies' handbags, and wallets have been designated for a 15 per cent tax by the senate committee, after the house had them earmarked for a 25 per cent tax. Luggage at present is subject to a 10 per cent manufacturers' excise tax, while handbags are untaxed.

Some merchants believe there may be a year-end buying spree—if the bill becomes effective Jan. 1—by people who wish to avoid the added excise. Others in the fur business feel their January business, ordinarily a good month, may decline.

'Kidnaped' U. of I. Student Home in Care of Doctor

Carl Keeshin, 18 years old, student at the University of Illinois and son of Charles Keeshin, prosperous poultry dealer, who told New Orleans [La.] police he was driven there after being kidnaped on the campus in Urbana by two men last Monday, arrived home yesterday. Young Keeshin was met at the train by his father, who said his son appeared considerably upset and had been ordered to bed by a physician. Because of his son's condition, the elder Keeshin said he postponed questioning him about the incident.

HUNDREDS OF TONS OF BLOCK BUSTERS!

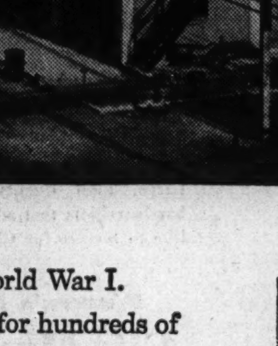
Toluene is the vital ingredient of TNT. You can't make TNT without toluene! And TNT is the stuff that gives a "block buster" its ravaging, knock-out power!

Many plants are busy now, day and night, making toluene, the vital ingredient. One of the greatest of these plants has recently been completed and put into full operation by Standard Oil of Indiana at its Whiting Refinery.

This one plant alone turns out more toluene than all sources in the United States in World War I. It furnishes every day enough toluene for hundreds of tons of devastating block busters!

Toluene, and other important products, pour into the war machine from Standard Oil's refining equipment—with all the capacity, all the energy, all the skill we can apply. You'll be glad to know, too, that the hydroformer which produces toluene today will be used after the war to make even better gasoline than we ever made before!



STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(INDIANA)

First commercial hydroformer ever built—now important in volume production of TNT. Developed and designed by Standard Oil Company (Indiana), its subsidiary, Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company, and a construction company, the first commercial hydroformer was built at Texas City before the war, when it was operated to make top quality gasoline. It was the forerunner of the several hydroformers, including the new one at Whiting, which are now making the bulk of all toluene produced in the United States.

N. Y. AIMS TO TAX THE REST OF U. S. FOR HALF BILLION

Needs Cash in Post-War Building Projects.

BY ROY GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 11.—Taxpayers thruout the nation, it was revealed today, are being counted on to contribute approximately half of the cost of New York City's billion dollar post-war public works program.

The contribution, according to Edwin A. Salmon, chairman of the city planning commission in charge of the huge undertaking, is expected to be received in the form of grants from the federal government.

So vast is the program that 25 million dollars produced from the sale of serial bonds already has been allocated just for drawing up plans for the hundreds of projects it includes. This work of reducing the preliminary surveys to engineering specifications is keeping a small army of draftsmen constantly employed.

Jobs for 240,000 Provided.

If the program finally goes thru it will provide jobs for 240,000 men for three years and give indirect employment to thousands of others who are to fabricate the mountains of materials to be purchased, Salmon said.

Contemplated under the program is a new 60 million dollar municipal airport to be built at Idlewild in Queens, capable of handling helicopters and transoceanic freight planes. Also included is a vast slum clearance project, 117 million dollars worth of new schools, a new vehicular tunnel from the Battery to Brooklyn, costing 57 millions, and completion of first stages of the job of tapping the Delaware watershed to provide New York with an additional water supply at a cost of 15 million dollars.

Many of the projects in the plan were first conceived during the regime of Rex G. Tugwell, one of the New Deal's original "Brain Trusters," who was Salmon's predecessor as chairman of the planning board. That was before he was appointed governor of Puerto Rico by President Roosevelt.

625 Million Debt Limit.

According to Salmon, the city will be able to finance half the project by Jan. 1, 1945, when its 625 million statutory debt limit is expected to be sufficiently reduced to take on the added load. At the present time the unincumbered balance is in the neighborhood of 300 millions, Salmon disclosed. With no major building operations being carried on because of the war, this reserve is being constantly increased as outstanding bond debts are retired, he said.

The difference in cost between what the city will be able to put up and total cost of the program which will be in excess of a billion dollars is expected to come from federal legislation, Salmon said.

Based on a previous ratio whereby the government during the depression advanced 45 per cent of the cost of approved public works in the form of grants, the program drawn up by Salmon's commission will require at least half a billion dollars of taxpayers' money.

"If we don't receive federal aid," Salmon declared, "we still can go ahead with the program, but at a slower rate which will extend the job over a number of years."

Besides exchanging reminiscences about the great dinners, roaring brawls, and salty personalities of the early 1900s, the veterans heard their honorary life chairman, William Kennedy McKay, introduce the guest speaker, Franklin P. Adams, once a Chicago newspaper man, later a famous [New York] columnist, now a star of "Information Please." McKay gave Adams his first newspaper job here.

Tribute Paid to McCutcheon.

Richard J. Finnegan, editor of the Chicago Times and president of the association, and Charles Collins, member of the executive committee and conductor of THE TRIBUNE'S "A Line o' Type or Two," also made short talks. There were songs by the Elastic Four, the national barber shop quartet.

Among the formal and informal tributes to the great of the newspaper craft was a standing ovation to John T. McCutcheon, for 40 years a Tribune cartoonist.

Gathering in Historic Block.

The gathering was held in the historic block bounded by Madison, La Salle, Washington, and Wells streets, which at one time was the center of the newspaper business in Chicago. The veterans were within a few hundred yards of the site of the vanished offices into which they once used to dart with their stories.

These were really veterans. The association admits no youngsters, for its eligibility requirement is at lest one year's newspaper service 20 or more years ago.

Hotel Press Gallery Opened.

Before the dinner, the veterans inspected the press gallery on the 18th floor of the La Salle hotel on the occasion of its formal opening. Her eare pictures of many of the one time great of the profession—among them Joseph Medill, Edward S. Beck, Robert M. Lee, Bert Leston Taylor, Walter A. Strong, Henry Justin Smith, Victor F. Lawson, Melville Stone, Walter Eckersall, Eugene Field, and Ring Lardner. Originals of several cartoons, including an old "Andy Gump," further decorate the gallery.

A picture of James A. [Jimmy] Durkin, who remained a Tribune copy "boy" by choice all his life, stands among photographs of the editors and reporters among whom he served.

CROWN NATIONAL TENPIN CHAMPION TONIGHT

OTTO GRAHAM AWARDED BIG NINE SILVER FOOTBALL

NORTHWESTERN STAR RECEIVES TRIBUNE PRIZE

Bray and Wiese Tie for Second.

Worthy Addition

1943—Otto Graham, Northwestern.
1942—Dave Schreiner, Wisconsin.
1941—Jack Graf, Ohio State.
1940—Tom Harmon, Michigan.
1939—Nile Kinnick, Iowa.
1938—Howard Weiss, Wisconsin.
1937—Corby Davis, Indiana.
1936—Vernon Huffman, Indiana.
1935—Jay Berwanger, Chicago.
1934—Pug Lund, Minnesota.
1933—Joe Laws, Iowa.
1932—Harry Newman, Michigan.
1931—Clarence Munn, Minnesota.
1930—Wesley Fesler, Ohio State.
1929—Bill Glassgow, Iowa.
1928—Chuck Bennett, Indiana.
1927—Ken Rouse, Chicago.
1926—Benny Friedman, Michigan.
1925—Tim Lowry, Northwestern.
1924—Red Grange, Illinois.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Otto Graham, half back on the Northwestern university football team, was the most valuable player in the 1943 Western conference campaign. Graham received this honor from the board of 21 electors which considered the merits of the nine most valuable players in the conference who had been nominated by their teammates.

The Wildcat half back, who completed three years of competition at Northwestern this fall, is the 20th player to receive the Chicago Tribune silver football since the award was established in 1924 and won by Harold [Red] Grange of Illinois. Graham is the second Northwestern representative to be voted the most valuable conference player, Tim Lowry, Wildcat center, having received the silver football in 1925.

All Will Receive Awards.

Participation by all conference players in the nominations has made the silver football award the highest honor in the nation since no player can receive the final honor unless he has been voted the most valuable player to his team by the boys who played with him. Each of the nine most valuable players—one from each university—will receive a white gold miniature football. These nine players are:

Illinois—Eddie Bray, back.
Indiana—John Tavener, center.
Iowa—Bob Liddy, guard.
Michigan—Bob Wiese, back.
Minnesota—Paul Mitchell, tackle.
Northwestern—Otto Graham, back.
Ohio State—Gordon Appleby, center.
Purdue—Dick Barwegen, guard.
Wisconsin—Joe Keenan, center.

The final vote was cast by the nine conference football coaches, nine veteran officials, Maj. John L. Griffith, conference commissioner; Arch Ward, Tribune sports editor, and the writer. Each elector listed his first and second choice and these were scored two points and one point, respectively.

Bray, Wiese Tie for Second.

Graham won easily with a total of 24 points based on 11 first places—a majority of all first place votes—and two second places. Eddie Bray, Illinois freshman half back, and Bob Wiese, Michigan blocking back and full back, tied for second place in the final tabulation. Paul Mitchell, Minnesota's senior tackle, was fourth and John Tavener, Indiana's captain, and Joe Keenan, Wisconsin's freshman center, tied for fifth place.

It is impossible, of course, for any one player to dominate team play completely. Northwestern's excellent record this fall, when the Wildcats were beaten only by Michigan in conference competition and by Notre Dame, was product of group effort capably directed by Lynn Waldorf, head coach. As a matter of record, in the 20 years the silver football has been presented, success of the team in games won and lost has not been a determining factor in selecting the conference's most valuable player.

Graham was the outstanding back, however, around whom North-

WEST. MICHIGAN BEATS N.U., 47-45

Kalamazoo Five Rallies in Final Minutes.

Western Michigan came with a rush in the last five minutes to defeat Northwestern, 47 to 45, in the opening game of the season for the Wildcats in the Evanston High gymnasium last night. The victory was the fourth straight for the Kalamazoo quintet which also numbers Notre Dame among its victims.

Trailing, 16 to 14, at the half and behind, 38 to 33, midway the final period, the Broncos found the range to overtake and pass the Purple in a fast and furious scoring spree in the closing minutes of the game.

Bill Morton and Russ Mason, a pair of senior guards who did not start, sparked Western Michigan's second half assault. Neither scored in the first half, but in the final period, Mason rifled in six baskets and Morton four.

Northwestern was without the services of Capt. Otto Graham who is convalescing from the flu. In his absence, the brunt of the scoring was taken over by a pair of newcomers, Ben Schadler, sophomore guard from Benton Harbor, and Jim Schmidt, marine transfer from South Dakota State.

March Field Beats Stagg's Eleven, 19 to 0

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 11 (AP).—March Field's 4th air force football team had too much power and weight for Amos Stagg's game little College of the Pacific squad today and used it for a 19 to 0 victory that closed the 1943 season in Memorial coliseum.

Attendance was cut to 7,500 by an intermittent drizzle that stopped as soon as the players took the field.

Coach Paul Schissler's service team had an advantage of 20 pounds to the man and used it effectively. Stagg's Tigers, had difficulty breaking down the tightly knit March field interference which enabled such speedsters as Indian Jack Jacobs, formerly of Oklahoma, Bob Defruiter of Nebraska, and Jimmy Nelson of Alabama to turn the ends for long gains.

Pacific made two mild scoring threats in the second quarter, but didn't have quite the stamina to hold off the hard charging Flier defense. Lineup:

IRISH WIN, 41-31, OVER BADGERS

Todorovich, Klier Lead Victors' Attack.

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 11 [Special]. — Notre Dame's basketball team scored its second victory of the season tonight, defeating the University of Wisconsin, 41 to 31. The Irish took a six point lead in the opening minutes of the contest and were never headed.

Field goals by Klier, Kelly, and Rutledge sent the Irish out in front and two baskets by Kivisto gave Notre Dame a 10 to 5 lead. Patterson and Smith scored for the Badgers, but Kivisto and Todorovich each tallied twice and Rutledge once to give the Irish a 13 point lead. Johnson, Dykstra, and Gallagher tallied as the first half ended with the score 23 to 1 5in Notre Dame's favor.

Ten minutes before the game ended, the Irish held a 3 3to 21 advantage, but the Badgers cut down the lead when Smith and Dykstra scored. In the final three minutes field goals by Smith, Klier, and Gilhooley maintained the 10 point advantage.

Klier and Todorovich, with 8 points each, led the Notre Dame attack, while Smith and Johnson each scored 7 points for the Badgers. Tonight's game marked the basketball debut of Johnny Lujack, Notre Dame quarter back. Lineups:

DE KALB WINS OVER ELMHURST, QUINTET, 50 TO 48

De Kalb, Ill., Dec. 11 (AP).—With Noble Arnold and Harry Anderson contributing 13 points apiece, De Kalb Teachers tonight won their first basketball game in three starts by beating Elmhurst college, 50 to 48.

GREAT LAKES FIVE DEFEATS ILLINI, 52 TO 44

Nebraska Loses to De Paul, 55-15.

A pair of Hoosier hot shots, Paul Armstrong and Herman Schaefer, led Great Lakes' basketball team to victory over Illinois, 52 to 44, last night in the Chicago Stadium. These veterans, who starred on Indiana university's 1940 collegiate championship quintet, each scored 17 points.

Before the young Illini were outdistanced in the final 15 minutes they set a blazing pace which carried them to the intermission in front, 28 to 23. Later they established a 35 to 30 advantage, but Armstrong and Schaefer took over and with smooth ball handling worked the ball in for close shots to notch a third victory for the undefeated Sailors. Seven thousand spectators saw the opening double header in the Stadium.

De Paul Wins Fifth in Row.

De Paul won its fifth consecutive game from an inept Nebraska team, 55 to 15, in the second game of the night. George Mikan, De Paul's center, added 14 points to his scoring total altho he sat out most of the game. George Lucas, Nebraska guard, suffered a dislocated shoulder in the first half and was sent to a hospital for treatment.

Armstrong got seven field goals and three penalty shots for Great Lakes before he was dismissed on four fouls three minutes before the game ended. Schaefer scored eight times from the field and once from the 15 foot penalty line. These veterans had excellent offensive support from Don Smith, former Minnesota guard, who hit six field goals.

The other Great Lakes players could not match this scoring pace, altho Jack Coleman, Duke university freshman last year, was a bulwark of defensive strength.

Sailors' Stamina Tells.

The Illini were surprisingly accurate in shooting and their defense held up for 30 minutes but Great Lakes' final drive was too much for the youngsters. Dick Foley and Walton Kirk tied for Illinois' scoring honors with nine points each.

Smith, Bluejacket guard, scored first, but Gordon Gillespie, Illinois center, tied the score immediately and the Illini went ahead, 6 to 2, on subsequent baskets by Stan Patrick and Jimmy Seyler. Armstrong's two field goals then tied the score. Armstrong's next basket and Smith's set shot from the circle gave Great Lakes a 10 to 6 advantage.

After the Bluejackets had a 14 to 9 lead the Illini sharpshooters went to work. Patrick got five points in succession on a penalty throw and two field goals to tie the score for the third time and Dick Foley's long shot sent the Illini to the fore. Illinois had a 28 to 23 advantage at the intermission.

Illini Make One Last Rally.

Great Lakes came back to lead, 30 to 29, after two minutes of the second half, but Illinois immediately rallied with three field goals. Schaefer then got three consecutive field goals and the Bluejackets were in front, 36 to 35. The Sailors were never headed thereafter. Lineup:

Paul Krumske (left), the Chicagoan who totaled a 904 yesterday, with games of 204, 240, 246, and 214, in the All-Star Bowling Tournament in the Auditorium Service Men's center, is having his ball cooled off by Rudy Pugel. The young Mr. Pugel should be well versed in dealing with torrid bowling balls for he had an 821 of his own in the same session and took two games from Leader Ned Day.

John Crimmins, Detroit, one of fightingest and thus most popular bowlers in the game, has been having rough going in the late stages of the All-Star tourney because of an injured thumb on his bowling hand. He was last year's No. 1 challenger to Champion Connie Schwoegler.

Chicago and New York Prep Leaders Meet Today in East

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 11.—The old Chicago-New York rivalry will flare up again tomorrow when St. George High, Chicago city champion, tackles the undefeated, untied Mount St. Michael eleven at the Polo Grounds before a crowd that is expected to exceed any high school attendance in the city's history.

Rated off the season's records of the teams, a great defensive battle looms, the Chicagoans having limited their opponents to 80 points in 11 games, while the Mounties held their 10 adversaries to 44. That, plus the fact the New Yorkers have a definite offensive edge, tallying 315 points to the Dragons' 195, is probably the reason the Bronx boys have been installed as slight favorites. However, that underdog spot is a favorite with the visitors. Coach Max Burnell's youngsters having turned in their best performances while appearing in that role.

Mounties' Line Is Strong.

But if St. George wants to continue the precedent set by Hyde Park High back in 1900, when that Chicago team, led by Walter Eckersall, buried Brooklyn Boys High, it will have a tough nut to crack in Coach Howie Smith's forward wall. Headed by two all-city ends, Bill O'Connor and Ken Oberlin, both 6 feet 3 and weighing 190 pounds, and a watch charm guard, 150 pound Jack Valavan, a product of Evanston, Ill., home of St. George, it has been well nigh impregnable all season, only two of the six touchdowns scored against the Mounties going thru it. In the starting back field Smith has the city's high scorer, Frank Burke, with 90 points; Capt. Tom Kelly, who averaged 10 yards per try in picking up 1,063 yards during the campaign and a better than fair passer and kicker; Don Begley, one of the best school boy punters in the metropolitan area, and Fred Oliveri, a blocking specialist.

Surprises Are Their Specialty.

Against this array St. George will use a starting back field quartet of Marty Wendell, Johnny Alcock, Jack Ryan, and Johnny Pflum, who have been pulling surprises all season.

The game will have a marked Notre Dame aspect, Smith having been a half back on Knute Rockne's 1930 team and Burnell having played the same position on the 1938 Irish eleven.

Points are figured according to the Petersen point system, by which a player is given one point for each 50 pins knocked down, one point for each game won, and one point if his four game total is greater than that of an opponent who has beaten him in games won.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Ned Day, the Wisconsin tenpin genius who is still recognized even by his bitterest rivals as one of the all-time masters, last night prepared for today's stretch run in the third All-Star National Bowling tournament by hugging onto the lead in the big show being sponsored at the Auditorium Service Men's center by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors' Association of America.

The handsome Badger, bowling counterpart of a fellow named Willie Hoppe, who used to shoot a stick or two of pool down the same Wabash avenue on which the service men's center is located, enters today's final round of four four-game blocks with a Petersen cumulative point system total of 237.40. This gave him an advantage of 14 points and 10 pins over Paul Krumske, the slender Chicagoan from the Meister Braus of the Classic league.

Kissoff Is Third.

Krumske finished the third day of the man-to-man bowling marathon, proceeds of which will be directed to the maintenance of the lanes where all service men may bowl free, with a 48 game aggregate of 223.30. That gave him the runner-up role over Joe Kissoff, the 42 year old Cleveland machinist of the shiny pate. Joe, apparently getting stronger as the tournament progressed had a 222.24 for third place, just enough to put him ahead of John Crimmins of Detroit.

The 46 year old Crimmins, bowling with an injured fourth finger, gave Day his first series defeat of the tourney, and a crowd that included Mayor Kelly, founder of the Service Men's Center, its biggest thrill of the night. Yet the poised Day, who beat out Crimmins in a dramatic 90 game special match in last year's tournament, salvaged a point by outtotaling Johnny by five pins. The Detroit star won the first three games of the bout with Day by running off games of 184, 257, 203, and 200 against Ned's 181, 244, 200, and 224.

Burton Leaves 5-6-8-9-10.

Nelson Burton was the victim of one of the most unfortunate incidents of the tournament, leaving the 5-6-8-9-10 setup standing. It was one of those situations that seldom occur in bowling tournaments, and cost him his final game against Fred Bujack, the Detroit star who is attracting as much attention as Day, despite the fact that he's in last place. Starting out in last place as an understudy for the injured Mort Lindsey, who bowled on only two squads, the tall Michigan blond persisted in turning some of the most consistent bowling of the show. He defeated Crimmins in three out of four games and repeated the performance against the able Burton, who was ailing with a cold that forced him to wear a plaster on his back.

The speed of the squad which included the Day-Crimmins bout was such that it was hard to follow the boys across the eight center alleys of the service men's center. In addition to the spirited finish put on Ned and Johnny, there was the

Boilermakers Capture 46 to 41 Contest.

LaFayette, Ind., Dec. 11 [Special]. —Purdue's basketball quintet scored a 46-41 double overtime victory over the De Pauw Pre-Flight quintet here tonight. It was the Naviators' second loss in eight starts.

Largely due to the work of Ed Sadowski, who captured the high point honors of the evening with six field goals and one free throw, De Pauw held a 17 to 12 lead at the end of the first half. Purdue finally managed to forge ahead, 23-21, midway in the second period, only to have DePauw take the lead again, 35-31, with less than two minutes to play. Jack Kennedy narrowed the margin to two points with a field goal, but with only five seconds remaining, DePauw was still leading, 35-33, as a jump ball was called. Kennedy grabbed the ball on the tip, passed the length of the floor to Paul Friend who scored to tie it up, 35-35, as the gun cracked.

Score Again Tied.

Sadowski led off for the visitors, but Friend countered with a long one. Less than a minute remained as Charlie Tourek hit from the side to put the Navitators in front, 39 to 37. Purdue again averted defeat as Charlie Haag dribbled down the middle and scored as the first overtime period ended, 39 to 39.

Haag put Purdue in front as the second overtime period started, stealing the ball to dribble under for two points, but Russ Wendland, former Northwestern captain, countered to again tie the count at 41 to 41.

Friend Scores Final Point.

Haag, almost exhausted, was removed from the game with four minutes left and replaced by Charles Elliott. At this point the Boilermakers put together a burst which resulted in a brilliant victory. James Gustafson and Paul Hoffman slipped thru a pair of goals and Friend added the final point as he made good on Sadowski's foul. Lineups:

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

LIKE sports events of all types everywhere, the All-Star individual match game bowling championship tournament which ends on the Auditorium service men's center alleys tonight has produced some mighty interesting gabfests. Night after night since the tourney started little groups of the contestants and interested observers have gathered over their coffee cups in the early hours of the morning to replay the matches of the day and to prognosticate, speculate, and debate on the respective merits of players, seeking the true outcome of the event before it was fairly begun.

The coffee houses in the vicinity of the service men's center which cater to a late trade and hotel rooms in the loop were the scenes of many such meetings. The chatter was constant and interesting. One such group gave forth many ideas.

Notables of Bowling World Offer Suggestions for Future.

In one of these sessions, around a group of tables, were found seated or standing the following, all notables in the great field of tenpin bowling: E. H. Baumgarten, Milwaukee, secretary of the American Bowling Congress; Eli Whitney, publicity director of the same organization; Fred Fisher, bowling proprietor of Buffalo, who won the A. B. C. all-events title in Detroit in 1940 with a score of 2,001, who is now relegated to the sidelines by a heart condition; Allie Brandt, Lockport, N. Y., holder of the all-time three game scoring record in a sanctioned league—886; Tony Monteverde, Los Angeles; Andy Varipapa, Brooklyn's trick shot contribution to the bowling world; Wayne Spaulding and Therman Gibson, Detroit; a St. Louis contingent including Lowell Jackson, Sam Garofalo, Hank Lauman, and Chris Sottrell; Barney McCoy of Kansas City, Ray Newton of Memphis, Frank Benkovic of Milwaukee, and a few others.

These boys all know their tenpins. What they have to say may be accepted, to a certain extent, as official and authoritative. When they disagree there is, you may be certain, reasonable room for doubt. They were discussing the current All-Star tournament and were expressing their ideas regarding it. The consensus was that the tournament was a success. The field was beyond question the fastest and the competition the stiffest in its three year history [one whole squad averaged more than 210] and the handling of the tourney was satisfactory.

Need More Time if Meet Is to Run on Schedule.

They noted that the pins were not changed for the entire 24 games of the qualifying quarter-finals. They graciously attributed this condition to the scarcity of pins, in which they were 100 per cent correct. They made countless other suggestions, too. They advised allowing a longer time for each squad in order that all might run according to time. An hour and a half per squad, they opined, would be about right.

Suggestions Will Come in Handy in Future Meets.

We are obliged to these boys for all the suggestions they provided us. We are making notes of all these things and when tournament time rolls around again next year, they'll be right beside us as a yardstick by which to measure the coming events with those of the past.

Inasmuch as Mr. A. B. C. himself [Baumgarten] was right there to answer many of their questions, this same group sent plenty of posers toward Baum. "What happens," queried Monteverde, "when a bowler, unknowing or otherwise, bowls at a setup of only nine pins, the 10th being unobserved, perhaps, in the rack? He gets a strike, or, at least knocks down all the nine pins. Now does he have to bowl over, or can he claim a strike?" It was Varipapa who answered him with "He gets no strike; he has to shoot at all 10."

The debate grew from that point and Baum was consulted. He pointed out that rule 2 states "A strike is recorded when the player completes a legal delivery and bowls down the full setup of 10 pins on the first ball." Moreover, rule 10 adds specifically that "A ball shall be declared dead if any of the following occur, in which case such ball shall not count: The pins must be respotted after the cause for declaring such dead ball has been removed and player shall be required to rebowl [A], if after the player delivers his ball and attention is immediately called to the fact that one or more pins were missing from the setup." Which would tend, in most cases, to end the argument.

Provides Healthful Impetus for Bowling Everywhere.

Such matters as the above were raised and answered thick and fast. The weight of pins, the conditioning of bowling alleys, the sanctioning of tournaments and leagues, eligibility of bowlers and a thousand and one other little items of interest cropped up. The boys took their turns thinking up the questions. Baum provided the answers. A lot was to be learned at a session like this. And they were taking place all over Chicago last week. Those who attended the matches went away with plenty to talk about. And the neighborhood tenpin establishments probably had an overdose of business from those who wanted to try out some new delivery they had seen work with such great success and startling effect on the Auditorium lanes. The tournament not only provides a thoro test for the bowlers, it not only decides a moot question of who is the best match game bowler by offering the stiffest test of courage, skill, and stamina in the game; it not only gives John Q. Bowler a chance to see the world's greatest performers, but it provides an active and wholesome stimulus to the game which is reflected in increased participation and more polished performances by the above mentioned Mr. Bowler.

ALL-STAR NOTES—If Fred Fisher, mentioned above as the former A. B. C. champion, doesn't have pinboy trouble in his Buffalo establishment, it's easy to understand. He spent $25 for gifts to take home to his pin setters. "I have a swell bunch of boys," he said. "I like them and I hope they like me. We get along fine." . . . Buddy Bomar, the former Dallas star, now bowling out of Chicago, remarked that if he qualified for the finals of the tourney, it would be a miracle, no less. Buddy's wife was at the time in a hospital expecting the arrival of a new Bomar. The miracle did happen, however, and Buddy qualified. . . . A lot of folks think Joe Wilman, the captain of the famed Budweisers and now a private at Camp Grant, is more becoming moinus the 20 pounds he already has lost while in service. Only a poor start, incidentally, kept Joe from being right up among the leaders. He had certainly found the range at the finish of his 36 games.

Coast Guardsman Dale Ward Is Favorite of Spectators.

Cone Hermann, sponsor of the former champion Hermann Undertakers, was in the stands for a few days watching some of his boys perform. . . . Only two fouls were called in the entire tournament and both were on Andy Varipapa. The second one cost him the 13th place among the final qualifiers. . . . Young Dale Ward, San Francisco coast guardsman, really had the crowd behind him all the way. His pepper and zip, his clean cut appearance, and his modest manner more than made up for his lack of experience. Of course, his ability helped, too. . . . Dick O'Brien, the youngest contender [he's 17 and from Minot, N. D.], was not lacking in vocal support, either. The folks like this new young blood in the bowling picture, there's no room for doubt about that.

When Paul Krumske shot his big 278 game he had every ball in the 1-3 pocket. He was tapped by the 4 pin in his ninth frame after eight strikes in a row and by the 10 pin in the tenth frame.

Mayor Kelly Brings Good Luck to Pete Peterson.

Mayor Kelly brought luck to Chicago's big Pete Petersen. When his honor entered the auditorium, Pete was beginning his sixth game. He posed for a Tribune photo with the mayor and went on to take first place temporarily. . . . One of the most disappointed men in the tourney was Frank Benkovic, Milwaukee, and who's to blame him? He missed landing in the 13 qualifiers by two positions and a bad break in his last game when he drew a split after a double. Benny is one of the most affable of all the really fine gentlemen in this game and a great bowler. . . . An extra special round of applause for game Joe Norris of Detroit who competed with a broken arm. Joe's performance in the tournament, while he didn't qualify, had to take a back seat to his courage.

JUNIOR ELEVENS END FOOTBALL PROGRAM TODAY

Four of the six teams selected at the boys' football schools sponsored by the Chicago Sports association will close their season this afternoon with a double header in Hanson park, Central and Fullerton avenues. In the opening contest, scheduled for 1:30 p. m., the Washington park team, coached by Duke Slater and Sol Butler, will tackle the Rock-Ola-Portage park eleven. The second game will match Columbus park, under the direction of Jim Kelly and Erwin Weiner, against Hilburn-Wells park, handled by Manny Schwartz.

The six teams were chosen from a field of 1,200 boys, 12 to 15 years old, who attended the Sports association schools. They were uniformed by a civic committee headed by Charles W. Bidwill, president of the association.

MICHIGAN WINS, 46-44

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 11 [Special].—Michigan met unexpected opposition tonight from Fort Custer's basketball team and, after leading by 11 points with 12 minutes remaining to play, finally won in the last minute, 46 to 44, on a basket by guard Dick Schrider, who last year was a regular at Ohio State. It was Michigan's third straight victory of the season.

Fort Custer dominated the play in the early stages of the game, controling the ball off the back boards and often broke past the Wolverines for clear spots at the basket. After 10 minutes the soldiers led, 14 to 9, but with Dave Strack setting the pace, Michigan forged ahead, 19 to 17, in the next five minutes and led at half time, 22 to 19. Lineup:

LT. JOEL HUNT SLATED FOR NO. 1 TENNIS RANKING

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Lt. [j. g.] Joel Hunt, unlisted in 1942 but the United States tennis singles champion of 1943, has been recommended for the No. 1 spot in the rankings for the coming year.

The recommendation will be acted upon by the United States Lawn Tennis association at its annual meeting in New York on Jan. 15.

While Hunt shot from nowhere to the top in 12 months, Ensign Ted Schroeder made the same trip after winning the title 12 months earlier and is not among the recommendations. The same work kept Hunt on the sidelines last year.

Kramer in No. 2 Shot.

Second place on the probable 1943 listing was given to John A. Kramer, also of Los Angeles, whom Hunt defeated for the title at Forest Hills last fall.

Francisco Segura of Ecuador, fourth a year ago, is third this time as the entire first 10 underwent a drastic shakeup in which only Sydney B. Wood Jr., retained his '42 position.

Pauline Betz of Los Angeles, who retained her women's singles crown, attained the top spot in her division with A. Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Cal., again runner-up. The third slot, however, went to Doris Hart of Miami, sixth a year ago. The recommended rankings:

BENDAS WANT GAMES.

The Home Front

BY MARK COX.

On Illinois Tool Work stationery comes the following:

> Dear Mark:
> I am going to pull a Wake of the News right from the beginning. Help!! Help! ! NEEDED: a number of 6 foot basketball players. L. W. B.

Arriving in the wake of I. T. W.'s opening 55 to 39 beating at the hands of the Peoria Caterpillar Diesels, this could be the contribution only of Lyle Bennett, that master of dietetics who doubles as athletic director of the near north side plant.

You can tell by the size of Lyle's tears he is no amateur in this business, but before whipping out our own personal crying towel, it would seem a bit of investigation might be in order. The best source of information would be some one close to the game, so we sought out a man who even was paid to watch every play of that opening contest, altho there was frequent questioning of how much he actually saw.

Could He Mean the Boys Are Too Well Nourished?

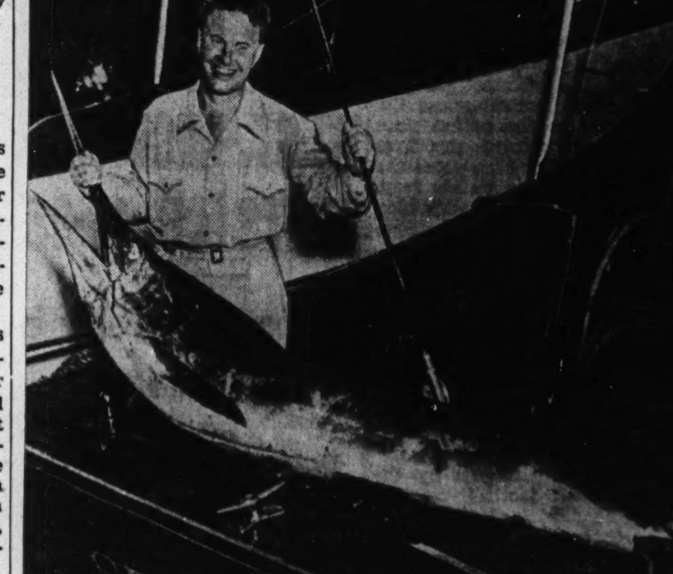
"Height?" he snorted, when confronted with Bennett's plea. "What that team needs is something that will keep the players' tongues from hanging out. And I don't mean a drink. They may have looked short out there, but that was because they were so tired they couldn't hold their heads up."

Altho you undoubtedly have had numerous occasion to question the quoted gentleman's eyesight, surely, Lyle, you will admit his veracity and integrity are above reproach. So, with apologies to Mr. Anthony, our advice to you, L. W. B., would be to pull those pastries and starches off the cafeteria menu in favor of a healthy assortment of endive, broccoli, artichokes, and such. They're still growing boys so maybe that will add that extra inch or two in height, as well.

Three Y. M. C. A. Leagues Merge in 18 Team Organization.

Physical Directors Bob Powers, Ed Ryan, and Steve Barak were a little dubious of the industrial basketball leagues at their respective Lincoln-Belmont, North Avenue-Larrabee, and Division Street Ys, so decided to pool their resources for one big circuit. The result is a fancy 18 team league competing in nine games weekly.

Among the bowlers. . . . Industrial bowling brothers may be interested to know the 21st annual Peoria Star brothers tournament will be held in the Tractor city Dec. 26-Jan. 2. . . . Those interested can gain full information by writing or calling this department or Fred Tuerk, sports editor, Peoria Star. . . . Ed Kissel of the Miller Screw Products squad has joined the marines. . . . Marital sparks snapped and popped in the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad league last week as Capt. Herb Wolf of the rate department and his Dixieland mates made a futile bid to halt the league leading Dixie Specials who feature a Mrs. Herb Wolf.



Back in pre-war days, Ralph J. Mills, executive director of Mills Industries (shown with his prize), had time to spend an hour and 30 minutes landing this 141 pound white marlin, giving him the world's record for that varety of fish. It was the second largest fish of any species landed in the Miami, Fla., fishing tournament.

William Beats His Average by Mere 80 Pins; Sets Record.

Bill Kessler had one of those nights the other evening in the Bendix Aviation tournament when he scored a slick 255, 80 pins above his average. . . . It was a new high among the company's bowlers, as well. . . . Last week's match between Sam Allen of Wrisley's Chateau du Parcs and Johnny Ansier of the J. and J. Gas Masks, who holds the high average to date, set a new record for the Clearing Industrial league's cheering section. . . . The result was a 234 to 225 margin for Sam.

The fowl along the Illinois river in the Henry vicinity proved to be manna to three American Airlines flight captains this fall with Captains Joe Hammer, Bill Graves, and Fred Baily, chief pilot, bagging their limit of mallards, pintails, blue and green wing teal and bluebills. . . . Mike Triolo, veteran Chicago boxer, has traded in his identification button at Studebaker for a marine insignia and reported recently for boot training in San Diego.

He's beginning to bald a mite but Seeburgs lay claim to Chicago's finest basketball player in Howard Schroeder, who is listed on the company records as a foreman. . . . His ability in the company bowling league is strictly coincidental with his background on the courts where he starred in the old K. The gentleman whose identification button reveals the name George Weaver on a hydro press at Pullman-Standard is none other than Buck Weaver, the old White Sox star.

The fact that three out of every five workers want to participate in recreation activities after they have punched "out" on their time cards, was revealed by a survey conducted in two Chicago areas by the industrial and commercial committee of the Chicago recreation commission. Of the 5,000 returns already received, about a third of which came from night shift workers, preferences rank as follows:

1, bowling; 2, swimming; 3, social dancing; 4, showers; 5, roller skating; 6, softball or baseball; 7, singing; 8, volleyball; 9, arts and crafts; 10, square dancing; 11, basketball.

A Scratching Dog Is in Torment
Thousands of dog owners have found this good way to keep their pets from constant scratching, biting, rubbing and digging. Once a week give them a dose of Rex Hunters Dog Powders. These powders usually help to bring prompt ease from an intense itching irritation that has centered in the nerve endings of the dog's skin. The urge to scratch abates the dog is happier, more contented. No wonder a purchaser writes: "Rex Hunters Dog Powders have given my dog great relief. Many thanks from 'Chink' and self." Why not try them on your own scratching dog. 25c at any good drug store, pet or sport shop.

MAPLE LEAFS TO TRY TO SUBDUE HAWKS TONIGHT

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The National Hockey league schedule, which has been screwy as a major league baseball calendar recently, will have one of its sanity intervals tonight. All the teams in the league will play tonight and Chicago's dish is expected to pack Chicago Stadium. The Toronto Maple Leafs, making their first appearance here since they played in the opener, Oct. 31, will be out to stop the Hawk home winning streak at six straight.

The climbing Boston Bruins will be playing the tail-end New York Rangers, which probably rates as something less than hair raising competition. The other competitors will be engaged in throat cutting exercises in tossup rivalries.

Expect Crowd of 17,500.

The league's attendance figures are up 7 per cent over last year, with Chicago, as usual, leading the statistics. A jam of 17,500 has been forecast for tonight at the Stadium. The limits of the rink will probably be the only reason the crowd in Detroit won't top the one here. The attraction there will be the victory crazy Montreal Canadiens vs. the world champion Red Wings. The Canadiens have slapped down the proud Wings twice in a row and one of the whippings was the only shutout in the league this season. The Wings are determined to break up this kind of impudence.

Happy Day, Leaf manager, is mindful that the Hawks possess a home winning streak of six straight, and has ideas about what his boys have to do to halt it. Day has instructed his proteges to stop Bill Mosienko, Clint Smith, and Doug Bentley at the blue line.

Must Stop Forward Trio.

"This Mosienko-Smith-Bentley trio hasn't become the league's leading forward string by accident," Day is quoted as saying. "Any team that let's those gents get into its defense zone in stride is very likely to see the goal umpire turn on the red light. Our aim is to knock 'em down at the blue line every time they start at us."

The Hawks, who were out of competition all last week will play the Bruins in Boston Tuesday night, the Leafs in Toronto on Saturday night, and the Leafs here again next Sunday night.

LEAFS TOP CANADIENS, 4-2

TORONTO, Dec. 11 (AP).—Coming from behind a 2 to 0 score, the Toronto Maple Leafs handed the Motreal Canadiens a 4 to 2 defeat in the National Hockey league before 12,120 fans. It was Montreal's second straight setback after going thru the first 14 games undefeated.

The triumph enabled the Bruins to stretch their string of undefeated home starts to seven games and moved them into third place in the circuit's standing.

PREPARING FOR REDSKINS—OR WILL IT BE GIANTS?

One of the lines of the Chicago Bears works out in Wrigley field in preparation for the National Football league playoff tentatively scheduled for the same arena next Sunday. The Bears, western division champions, will meet the Washington Redskins on that date provided that team is not beaten by the New York Giants in a game in Washington this afternoon. Should the Redskins lose today, they would be tied with the Giants for the eastern title, necessitating a playoff a week later. That automatically would move the league title game in Wrigley field to Dec. 26. The Bears' linemen, tho they have no game until the championship affair, are working hard again after a few days' rest.

Redskins Seek Eastern Title in Game Today

Air Title Game

ELMER LAYDEN, commissioner of the National Football league, yesterday authorized sponsorship of the championship playoff between the Chicago Bears and the winner of the eastern division title over a special coast-to-coast network.

The game will be played in Wrigley field on Dec. 19 or Dec. 26, depending upon the outcome of the eastern race between the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants. The broadcast, to be sponsored by the Wilson Sporting Goods company, also will be carried by short wave.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 [Special]. — The most discussed professional football game of the year was clouded with uncertainty tonight. The only certainty was that 35,540 spectators, the absolute limit, would watch the Washington Redskins try to clinch the eastern championship in Griffith stadium against the suddenly potent New York Giants.

You could almost smell the arnica and sulfa medicine as Coach Dutch Bergman of the Redskins and his aids gave a hospital report — Half Back Wilbur Moore and Guard Dick Farman definitely out with injuries; Ends Bob Masterson and Alex Piasecky, and Guard Al Fiorentino ill with flu; Tackle Wee Willie Wilkin hobbling from injuries to both knees, and Full Back Bob Seymour with an injured knee.

The poor physical condition of the Redskins was advertised before their game with the Chicago Bears here three weeks ago. But the champions rose up and smacked down the westerners, 21 to 7. Whether the Redskin cripples will recover miraculously in the nick of time to bring order to the chaotic race is anybody's guess. Certainly the champions aren't as badly off as the imposing list of cripples and patients would indicate.

Odds May Be Even.

The reported physical depths of the Redskins, plus the Giants' surprising 14 to 10 victory last week over the Bergman forces, hammered down the odds and it was considered probable that the betting would be even by game time. The contest will start at 1 o'clock Chicago war time.

A victory for the Giants would necessitate a play-off Dec. 19 with the Redskins. Before tomorrow's game starts, this contingency will be taken care of, with a coin being flipped to determine the site of the extra game, which would be on a sudden death basis. This means that if the game were tied at the finish, play would be resumed after a three minute rest and continue until one of the teams scored.

[The Chicago Bears continued their training routine yesterday at Wrigley field, hoping that the Redskins would win or tie today, so that the scheduled championship game in Chicago will be played a week from today. A Redskin victory also was desired by the Bears' business office, which expects a boom in sales if this transpires. It was reported last night the advance sale is nearing $100,000.]

Redskins Plan New Attack.

The Giants, who arrived from New York this evening, have no injuries. Will Walls, the veteran end, has been sidelined thru the week, but he jumped off the train spry as anything.

Because of Moore's injury, Coach Bergman has cooked up some new strategy for the Redskins' offense. He is planning to use both Sammy Baugh and George Cafego in the back field at the same time. Some observers expect the pair to start, but others say Bergman will hold the one-two punch in reserve. Cafego, under Bergman's plan, would be at quarter back [Baugh's regular berth] and Sammy would be at right half in Moore's spot. They would be twin tail backs and Bergman believes the Giants will be caused considerable confusion and anguish with the triple threat Cafego side by side with Slingin' Sam.

Young Seno's Ready.

When Baugh isn't in there, Young Frank Seno, who only last year couldn't be a regular with a George Washington U. team that won only two games, will be at right half. Seno ran 53 yards against the Bears.

Crown Tenpin Champion in Meet Tonight

first game submitted by Buddy Bomar, the Texan, who led all the preliminary shooters in the 1942 tourney. Buddy tipped over eight consecutive strikes before he left the 10 pin standing in the ninth frame. That ninth frame, by the way, appears to be the jinx bracket of the show, for Krumske has twice run out eight strikes in a row before missing. In his third game against Walter Ward, the Cleveland demonstrator last night, Paul ran off six in a row.

Today's program in which the matches will be held at noon, 1:20 p. m., 2:40 p. m., 4 p. m., 6:20 p. m., 7:40 p. m., 9 p. m., and 10:40 p. m., concludes the most difficult competition in the tenpin sport. After the 7:40 crew has completed its labors, the position round will be filled out by the last two squads, one going to the line at 9 p. m. and the last at 10:20 p. m. Based on the round robin standings, the No. 1 man will meet the No. 2 man on the third and fourth alleys of the 10:20 squad, with other positions being carried thru, such as No. 3 vs. No. 4, No. 5 vs. No. 6, and on down the line.

Great Lakes Negro Five Beats Old Tymers, 57-38

OTTO GRAHAM RECEIVES SILVER FOOTBALL PRIZE

western fashioned its attack. His passing and running in the first five games of the season were complemented by rushes by Herman Frickey and plunges by Don Buffmire. After these two were transferred Graham carried on alone and increased his own ball carrying and took over the responsibility of kicking.

Graham was an exceptionally strong defensive player, particularly against forward passes. He began the 1943 season as a member of the College All-Stars who defeated the Washington Redskins, 27 to 7. In that game he intercepted a Washington pass and returned 98 yards for a touchdown. He duplicated the interception feat repeatedly in subsequent games. Northwestern held Notre Dame scoreless for 29 minutes, partly because Graham intercepted two Irish passes in this time.

Second in Scoring.

During eight college games Graham carried the ball 87 times and gained 355 yards, an average of 4 yards. He completed 32 forward passes in 64 attempts and these gained 491 yards. After he took over Northwestern's kicking he had a 38 yard punting average and scored on seven of nine kicks for points after touchdowns.

Graham scored 61 points on nine touchdowns and seven points after touchdowns and he threw four touchdown passes. He finished second in scoring in the conference. Victories over Indiana and Ohio State, in particular, may be credited to Graham's passing skill. His individual performance reached a peak at Wisconsin when he played less than half of the game. In 24 minutes he scored four touchdowns, kicked three points, and passed for another touchdown.

Sets Conference Records.

In three years Graham has completed 157 passes in 321 attempts, an average completion of .489. The passes gained 2,162 yards. In 1942 he set a conference record of 89 completions in 182 attempts and established another conference record for one game when he completed 20 passes in 29 attempts against Michigan for 295 yards.

Graham is a versatile athlete. He has been runner-up in basketball scoring in the conference for two years and captains this year's quintet. He also has played regularly on the Wildcat baseball nine. He is enlisted in the navy's V-5 program and will be called to active duty upon graduation at the conclusion of this term.

The silver football will be presented to Graham at a time and place chosen by K. L. Wilson, Northwestern's director of athletics. The presentation customarily has been made between the halves of a conference basketball game.

OTTO CREDITS MATES

When informed that he had been selected to receive THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE award as the most valuable football player in the Western conference for 1943, Otto Graham expressed the hope that he could in some way share the trophy with his teammates on the Northwestern team.

"I am thrilled by the honor, but I realize that it was made possible only by the other players on the team," Graham said. "Whatever I was able to accomplish was due to the combined efforts of every one on the team. I will never forget the fact that my teammates selected me as their candidate for the award.

Graham said that receiving the most valuable player award was the outstanding event in his life and ranked with his selection to the college All-Star squad last summer. The Waukegan lad turned in one of the outstanding performances in that game which was climaxed with his 96 yard touchdown run after he intercepted a Washington Redskin pass.

Hutson Made Assistant to Packer Coach

BY EDWARD PRELL.

Don Hutson will spend his 10th season with the Green Bay Packers in 1944 as an assistant coach to Curly Lambeau. This announcement was made in Green Bay yesterday, thus making the last of Don's oft-repeated statements of retirement a fact.

The 30 year old Arkansas boy who won football fame at Alabama, then became the greatest scorer in National Football league history, will become a full time assistant to Lambeau and a co-worker with Richard [Red] Smith, the Packers' veteran line coach.

Directs Packer Attack.

It is believed that Lambeau and his associates made an attractive offer to keep Hutson in the organization. In making the announcement, Lambeau declared that never in his long, brilliant career had Hutson been more valuable to the Packers than this season.

"In addition to his ability to score points, Don was the leader of the team, the rallying point," declared Lambeau.

The coach revealed that Hutson called signals in the final 17 minutes of last Sunday's contest with the Phil-Pitt Eagles. As the strategist in this tight battle, Don called the signals which twice sent him down field for touchdown passes in a counter-rally when the Eagles were threatening to overtake the Packers.

Broken Fingers Don't Stop Him.

Hutson scored 20 points in this game despite two broken fingers on his right hand, the result of two mishaps. The first one occurred when a taxicab door slammed on his hand. In the first quarter of the game, while favoring the broken digit, a second one was fractured in a mixup.

SCHWABENS AND SPARTAS START NATIONAL SERIES

BY OFFSIDE.

The Spartas and the Schwabens will meet in Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, at 2:30 this afternoon in the opening match of the first round of the National Cup soccer series.

The Schwabens, who went thru the International league major division schedule without a defeat, will be without the services of two of their outstanding players, Bruno Zubko and Ernie Schaaf. Zubko, who tho in the army, had been able to play while stationed in this area, has been transferred, while Schaaf is on the injured list. Frank Kutsch, the team's center forward two years ago, has been signed to take Zubko's place, while Max Jordan will be at full back, replacing Schaaf.

Spartas Add Trio.

The Spartas, on the other hand, should be stronger today than they were during the regular season, when their performances were mediocre. George Hamous, on leave from his military duties, has joined his old club and two members of the Hakoah-Centers, Max Grunner and Max Pearlman, have been added in an effort to bring the team's offensive power up to a par with its recognized defensive ability.

The Swedes, who will play the Vikings next Sunday in another first round National Cup series game, will play the Workers in a practice match in Sparta stadium at 12:30, and the Vikings will work out in a match with the Kickers in Winnemac park at 2:30. Cup match line-ups:

MALLARDS VARY CORN DIET WITH OCCASIONAL FISH

Ducks Add Small Shad to Their Menu.

BY BOB BECKER.

Altho the mallard ducks that stay in the Illinois river valley during the waterfowl season are noted for the way they clean up the corn left in the fields by the mechanical pickers, not all of the birds rely on such an exclusive diet. On a trip which we made to the river a few weeks ago we were much surprised to learn that some of the mallards like an occasional small shad, a species of fish which is abundant in the sloughs and lakes along the river.

Of course the greenheads which take over the Illinois river bottoms during November and December and even the midwinter months are not offering serious competition to the fish eating ducks such as the mergansers. But apparently they overlook no bets when they are in the bottomlands, so when they see a half frozen, benumbed shad in a ditch or a slough the birds go for the tidbit.

Find Definite Proof.

John Lane, veteran hunter and duck caller who lives near the Chautauqua wild life refuge, called our attention to the fact that some of the mallards were eating small fish. He and M. L. Goodkind, Northfield, Ill., examined a hen shot by Lyman Barr, Highland Park, Ill. John couldn't figure what this bird had eaten. He could feel the recent meal in the bird's gullet and he knew it wasn't corn. It took only a few seconds to determine that this mallard had picked up three small shad, each about 2½ inches long.

Later, when all of us were using a blind among some willows, we walked out with Lane to break ice in front of the blind. The water was anywhere from two to six inches deep above the sticky mud bottom of the slough. There were shad by the dozens in this shallow water. Most of them were so cold that they could hardly swim and a mallard did not need the under water speed and swimming ability of a merganser to catch some of these fish.

Young Birds Are Numerous.

One of the most interesting things about the mallards which we have shot this fall, both with regular factory loads and our old time muzzleloader, is the number of juvenile birds in each string. That big migration which hit the river Nov. 9 was mostly juvenile birds, says the Illinois Natural History survey. It's very easy to distinguish a mature mallard from a young one. All you have to do is to look at the feet of the bird. An old mallard has reddish orange feet. They are what the hunters commonly call the "redlegged mallard" and for a long time sportsmen spoke of them as a different species. We have heard them called Canadian redlegs many times.

As the survey has determined, there is no such thing as separate species of redlegged mallard. The redlegs are mature birds. The mallards with pale yellow or pale orange feet are juveniles.

Stagg Voted Man of Year in Football Poll

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 11 (AP).—Amos Alonzo Stagg, College of the Pacific football coach, today was named football's man of the year by the Football Writers' Association of America.

Seventy-eight per cent of the votes went to the 81 year old coach who served at Chicago 42 years before going to the College of the Pacific in 1933.

Maj. John L. Griffith, Western conference commissioner, was runner-up, followed by Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame quarter back before he joined the marines early in November. Frank Leahy and Harry Stuhldreher, coaches at Notre Dame and Wisconsin, respectively, tied for fourth.

The selections were announced by Bert McGrane of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, association secretary.

He'll Receive Plaque.

Stagg will receive a plaque and will take possession of a trophy, inaugurated last year, on a one year basis. Comdr. Tom Hamilton won the honor last year when he was in charge of planning the program for the navy's pre-flight schools.

Stagg never has been farther from football than the sidelines since he pulled on a pair of quilted pants at Philipps-Exeter academy 60 years ago. After a year at the academy, he entered Yale and became such a football star he was named end on the first Walter Camp All-America in 1889.

Stagg was coach at the Y. M. C. A. college in Springfield, Mass., two years before going to Chicago when the university was founded in 1892. He became known as the grand old man of the Midway during his years there before he was forced to retire in 1932 by a university rule requiring retirement of faculty members at the age of 70.

Beats Chicago in 1938.

He declared at the time, "I feel good for 15 or 20 years more of active service," and within a few months was coaching at the College of the Pacific in Stockton, Cal., one of many schools that made offers for his services. His Pacific teams enjoyed great success. One of Stagg's thrilling moments was in 1938 when, at the age of 76, he took his team to the University of Chicago for a post-season game and Pacific won, 32 to 0.

Haggerty Has High Hopes at Orland Park

BY FRANK NORRIS.

Orland Park, a community of some 600 persons southwest of Chicago, is proud of its current high school basketball team. This same group of youngsters, unheralded last season, finished second in the Fox Valley league race and led the conference in scoring with 398 points. This group, practically intact from last year's team, is beginning its second season in an organized high school league. Orland Park was accredited as a four year school two years ago.

Coaching this newcomer to prep athletic competition is the veteran Frank Haggerty who has been in the profession as long as A. A. Stagg, now coach of the College of the Pacific. Haggerty has coached a number of leading college football and basketball teams including a term as line coach for the Great Lakes Naval Training station during 1918 and 1919.

Hewson Is Top Scorer.

The apple of Haggerty's eye on this Orland Park team is Bob Hewson, captain and forward. The youth is an all around athlete, playing football, baseball, and basketball. Last season he accounted for 178 of his team's 398 points. This is his fourth year on the first team.

Hewson scored 38 points Friday night as Orland Park swamped Plainfield, 62 to 35.

Two boys who started on the grade school team and now are regulars on the varsity, altho only sophomores are, Norman Kramer, the other forward, and Wally Yunker, the center. Kramer is an excellent dribbler and shot. Yunker excels on tip-in shots.

Use Fast Break.

Bob Estrand, senior, and Edward Gee, junior, are the guards. Gee is a transfer student and this is his first full season on the team altho he saw some action last year. Estrand is playing regularly for the first time after acting as a reserve for two years.

The team uses a fast breaking offense with a man to man zone or modified man to man defense. This system proved effective last year and Haggerty is confident it will produce again this season despite two early season defeats by Minooka and Oswego.

The annual St. George High football banquet held for the players by the Fathers' club will be held in the Belden-Stratford hotel, 2300 Lincoln Park West Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. Among the speakers will be Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe, Ed McKeever, back field coach at Notre Dame; Arch Ward, sports editor of THE TRIBUNE, and Norman Barry, an attorney, who will serve as master of ceremonies.

K. L. [Tug] Wilson, athletic director of Northwestern university, will be the principal speaker tomorrow night at the Foreman High school annual football banquet. The dinner will be held in the Irving Park Y. M. C. A., 4251 West Irving Park boulevard at 7 o'clock. Coach Jack Maloff will present the awards.

CALUMET HIGH BANQUET TO BE HELD TUESDAY

Calumet High school will hold its annual fathers' and sons' banquet Tuesday night in the Mount Zion Lutheran church, 81st and May streets. The occasion will honor the football team which won the south section title, the first time the school ever has captured an undisputed championship.

14 Teams to Play in Meet at St. George

Two south section members of the Catholic league draw the honor of opening the 10th annual St. George High school preseason senior basketball tournament Thursday evening in Evanston. They are De La Salle, the defending tourney champion, and St. Rita. The meet will run until the following Monday.

There will be three games the opening night, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock. Twelve of the 14 teams entered are from the Catholic league, six from each section. The only league members not participating are De Paul academy and Weber. The other two entrants are St. Gregory, a member of the Parish High school league, and St. Michael, a free lance Catholic school.

Two Teams Draw Byes.

The other Catholic league teams which will take part in the meet are St. Patrick, St. Philip, St. Mel, Loyola, Leo, Catholic High of Joliet, Mount Carmel, Fenwick of Oak Park, St. Ignatius, and St. George.

St. Patrick and St. Michael are paired for the second game on Thursday night's card and St. Gregory and Loyola are the rivals in the final match.

Friday night's first game matches Catholic High of Joliet with Fenwick. In the second contest St. Philip will encounter St. George and Mount Carmel and St. Mel will tangle in the third. Leo and St. Ignatius drew first round byes.

Two Double Winners.

Brother Julius, athletic director of St. George High, brought to light the fact that any team winning the tournament three consecutive years would receive possession of a traveling trophy. Only contestants to come close have been Mount Carmel and St. Patrick. St. Patrick won in 1935 and 1936 and Mount Carmel duplicated the feat the next two years.

The fifth annual junior tournament sponsored by Tony Lawless, coach of Fenwick, will begin Dec. 26. It has drawn entries from all the Catholic league members in addition to St. Michael and St. Gregory.

SCHOOL COMES TO WORKERS IN CHICAGO PLANTS

Total of 1,267 Enrolls in 43 Courses.

War workers in 30 Chicago plants are having school brought to them so they may train to better themselves and do a better was job, the Illinois Institute of Technology announced yesterday.

The companies are sending employes to school in their own plants, with enrollments in 43 different classes, the institute said. Of the 1,261 students, 74 are women.

The "in plant" courses are a service open to all war plants in the Chicago area and are free to both companies and their employes. They are underwritten by the United States office of education thru its engineering, science, and management war training program.

Management a Popular Course.

Industrial management for foremen is the most popular of the training courses. Almost half of the trainees, 525, are taking this work which is designed to give leadership training to people with supervisory positions in war industries.

Radio and electrical engineering, time and motion study, safety, industrial relations, metallography, drafting, quality control, and inspection are other fields in which employes are studying. One company has its workers training in six different courses.

The "in plant" courses have shown a tremendous growth in the last six months, the institute said. Only four courses were running six months ago; now 78 different courses are offered. John I. Yellott, director of war training, predicts "in plant" training will continue to increase until enough people are trained to meet demands for skilled workers.

Seek Unrecognized Needs.

A special committee of nine, the "industrial service group," has been set up to coördinate and arrange for courses for industry. Miss Cornelia Howe, director of the women's war training program, is coördinator of the committee.

Purpose of this group is to contact and assist industry in all ways possible, the institute said. It responds to requests to set up courses in the plants and is constantly searching for unrecognized needs in war industries, "needs that industrial executives themselves may not be aware of."

BUTTER MAKERS SUGGEST SHIFTS IN RATION PLAN

Changes in the rationing of butter were suggested by the American Butter Institute yesterday in announcing its two day meeting in the La Salle hotel Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. Hans Ruehe, executive secretary said, "The institute believes, first that butter should be rationed to a surplus by the following means: [a] separating butter from meat, cheese, and canned fish, in the ration grouping; [b] better control over civilian supplies and closer coördination between OPA, war food administration and the army and nay to this end; [c] critical reexamination of announced government buttter needs with a view to giving civilians a maximum allotment consistent with the genuine requirements of the war effort.

"Second, that inequalities which exist at present between the relative prices for butter fat used in making butter and prices paid for fluid uses and other manufactured dairy products must be corrected."

BREWSTER AERO TO GET REPRIEVE ON BIG CONTRACT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—A house naval subcommittee intends to recommend next week that Brewster Aeronautical corporation be given a period of grace, with a sharply worded warning that it must speed production of navy fighting planes or lose a multi-million dollar contract, it was learned today.

The committee will serve notice that it will reopen the inquiry later, and declare its action on continuing the contracts was motivated chiefly by the assertion of James V. Forrestal, undersecretary of the navy, that the navy desperately needs Brewster's Corsair fighters.

In some of the stiffest language ever used in a congressional report, it will denounce the activities of Tom De Lorenzo as president of local 365, CIO, United Automotive Workers, and will call on government agencies to study the evidence accumulated, and take whatever action is deemed necessary.

HOME BUILDING IN CHICAGO AREA SHOWS INCREASE

Construction in Suburbs Expected to Mount.

BY AL CHASE.
Real Estate Editor.

Home building in the Chicago metropolitan area was larger last month than in the same month last year. It also exceeded that of the preceding month. Builders expect it to increase at an accelerated rate during the next few months because of the new quota of 3,015 home priorities recommended by the national housing agency. This was disclosed yesterday in the monthly building survey by the Bell Savings and Loan association.

Arthur G. Erdmann [Moffett Photo.]

In 90 Chicago suburbs, home building last month was less than in either November, 1942, or October, 1943. This recession, however, is expected to be reversed, especially in towns near the big outlying war plants, when the new priorities quota becomes operative.

70 Suburban Homes.

Permits were issued last month for 70 homes, costing $366,188, in the suburbs, as compared with 104 homes, at $515,090, in October, and 224, at $1,060,602 in November of last year. In the entire metropolitan area, which includes Chicago, 90 suburbs, and unincorporated areas in Cook, DuPage, Kane, and Lake counties, there were 333 permits, at $1,279,157, last month; 326, $1,263,025 in October, and 280, $1,219,189 in November, 1942.

With the slowing up in war plant building, comparisons of last month's figures for all types of building with the same month last year make a poor showing. For example, in November, 1942, permits totaled $20,889,299 for the metropolitan area. Last month's total was $6,032,404.

Cancellations Reported.

"It's just as well not to expect that the swollen figures due to war plant construction will be maintained in the future," said Arthur G. Erdmann, president of Bell Savings. "The tendency seems to run toward cancellation of proposed work of this kind rather than to additional large scale construction.

"For example a report was expected from the building commissioner of Hammond of about 5 million dollars of new buildings for the Phelps Dodge Copper Products corporation. Instead he reported work had been stopped and only about $50,000 of preliminary work done. In Cicero a similar cancellation for a $150,000 addition to a large war plant was made."

On the other hand, Erdmann said, the East Chicago building commissioner reported a million dollars in new construction at the Inland Steel company's plant. This makes a total of $5,500,000 for new construction by Inland including 2 millions in September and $2,500,000 in October.

The North Chicago building commissioner reported a $1,953,000 addition to the Tantalum corporation plant.

MINE CONTRACT TERMS PUT UP TO CONFERENCE

Ickes Pact Revised Only Slightly.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—A subcommittee of soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers agreed today on the terms of a contract substantially matching the wages and working conditions of the Ickes-Lewis agreement under which the government is operating the mines.

The new agreement must cross several hurdles before it becomes a binding contract. It is subject to action of the joint conference of operators and miners which will meet next Friday. The conference represents about 67 per cent of the soft coal tonnage. The agreement also is subject to war labor board approval and to further adjustment of price ceilings more favorable to the operators.

Gets Retroactive Settlement.

In addition to terms of the agreement between Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior, and John L. Lewis, president of the UMW, the accord provides for the payment of $40 to each miner as a retroactive settlement for underground travel time since April 1.

Ickes, receiving the terms of the proposed contract, said in a statement:

"We are now making progress toward creating the conditions under which the mines can be returned to private management. The only way in which normal operating conditions can be secured is with an effective operator-miner contract."

Calls on Others to Agree.

He said it is now up to the operators who did not participate in the agreement to "reach an understanding with the mine workers at once, so that we can get on with the winning of the war without danger of further interruption of coal production." The principal operator groups not represented in the conference are the southern Appalachian and Alabama groups.

In transmitting the agreement to Ickes, the committee emphasized the fact that it will not become effective until the office of price administration has increased maximum prices of coal sufficiently to cover the increased costs occasioned by the agreement. The committee added that it was looking to Ickes for help in obtaining these increases.

The OPA boosted the price of soft coal an average of 17 cents a ton after the war labor board approved the Ickes-Lewis agreement. Operators say, however, that amount did not cover all the increased costs.

Lifts Average Pay Above $60.

The basic wage for inside day labor is $8.50 a day under the present and proposed agreement. With payment for underground travel time and overtime after 40 hours, this classification of worker would earn about $56 for a six day week. The average earnings for all classifications would exceed $60.

For all outside employes, including those at strip mines and coke ovens, a work day of 8 hours and 15 minutes is established, including 7 hours at straight time and 1¼ hours at time and one-half, with an intermission of 15 minutes for lunch which is not paid for.

For outside employes whose normal work day heretofore has been 8 hours, a work day of 8 hours and 35 minutes is established with time and one-half pay at old hourly rates for the additional 35 minutes.

WHITING PLANT TOPS LAST WAR TOLUENE TOTAL

Toluene, the basic chemical used in the manufacture of TNT, is being made at the Whiting, Ind., refinery of Standard Oil company [Indiana] in larger volume than was turned out by all sources in the country during World War I., the company asserted in an advertisment. Running in 79 midwest Sunday newspapers, it said the new toluene plant provides enough each day "for hundreds of tons" of block busters.

Processed from petroleum, toluene was described by the company as a clear, aromatic liquid, resembling gasoline.

1,300 WORKERS GET 3 MILLION LINCOLN BONUS

Cleveland, O., Dec. 11 (AP).—James F. Lincoln ordered about 3 million dollars in Christmas bonuses distributed today to 1,300 Lincoln Electric company employes, who he said are "the best as well as the highest paid" factory people in the world.

The 10th annual bonus payments average about one year's salary, but range from as little as $25 for some of the newer employes to $50,000 each for three engineers.

Lincoln estimated the firm has paid "about 12 million dollars" in bonuses since 1934.

Bar Ship Yard from Hiring New Workers

Lorain, O., Dec. 11 (AP).—The navy announced today a change of commands at the American Ship Building company yard here after the Lorain county war man power commission by unanimous vote of labor and management representatives ordered immediate stoppage of all hiring, the result of a dispute over causes of absenteeism.

Capt. Ralph T. Hanson, the navy's Cleveland area supervisor of shipbuilding, said Comdr. H. H. Harrison of Cleveland would replace Lt. Comdr. A. F. Hall of the naval reserve as assistant supervisor of shipbuilding here, effective next Wednesday.

Overtime Limited Earlier.

The twin moves came after the WMC limited overtime by ordering Wednesday that employes be restricted to 48 hours weekly on construction of frigate escort vessels for convoy duty. This was followed by two days of controversy between the company and the AFL Metal Trades council, composed of various unions represented at the yard, on causes of absenteeism which the plant's general superintendent, John Steiman, said had been running from 18 to 20 per cent daily.

Steiman suggested "patronizing of saloons" might be to blame for most of the absenteeism.

Order First of Its Kind.

Harry Lee, chairman of the AFL's general committee at the yard, denied this and declared "poor planning in every phase of shipbuilding is to blame."

Ward Riley, area WMC director, who described the no-hiring order as the first of its kind in the nation, reported that during three months ending Oct. 15 the company hired 1,800 workers, but gained a net of only 470, because 1,330 quit. Company and union officials agreed 700 to 800 workers were absent daily.

WLB ASSAILS CIO GROUP

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—Declaring it could not condone "flagrant and unjustifiable defiance," the war labor board today threatened to exercise all its enforcement powers unless a strike of workers at the Pine Grove and Lansford plants of the Pennsylvania Power and Light company is ended.

Angered by a telegram from Harold J. Straub, national chairman of the Utility Workers Organizing committee [CIO], asserting the strike would spread unless a discharged employe was ordered reinstated, the board replied it would not permit any union organization to "dictate" terms.

"This is still a government of all the people and not one which can afford to let a labor union issue such a challenge as that contained in Straub's telegram and get by with it," Wayne L. Morse, a public member, wired union local presidents.

DOUGLAS PLANT TO BE MANAGED BY BUCKWALTER

John C. Buckwalter.

John C. Buckwalter, who developed the DC-4 commercial airliner, now converted to the army C-54 four motor plane, has been named to succeed John D. Weaver as manager of the Douglas Aircraft company's Chicago plant, the company announced today. Buckwalter, formerly assistant plant manager, has been with the company since 1929. The plane he developed is being manufactured in the Chicago plant.

Weaver has been manager since the beginning of the Chicago project and has been recalled to the Douglas general office at Santa Monica, Cal., the announcement said. He has been with the company 18 years and formerly was in charge of the Oklahoma City, Okla., plant.

R. F. Dolan, from the general offices, has been named to succeed Buckwalter as assistant plant manager.

CLEVELAND NHA OFFICE MERGED IN CHICAGO UNIT

The Chicago and Cleveland regional offices of the national housing agency were consolidated in Chicago to effect administrative economies, announced William K. Divers, representative for both regions.

The states of Illionis, Indiana and Wisconsin will remain under the administration of the Chicago office, to which were added Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, formerly administered at Cleveland.

North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa, formerly in the Chicago region, were transferred to the Kansas City, Mo., office.

SPECIALTY LINE PACKERS MAY FACE HANDICAP

Disturbed by Kinks in Cattle Ceiling.

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

Packers who specialize in one or two classes of beef yesterday said they were apprehensive over severe pressure from two sources when the federal price control program for cattle becomes effective Wednesday. The squeeze was expected to arise from an unbalanced list of prices on various types of cattle and a possible loss of subsidy payments unless they can arrange to operate a diversified production program and buy some cattle in every class affected by the regulation.

The office of price administration recently explained how a packing plant buying all classes of cattle could protect its federal subsidy payment, but failed to make clear how a packer specializing in certain kinds of beef could stay in business under the handicaps expected for him.

The possibility of his being forced to operate at a disadvantage was evidenced in the OPA "example" of a buyer of 1,000 cattle monthly of all grades with a normal total expenditure of $138,000. He may buy various classes of stock over a wide price range without losing his subsidy, because the federal payment is to be based on his total expenditure and is not computed for each grade as it would have to be for the plant handling only one class of cattle.

Consequently, the plant operating a diversified beef program could pay more than the maximum prices established by the OPA on one class and offset this by paying less than the OPA minimum on another class of cattle, a practice which the packer specializing in one kind of beef could not do and still retain his subsidy.

Buyer Example Given.

To illustrate the method of determining eligibility for subsidy payment, the OPA took as typical a packer buying 1,000 head a month in the Chicago market. He bought choice stock within the "approved" price range of $15 to $16 a hundred pounds, good stock at $14.25 to $15.25, and medium at $12 to $13. The example gave the live weights as 147,541 pounds of choice, 362,609 of good, and 500,000 pounds of medium grade cattle.

The costs would be $22,131 to $23,607 for the choice, $51,595 to $55,216 for the good, and $60,000 to $65,000 for the medium cattle. Subsidy payments would be assured as long as the aggregate cost did not go below $133,726, the total of the minimum price on each grade, or above $143,822, the total of the maximums.

The typical buyer paid $138,000, and would receive his full subsidy payment, ranging up to $1.45 a hundred pounds. If he had paid $145,000 his subsidy would be reduced by $1,178, the difference between his highest permissible maximum and $145,000. Had he paid only $133,000 he would lose $726 of his subsidy, the difference between the allowable minimum and $133,000.

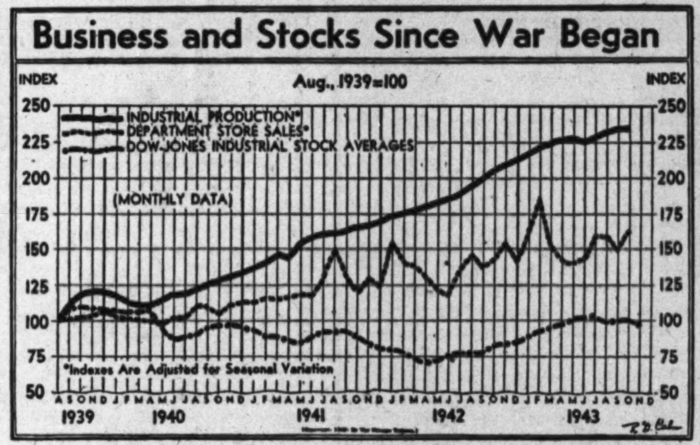
Could Pay Above Limit.

Based on the same reasoning, packers contend that the same buyer used in the OPA example, if markets for the various grades become sufficiently unbalanced, could pay $25,000 for choice cattle, above $17 a hundred pounds, $58,000 for good grades at more than $16, and $57,000 for medium at just above $11—without loss of subsidy.

However, the packer specializing in choice grades would be handicapped trying to buy at less than $17, and if he paid that price he would lose part of his subsidy. The same would be true for the buyer of good kinds, altho the plant specializing in medium beef would be able to compete against the plant equipped to handle all types of cattle.

Sperry Gets 125 Million V-Loan for War Output

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Thomas A. Morgan, president of the Sperry corporation, today said a regulation V-credit for 125 million dollars has been arranged by the corporation with 57 banks headed by the Bankers' Trust company, New York.



Fresh Buying Sends Grains to New Peaks

All deliveries of wheat and other grains sold at new high levels yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. Broad buying was attributed by brokers to inflation possibilities and lack of selling pressure. Wheat advanced 1¼ to 1⅝ cents a bushel, oats 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents, rye 1⅝ to 2 cents, and barley 1½ to 2½ cents.

Commission houses which frequently act for distillers were active buyers. Offerings were relatively light, however.

Farmers showed no disposition to sell, reports from leading markets indicated, altho wheat was selling about 30 cents above the government loan rate and oats at the highest price since 1920. The favorable price ratio as compared with hogs inclines farmers to hold grain for feeding purposes, brokers said.

Situation in East.

Reports from the east were that the feed grain situation had become increasingly tight since the office of price administration placed ceilings on oats and barley. Canadian oats were quoted at a premium above domestic grain at some points in New England after payment of an import duty of 8 cents and a Canadian export tax of 23 to 38 cents a bushel, with buyers eager to get the grain. The Canadian export tax on barley is 41 to 45 cents a bushel, and the domestic import duty 12 cents.

Ceilings set Friday by the Cash Grain association of the Chicago Board of Trade created an unusual situation by setting higher maximums for some poorer grades of oats and barley than were established by the OPA for number three grades. Another result was that there is now a ceiling of 87 cents a bushel on No. 2 white oats in the cash market while the ceiling on the December oats futures contract, which is for delivery of No. 2 white oats, is 5 cents lower at 82 cents. However, cash dealers said this was a "normal" relationship.

Doubt Ceilings Will Stand.

There was some doubt in the trade as to whether the OPA would permit the new ceilings to remain in effect. A representative of the board emphasized that the new ceilings were set by the association and were not official board rulings.

Last week-end the OPA placed a ceiling on No. 3 white oats at 80½ cents and on No. 3 barley at $1.26 at Chicago, specifying maximums for other grades "shall be the premium or discount as the case may be normal to the trade over or under these maximums." Cash dealers thereupon placed the ceiling on No. 2 white oats at 82 cents a bushel. Few oats were attracted to the Chicago market, and dealers said the ceilings were not high enough in relation to maximums at other markets. As a result, the maximums were advanced.

How the decentralization of the WPB will affect Chicago firms will be discussed Friday at a war problems school meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce in the La Salle hotel. Discussion leaders will be Carl J. Andrae, in charge of the WPB production service for the Chicago district; W. I. Buhl, in charge of critical tools service for the area, and John L. Brink, WPB regional manager of redistribution.

INT. HARVESTER PLANS FOR NEW ILLINOIS PLANT

Plans for the construction by International Harvester company of a farm machinery manufacturing plant in southern Illinois as soon after the war as conditions permit were disclosed yesterday with announcement by J. D. McGann, manager of Harvester's industrial engineering and construction department, of the purchase of a 375 acre tract of land on the Mississippi river between Alton and Wood River, Ill.

Approximately 3,500 workers will be employed in the plant, which will be of single story construction. Present plans provide for the construction of a foundry, forge shop, machine shop, and warehouse, with a central heating plant.

The amount of contemplated expenditures was not disclosed. The cost of the land was reported to be about $100,000.

McGann said plans had not progressed to the point where it was possible to say what farm machinery would be made in the plant.

MAYOR CAUTIONS AGAINST RISE IN TRACTION ISSUES

Commenting on the recent rise in price of Chicago traction securities, Mayor Kelly yesterday said, "I have noted evidence of considerable speculation in Chicago traction securities, with a resultant rise in price of these issues. If this speculation is stimulated by the belief that the city of Chicago will pay a fancy price for the traction properties, such speculators will be sadly disappointed. The city will pay only what these properties are really worth."

Chicago railway 1st certificates were quoted at 72 bid yesterday, compared with 68 on Dec. 7 and 63½ Oct. 18. The A certificates have gone to 20½ bid from 17¼ on Dec. 7 and 14¾ on Oct. 18. Calumet and Chicago certificates rose from 64 bid Oct. 18, to 68 Dec. 7, and to 72 yesterday.

AIRPLANE TIRE 'FINS' MADE AS SELF-STARTERS

Akron, O., Dec. 11 (AP).—The B. F. Goodrich company today announced production of an airplane tire with fins which act a "self-starters" to get landing gear wheels moving at a high rate of speed before they touch the ground.

The development, tested by a commercial air line, reduces tire wear and makes for smoother landings, Goodrich reported.

The tire was invented by Henry F. Schippel, a Goodrich engineer. Fins built into the sidewall are caught by the wind as the landing gear is lowered, setting the wheels in motion, Schippel said.

AIR LINE'S NET PROFIT CUT BY REDUCED RATES

3 Months' Traffic Much Heavier.

W. A. Patterson.

Reduced passenger, mail, and express rates offset large traffic increases and cut earnings in the third quarter of 1943, United Air Lines reported yesterday. Profit in three months was $1,151,741, equal to 77 cents a share, compared with $2,017,659, equal to $1.34 a share, for the third quarter of 1942.

Profit for the first nine months of the year totaled $3,305,141, equal to $2.20 a share, compared with $2,899,958, equal to $1.93 a share, for the corresponding 1942 period.

Expenses, Taxes Increase.

Operating expenses and taxes in the quarter totaled $5,664,907 against $3,604,552 for the third quarter of 1942. A part of the increase was caused by the allocation to third quarter accounts of certain substantial expense and tax items usually charged in the last quarter.

Revenue passenger miles of United Air increased more than 25 per cent, and mail ton miles gained approximately 45 per cent from the third quarter of 1942. Express ton miles decreased 2.7 per cent. If rates had not been reduced, W. A. Patterson, president, said, the company's third quarter revenue would have been increased by approximately $990,000.

The company yesterday registered with the securities and exchange commission 105,032 shares of 4½ per cent cumulative preferred stock, convertible prior to Jan. 1, 1954. The stock is offered to holders of common stock at $100 a share at the rate of seven shares for each 100 shares of common held on record Dec. 29, 1943.

Outboard Reports Gain.

Outboard, Marine & Manufacturing company profit was $1,171,057 in the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, equal to $3.94 a share, compared with revised profit of $912,470, or $3.07 a share, in the 1942 fiscal year. Profit was after a special post-war reserve of $1,300,000, compared with $300,000 last year.

Net earnings reported yesterday by corporations follow:

October.	1943.	1942.

TEXTILE UNION FIGHTS CEILING, ASKS MORE PAY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—Directing a new attack on wage ceilings, the CIO Textile Workers Union of America opened a national campaign today for pay boosts for its million and a half workers. Representatives of the union's cotton-rayon section adopted resolutions demanding a minimum increase of 10 cents and a minimum level of 60 cents an hour.

Emil Rieve, union president, declared similar action will be taken soon at a conference of wool labor leaders Dec. 18 at Worcester, Mass. He said he regarded today's session as the most significant, however, since the cotton-rayon section has 600,000 members, and the proposed salary gain would be 125 million dollars a year for this group alone.

Week's Stock Rise Is Broad; Trade Active

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—The stock market today finished its best recovery week since mid-September, with selected issues, including oils, farm implements, aircrafts, and specialties still attracting buying support. The general upswing got under way Monday and was interrupted only on Thursday by fairly insistent profit taking.

Dealings over the six day stretch were the liveliest in about a month. Best gains were shown by industrial groups, altho the rails and utilities made fair progress.

Various Factors at Work.

Reasons for the rally, which wiped out virtually all of November's loss, varied. Among them were: Waning of quick peace talk following the "big three" declaration of Iran, belief that year-end tax adjustments had about run their course, a revival of inflation thinking coincident with an upsurge of grain futures, appearance of substantial reinvestment demand for pivotals and "blue chips," and another batch of pleasing dividends and earnings compilations.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 0.1 of a point at 49.2 and on the week showed a net advance of 1.2 points, the widest comeback since the period ending Sept. 18.

American distilling again was the week's principal mover. It dropped 3¾ points today but, for the six days, was 7 points ahead.

RAIL BONDS ACTIVE

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—A wave of buying in loans of the Milwaukee railroad today boosted the bond market volume to the highest figures for a Saturday since early in the year.

Responding to the interstate commerce commission's announcement of a revised reorganization plan, Milwaukee issues pushed up fractions to around 5 points. Dealings in half a dozen of these issues alone totaled around 4 million. The 4⅝s of 1989 were up 4 and the C 4½s of 1989 jumped 4¾.

CHICAGO PRICES RISE.

Prices rose yesterday in turnover of 11,000 shares on the Chicago Stock exchange. Among the more heavily traded issues were Sinclair Oil, up ⅜; Commonwealth Edison, up ¼; Middle West corporation, unchanged, and Pennsylvania railroad, down ⅛. Eversharp, up ⅛, touched a new peak.

COURT DELETES SOME CHARGES AGAINST A. & P.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 11 (AP).—Federal Judge W. H. Atwell today deleted portions of an indictment charging the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company with violating the anti-trust laws. He partly sustained defense contentions that some of the allegations were inflammatory or unnecessary.

Several months ago the court ordered the indictment quashed because of imperfections claimed but the Circuit court at New Orleans reversed that decision.

Deleted were allegations of "preferential discounts," false front consumers and housewife organizations, "stock gains," and "short changing and short weighing." Judge Atwell also required the government to file specific data relating to an alleged conspiracy, including anything to link the Dallas A. & P. unit with it, as charged, to show venue.

Machine Tool Men Expect Oversupply, Plan Study

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—The machine tool industry has recommended formation of a post-war policy committee to work out the problem of surpluses, the WPB said today. In three years the industry has produced a normal 10 year supply.

ORDER CHANGES IN MILWAUKEE ROAD PROGRAM

ICC Complies with Court Decision.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—The interstate commerce commission today revised its plan of reorganization for the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad in line with a United States Supreme court decision last March.

The adjustments relate mainly to a determination of what the holders of senior bond issues should receive as equitable compensation for the loss of their senior rights, as required by the opinion.

One change makes Jan. 1, 1944, the effective date of the reorganization instead of Jan. 1, 1939.

The distribution of approximately 52 million dollars cash on account of interest accruing during the trusteeship is to be paid as follows: Milwaukee and Northern, first mortgage bonds, $212,759; Milwaukee and Northern consolidated mortgage bonds, $1,058,374; general mortgage bonds, $26,745,018; 50 year bonds of 1975, $24,021,885.

Allotted More Bonds.

The plan also calls for issuance of $7,096,336 in first mortgage bonds to the Milwaukee and Northern first mortgage bond holders, the Milwaukee and Northern consolidated bond holders, and the railroad's general mortgage bond holders, in addition to bonds allotted to them in the earlier plan.

A sinking fund for the retirement of first mortgage bonds is to be created.

The new capitalization totals $533,090,698, with annual fixed interest requirements of $3,481,903. The fixed interest debt of $92,176,972 includes $18,472,578 in equipment obligations with annual charges of $498,254; first mortgage bonds, $59,515,170, with annual charges of $2,380,607; Terre Haute bonds, $14,189,222, with annual charges of $603,042.

Improvement Fund Obligatory.

In addition to the fixed interest debt, other obligations include: Addition and betterments fund, mandatory payment, $2,500,000 annually; sinking fund for new first mortgage bonds, $148,788 annually; new general mortgage bonds, series A, $57,256,688, with annual charges of $2,576,550; Terre Haute bonds, representing contingent interest, $7,739,576, with annual charges of $328,932; additions and betterment fund, maximum additional payment, $2,500,000; new general mortgage bonds, series B, $51,422,111, with annual charges of $2,313,995; sinking fund for general mortgage bonds, about $543,395 annually.

Additional capitalization includes $111,347,846 in new 5 per cent preferred stock and $213,147,525 in new no par common stock, figured at $100 a share for purposes of the plan.

Investors' Guide

WAR BONDS.

Letters to the Investors' Guide disclose that some buyers of war bonds are concerned lest the government enact some new law or emergency measure prohibiting the cashing of these bonds for some time after the end of the war.

Three primary reasons are given for this concern: First, that repudiation will be resorted to in order to restrict consumer purchasing power and thereby restrain inflationary forces; second, that the government may have difficulty in meeting its obligations after the war; third, a precedent was established in 1933 when the government repudiated the gold clause in its own obligations.

So far as precedent is concerned, the government does not have authority to repudiate its own contracts. The Supreme court, in one of the gold clause decisions, held that congress went beyond its power in refusing to pay its bonds in gold where such payment was specified. However, the bondholder who brought the suit was refused relief because he could not show that payment in currency caused him any loss.

Opinions as to the likelihood of post-war inflation and its severity vary widely. One view holds that inflation is impossible in a nation with a 200 billion dollar annual productive capacity. At the other extreme is the view that runaway inflation is unavoidable. Majority opinion among the experts is more moderate, holding that inflation is a real threat but can be held in check by taxes, price controls, and rationing.

The contention that the government could find itself unable to meet its obligations presumes a serious deflation with commodity prices, business profits, and individual earnings falling, and tax revenues shrinking. But investors do not part with securities having a stable return in times of declining prices, for the purchasing power of the dollar is then rising, and this, together with uncertainty as to the future, tends to inspire saving and economy.

The arguments against the possibility of repudiation of war bonds appear to be considerably stronger than those supporting the contrary view.

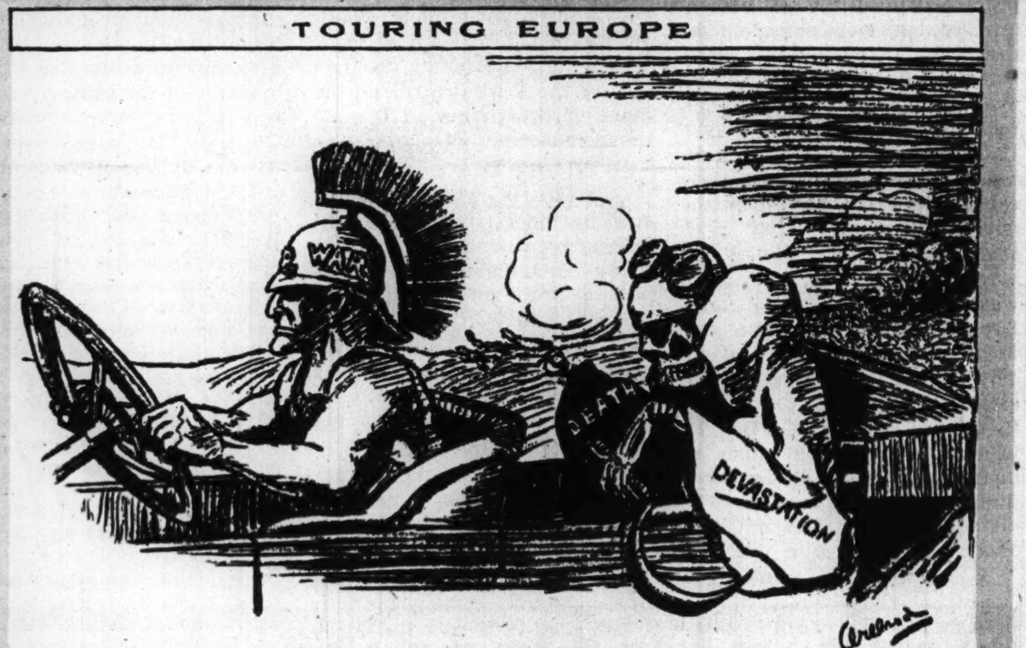
TOURING EUROPE



Frank Willard's first cartoon in The Tribune. Says Frank: "That was Aug. 1, 1914. I'll never forget it. I went right over to the store and resigned my job . . . and spent the whole day walking around Chicago looking at Tribunes on the newsstands with my cartoon on the front page."

Sympathy

At left: A few days later Willard clicked again, and The Tribune published this cartoon as a tribute to the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who had just died. "The people there [at The Tribune]," Frank comments, "thought I was a child prodigy—I was 21."

The Story of the Creator of a Great Comic Strip

By MARCIA WINN

Los Angeles, Cal.

ALONG ABOUT midnight two nights a week a man out here who looks a lot like Moon Mullins, that beloved banjo-eyed roughneck of the comic strips, begins to frown and procrastinate. He assumes the harassed expression of a man who knows he should have something on his mind, but what? He tries to postpone all thought and hurries out to a drug store trailed by a wire-haired terrier named Kayo, a pugnacious little beast that will attack an 81 pound Doberman and scamper gayly away. Here he buys an assortment of oddments—shaving cream, a razor blade or two, soap, a pile of cigars, any odd gadget he can find.

At last, beleaguered by his conscience, he comes home, saunters into a room fitted out as his studio, and changes his clothes. No matter how warm the night, he puts on long woolen underwear and a sweat shirt. Over the sweat shirt he puts a wool shirt, over the wool shirt a leather jacket. On his head he puts a battered navy blue baseball cap. Then he lights a fresh cigar.

There still are many things he can do to forestall work. He can persuade an electric pencil sharpener to devour a few pencils. He can open the window and place a screen before it. He can adjust and readjust a fluorescent light over his desk. He can drink a cup of black coffee from the 10 cup pot prepared and waiting for him. He can dive into the near-by jar of peanut butter, the bowl of prunes, the plate of sandwiches. He can polish and repolish his tortoise-rimmed glasses. He can chew his cigar. He can and does. Then he starts all over and does the same things.

Finally Frank Willard, the creator of Moon Mullins, settles down to continue on paper the hilarious life and adventures of his roughneck hero, Moon, and his all-star low comedy cast. Once he settles down, he never stops work until he has completed six daily comic strips or a full Sunday comic page complete with Kitty Higgins, a redheaded little imp. That may require from 24 to 72 hours (36 is the average), but it is not interrupted. A day or two days or even three days later Frank Willard stops and goes to bed. Fifteen hours later he gets up and goes out to play golf.

To the noncreative mind these antics may seem strange and remote. Mr. Willard's wife, who has to make the sandwiches and combat the cigar smoke with pine spray, considers them extremely eccentric. Willard takes exception to this. He says everything he does is based on pure logic.

"I can't think unless I am hot," he says, "so I put on long underwear and a sweat shirt and a wool shirt. Along about dawn it gets cold, and I can't work without fresh air, so I need the leather jacket. If I were to run my fingers thru my hair—and who doesn't if he has any hair?—I would get grease on my fingers and on the paper, so I wear the baseball cap. If I were to stop after one strip I'd lose continuity, so I don't stop. I get hungry when I work, so I eat. I drink the coffee to keep awake. So there it is . . . all reasonable, too."

Twice Mr. Willard tried to put creation on a businesslike basis. The first time he was very firm about it; firm and thoro. It took weeks to find an office with the proper lighting and additional weeks to furnish it properly and completely. He then sallied down at 9 o'clock one morning, fully and uncomfortably attired. At 9:15 he went home.

Years later he tried again. This time he rented an office, planked down $100 and bought a magnificent swivel chair which would swivel every way except upside down. When the chair was delivered he went down and sat in it, skidding it around the room to decide where to put the desk.

"And then," he says, "I forgot all about the darn thing. I'm telling you the truth. I remembered it a month later."

He never tried again.

Moon Mullins was 20 years old on June 23, and Willard was 50 in September. If Moon ever did anything according to Emily Post or the calendar of convention he would be 46 now, for he was 26 when he started out, but he is an ageless tough who retains his youth by reading the Police Gazette. So is Willard. There isn't a line on the face of either. This common asset may be traced to the slap-happy, boisterous outlook of both.

Willard flatly denies that Moon looks like him, but Mrs. Willard flatly contradicts Willard. Willard is more handsome (to give him due credit) and wears neither checked pants nor a Derby, altho he would like to, but both have the same piquant, impudent face, straight black hair, and round eyes. Willard's eyes are shielded by horn-rimmed glasses, and Moon's are encircled by a rim which gives the same effect. Both always wear a cigar between their teeth. Moon has worn his for 20 years. Willard has worn his 36, ever since he was 14.

Countless millions of persons of all colors, races, and tongues know Moon intimately (28,089,834 subscribe to papers carrying his adventures). At one time he was the only comic strip character in France, speaking French gutter patois as fluently as he speaks American slang. Before the war his antics were followed in England, Denmark, Italy, China, Africa, South America, and Mexico (where he is known as Juan Sin Miedo), but war has interrupted his appearance in all foreign countries except those of South and Central America. Millions know Moon and laugh themselves sick over him (a Chicago man once fractured a rib laughing at Emmy Schmaltz and threatened to sue

40 Years Prove Wrights Were Right

By FRANK STURDY

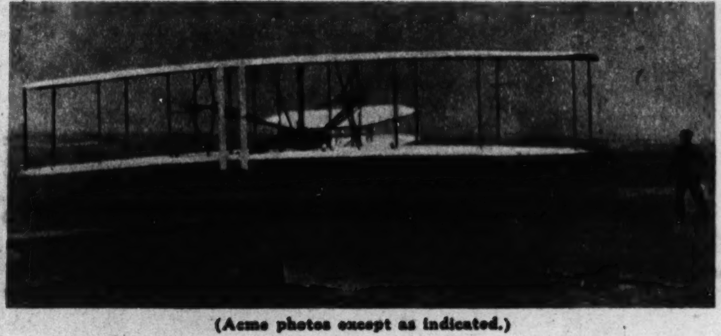
In 1902 the brothers made successful flights with this glider, incorporating the tail structure.



(Acme photos except as indicated.)

Orville Wright

Wilbur Wright, taken in 1910.

FORTY YEARS ago next Friday on the wind-swept sand dunes on the Atlantic coast line near the village of Kitty Hawk in North Carolina the Wright brothers became the first men to fly in a heavier-than-air machine capable of sustained, controled flight. The craft was their own invention and is recognized today as the first in the world that could truly fly with a man aboard.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent in the 1800s in efforts to build a successful heavier-than-air flying machine. Orville and Wilbur Wright not only succeeded where all others had failed but made their airplane and financed it with small capital gained from their bicycle shop in Dayton, O.

Many honors have been bestowed on the Wrights. However, not a few men of noteworthy scientific accomplishments were in the early days unwilling to give the brothers the full credit due them.

There has been too little public recognition of their abilities as true scientists. The truth is that they were not only studious and scientific in their approach to their goal but were handicapped at the start by inaccurate data accepted as true by eminent men of the time.

One of their important discoveries had to do with the lifting characteristics of wings. They began their work in 1899 by building a large biplane kite. Their success with it led to experiments at Kitty Hawk in 1900 with a man-carrying size glider. They found, however, that the wing area was insufficient to lift the weight of a man in winds of 17 to 21 miles an hour, altho wind pressure tables devised by Otto Lilienthal, a German and one of the most famous glider experimenters of the time, had indicated the area would be sufficient. The glider was moved to a down-sloping dune and the brothers piloted it in flights lasting 5 to 10 seconds.

These flights were sufficient to prove the efficacy of two Wright innovations—an elevator at the front of the glider to control balance fore and aft, and wing tip warping to maintain the balance of the wings laterally.

As the facts are related in the official biography, "The Wright Brothers," which Orville authorized, the brothers returned to Dayton, built a glider with 290 square feet of lifting area—the first one had 165—and in the summer of 1901 returned to Kitty Hawk for further flights in which they proved the deeper curve of the wing on the second glider was less efficient than the shallower curve of the wing of the first. Wing curve is known as camber. They reduced the curve and found the glider about as efficient as the first one.

While wing tip warping usually served to keep the wings level in free flight, the Wrights found that occasionally, when the tip of the low wing was warped to present a greater angle to the wind, the wing continued to drop instead of rising, as it was expected to.

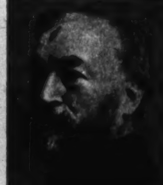
They discovered that when the tip was warped the greater angle offered more resistance to the air, the motion of the whole wing was retarded, and the loss in speed decreased its lift. It was evident that some additional control was needed to maintain equal wing tip speeds.

Some of the 1901 flights were witnessed by Octave Chanute, a well known engineer whose hobby was the study of aeronautics. He recognized the progress made by the Wrights and invited Wilbur to address the Western Society of Engineers in Chicago in September, 1901. In this speech Wilbur said the brothers had proved inaccurate much of the published material concerning the flow of air on curved surfaces.

Orville was somewhat hesitant at this bold undermining of established authorities, and to prove the correctness of his own and Wilbur's calculations he rigged a wind tunnel. It was a small box about 18 inches long thru which Orville passed a current of air. In the current he tested the behavior of various curved surfaces and satisfied himself that the Wright ideas were correct.

The brothers built a better wind tunnel, about 6 feet long and 16 inches square, and in the last two months of 1901 tested more than 200 types of wing surfaces. Theirs was the first wind tunnel.

Results of these tests provided the brothers with knowledge of wing lift characteristics from which they built a third glider. Its lifting area was about the same as that of the glider of the previous year, but the wing aspect ratio was 6 to 1 instead of 3 to 1. The wind tunnel experiments had demonstrated this would produce superior lift.



Prof. Samuel P. Langley

Aside from the increase of span from 22 to 32 feet the third glider differed from the second in the addition of two vertical vanes forming a tail. These were added to correct the difficulty encountered in balancing the wings the year before.

The Wrights made more than 1,000 gliding flights in this craft in September and October, 1902. They found the glider to be more efficient than any previously known.

Their tail vanes produced a difficulty, however, they had not experienced with their previous models. They found that when one wing tip dropped the glider had a tendency to slide sideways toward the low tip. In this case the sideways motion caused a greater pressure against the low side of the tail vanes than the wind presented to the high side, thus defeating their purpose and aggravating the turning motion around the vertical axis.

Orville solved this problem by suggesting that the tail vanes be made controlable by the pilot, so that they could be presented at a greater angle on the side of the high wing when necessary. This change was promptly effected, the two tail vanes were reduced to one, and with it the Wrights had devised all the principal flight controls of the modern airplanes flying today.

Their wing tip warping patent fathered the modern movable ailerons, and their controlable tail vane evolved into the rudder which is combined in modern practice with the elevator in the tail group, while the Wrights had their elevator mounted ahead of the wing.

The wings of the airplane had a span slightly over 40 feet; the upper wing was 6 feet above the lower, on which the engine rested a little to the right of the center. The pilot was to lie prone a little to the left of center. Runners were placed underneath the plane and projected ahead of it to prevent rolling over in landing. The tail had two movable vanes, as in the 1902 glider.

The Wrights returned to their camp near Kill Devil hill in the dunes in September, 1903, with their machine in readiness for assembly. Testing and bad weather delayed a trial until Dec. 14, when the plane was flown successfully on a down slope. This, however, did not establish its ability to lift and fly on level ground. On Dec. 17, in a wind of 24 to 27 miles an hour, Orville made the first true flight. It lasted 12 seconds. The distance was 120 feet, equal to about 540 feet in calm air.

Wilbur made the second flight, covering about 200 feet in 13 seconds. On the third trial Orville flew the same distance in 15 seconds. Wilbur made the fourth and last flight of the year, covering 852 feet in 59 seconds.

In succeeding years the Wrights built improved airplanes, convinced the entire world of the feasibility of flying and of their mastery of plane construction. They licensed companies to build their planes abroad, and fought and won suits against infringers of their patents.

Altho it is now conceded that they were the first men to fly and the builders of the first successful airplane, the Smithsonian institution in Washington for many years refused to recognize them. The controversy involved the "aerodrome," an unsuccessful heavier-than-air craft designed by Dr. Samuel P. Langley, secretary of the Smithsonian and an eminent physicist. Dr. Langley, working with funds of well over $50,000 over a period of years, had built models that flew, but his man-carrying plane failed, falling into the Potomac river from a launching platform in its final test just nine days before the date of the Wrights' successful first flight in 1903. The Wrights themselves were always on friendly terms with Dr. Langley, but after his death Dr. Charles D. Walcott, who succeeded him as secretary, declined to give the Wright airplane the place of first honor in the national museum.

In 1914 the Smithsonian gave Glenn Curtiss, who was being sued by the Wrights for patent infringement, a fee to attempt to fly the Langley plane. This was a few months after the Wrights had won a court decision against Curtiss and while another phase of the case was still pending.

Curtiss made changes in the plane and engine and flew it with pontoons from the surface of a lake for about 5 seconds. The report of the institution for that year said:

"It has demonstrated that with its original structure and power it is capable of flying with a pilot and several hundred pounds of useful load. It is the first aeroplane in the history of the world of which this can truthfully be said."

Later the plane was exhibited as "the first man-carrying aeroplane in the world capable of sustained free flight." No mention was made of the structural changes, without which the Wrights contended it never could have flown at all, when the machine was labeled and placed on exhibition.

In 1928, after negotiating for several years, the Science Museum of South Kensington, London, England, persuaded Orville to send the famous 1903 plane there for care and exhibition. Orville sent the plane abroad with deep regret, but in the belief that its absence from the United States would serve to draw public attention to the Smithsonian institution, "which in its campaign to discredit others in the flying art has issued scores of [these] false and misleading statements."

Dr. Charles G. Abbott succeeded Dr. Walcott as secretary of the Smithsonian in 1928. Discussions continued toward getting the Kitty Hawk plane back to the United States, but none of the proposals satisfied Orville's insistence that the Smithsonian retract and correct its previous statements until Oct. 24, 1942. On that date Dr. Abbott—who, it should be observed, inherited the controversy—issued a statement giving the history of the Langley machine and a comparison of the original model with the same plane as it was flown after modification by Curtiss. The comparison was written by Orville Wright, and of it Dr. Abbott's statement said:

The institution accepts Dr. Wright's statement as correct in point of facts. Inferences from the comparison are primarily the province of interested experts and are not discussed here.

The statement concluded:

1. I sincerely regret that the institution employed to make the tests of 1914 an agent who had been an unsuccessful defendant in patent litigation brought against him by the Wrights.

2. I sincerely regret that statements were repeatedly made by officers of the institution that the

Here's the low-down. All over the West Coast, and also in the Eastern States, folks go for the Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush in a big way. They buy so many that our sales in both areas are soaring.

But in this city, something is wrong. Sales of Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brushes with PROLON bristles are lagging behind. Why?

We believe the answer lies in one simple secret. East Coast and West have both learned to ask for the Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush by name! This is important, if you want the benefits given by regular use of this top-quality tooth brush. So read the reasons why it pays to ask by name for the Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush.

We guarantee that no brush at any price has finer or more costly duPont bristles. We guarantee that it is the only brush with gentler, round ends on each bristle. And, in writing, we guarantee the brush for six months of service, or a new one free.

There are two types of the Bonded Pro-phy-lac-tic. The regular (illustrated below) has the famous tuft to help clean the back teeth better. The 2-Row Professional has the same round-end PROLON bristles, but the brushing head is only one inch long, professionally compact. Get the shape that suits you best. Just be sure to ask by name for the Bonded Pro-phy-lac-tic.

"What shall I do to get a little action?"

WHAT'S A GIRL to do when she's all smiles and charms, wide-eyed and friendly, and her favorite character doesn't respond to her come-ons? Here's a harassed honey chile who has a particular hunk of man in mind and everything seems well lined up—but the boy in question just won't give with the undivided attention. Here's how the story goes:

"First off, I'm a senior in high school, a kind of luscious individual in a long-haired, cardigan-sweatered, average sort of way. I come from the smaller of two towns which use the same high school. Now, tho I don't date frequently and freely, I have the respect and friendship of most of the fellas in school.

"But here comes the $64 question: I'm sort of in love, and I just can't seem to make things come out right. You see, it's like this: My first day at high school I walked into freshman English feeling big and grownup, and for some reason I noticed a particular boy sitting in the second row. Today, about three years later, I still remember exactly what he was wearing and everything. But we never dated once.

"You see, Jim isn't the 'solid sender' type you always write about. He doesn't dance, and feels very embarrassed about it. He has had only two dates in his life, both with girls whom his mother almost made him take out. Really, he's not a drip, tho. He is very good looking, has a good line of jokes and a cute convertible. We've been the best of friends for lo! these many years, always eat lunch together, and I see him quite often 'round school. He's told his friends that he likes me—but how about a little action? How can I get him out, dating and so forth?

"I've tried two things. First, my girl friend, who knows him very well and goes steady with one of his friends, asked him if he didn't want to go on a double date. When he said, 'Whom shall I ask?' she suggested me and said that she'd arrange it ('cause he's bashful). He got angry and said that when he wanted to go out he'd ask the girl himself. Boom!

"Came the school dance. I plunged in. It was rather a touching little scene in which he refused because he couldn't dance! The next day he was so embarrassed, because he thought that I thought he was a drip, that he wouldn't come out of it until I gave him a little of the old hero worship. He lit up like a lamp, and I was so relieved!

"What shall I do to get a little action? I'm convinced, and he's apparently convinced, but something is holding back the dawn. I'd like to get an answer from some of your readers."

So where do we go from here?

Just to make sure that the bashful Jackson knows she is interested, perhaps this honey chile could try a couple more friendly approaches via the friendly gesture method. F'rinstance, if the boy is so enthusiastic about talking over a sandwich and coke at noon and between classes, why not ask him casually if he'd like to come over some evening?—make it a very definite evening.

It might make him more at ease to get to know a girl on home ground. And if he accepts one invitation and enjoys it, slip him another while that one's still warm. But if he doesn't respond after two tries, just cross that home-and-hearthside approach off your list.

Time now to change techniques—reverse and double time! Don't try to get him interested. Don't go out of your way to have lunch with him, to talk to him in the halls, or to bolster his ego with attention. Course, you're not going to give him the rough and final brush-off, but just let him worry about you for a while. After all, dating is supposed to be a fifty-fifty proposition—what does he want you to do? Set bear traps?

Does any one have any suggestions on how to get these fine hunks of men back in the groove and onto the gravy train? If you have any ideas, send them in.

THE OTHER DAY, when everything was peace and quiet in my office and I was just about ready to leave for home, Paulette Goddard phoned and said: "Hi, Hopper! How about doing a Sunday story about me?"

"Wait a minute! What makes you think you deserve a Sunday story?"

"Well, you've done nice pieces on Claudette Colbert and Barbara Stanwyck."

"O," said I, "arent you elevating yourself these days?"

"No," was her come-back. "I think I deserve a Sunday story. Wait till you see me in 'So Proudly We Hail.'"

"Well, my fine-feathered friend, I'll just take you up on that and wait. And if you're good you get the story."

She was—and here it is.

There's one thing certain about Paulette. No one will ever accuse her of being a shrinking violet. And I didn't know until a short time ago that we knew each other 'way back in the dark ages when she was 12 and I knew her aunt and uncle, the Charlie Goddards down at Great Neck on Long Island sound. I was living at Great Neck at the time, and every Saturday and Sunday the Goddards held open house, with a dance floor in the garden, a band, Japanese lanterns, and all the trimmings. They had two children, and frequently a little girl visiting them. I used to catch the three faces peering out from a bedroom window at the party going on. In fact, I've gone over and talked to them, but didn't know until the other day that one of those "peeping Toms" was Paulette Goddard. She said: "I made up my mind then that I was going to be a great star and that I'd be more famous than anybody out there. It just had to be. I watched the biggest ones—how they walked, danced, dressed, behaved. And I kept saying: 'I can do it much better. And some day I'll prove it to the world.'"

Well, the little minx has kept her word. Who would ever have believed that she'd now be making $5,000 a week, with a seven year contract, no options, and one outside picture a year? That's what she's doing. And then she has a right to do as many radio dates as she can get, with as much money as she can beg, borrow, or steal from the producer.

She started out in the movies as just another pair of shapely legs and a pretty face. And now bombers are named for her.

When Paulette works she works. She has the most terrific vitality, and she's rarely ever sick. She doesn't go out nights when she's working. I don't say that she stays home alone, but she doesn't go out to parties or dancing. Her career means too much to her to take a chance of looking red-eyed the following morning. And it's been quite a jump from the chorus of "Kid from Spain" to the star role of "I Love a Soldier," which was written especially for her.

There's been nothing too tough for her to do or learn in her business, and you can underline that word "tough."

A few years ago, when she was making some bad pictures, a friend said, "Why do you take scripts that are left over by other people?" She was smart and honest enough to say, "Because I'm not yet ready for the good ones."

But when she felt she was ready she went after them, and nothing and nobody stood in her way. She outfoxed Cecil De Mille into giving her the part of an Indian girl in "Northwest Mounted." Having got a taste of C. B. and his methods, she wanted more—and she got it in "Reap the Wild Wind." There were some days when they went at it hammer and tongs, but she learned to take it and came out a full-fledged star, with even Cecil (who is the toughest taskmaster in our business) singing her praises.

She took a lot, too, from Charlie Chaplin in "The Great Dictator." I will say for her she's the only woman who's ever got the better of that little man. She took his name and listened, and when she was ready to stand on her own two feet she stepped out and away from that headache.

After "Reap the Wild Wind" the company sent her to Charleston, S. C., for the grand opening there of the picture. Constance Collier went along as chaperon. They stopped off in Washington. where Constance introduced her to Lord and Lady Halifax, and while there she met Harry Hopkins and the President. Nothing is too good for our little Paulette, who got to know the White House almost as well as the Paramount lot, and came from that little eastern visit with a whole new set of diamond jewelry so brilliant and beautiful it looked as tho only a lend-lease could have paid for it.

She was very coy about the whole trip. Of course we all thought she would be the next Mrs. Hopkins, but a month later he announced his engagement to Louise Macy, which amused Paulette no end, and she kept saying: "Isn't it wonderful! Louise is such a nice girl."

She paused long enough to do a couple of pictures, then took herself off to Mexico City, where she made some more history. Now she has a winter palace and a summer palace down there. Her walls in her Beverly Hills home are so crowded with Mexican paintings and objects of art that if she gets any more she'll have to build an addition to the house. Diego Rivera has painted her three different ways. Unless a movie interferes she expects to spend the holidays south of the border, and I'm told that she has cars down there to match the color of her gowns.

Michael Arlen calls her the most civilized girl in town. You've got to admit she's one of the most intelligent. At a party, if there's chitchat or silly gossip going on, Paulette moves on to the next group until she finds people with interesting conversation from whom she can learn. Her sense of humor is a delight to behold, and she never aims a joke at any one else's expense. There are no poisoned barbs in her makeup. If she likes you the sky's the limit. If you don't like her she never stops till she's won you over to her side.

When it comes to dressing she'll take a back seat to none. On a radio show where she appeared with Claudette Colbert and Veronica Lake she had to outshine the other two, so wore a form-fitting black satin dress slipping off one shoulder, and as a shoulder strap she used her diamond necklace, which gets a gasp out of everybody—even those people who are pretty excited about Mrs. McLean's Hope diamond.

When she comes to the Canteen she spends hours dressing for the boys. Of course some unkind person might say that it was undressing, but the boys love it. She knows the value of clothes and that it's part of her business to look the part of a star on every occasion. I've never seen her when she didn't adhere to that line.

When it comes to business I'd put her up against Shylock. She took over Burgess Meredith's farm up near Hyde Park and let the government plant the land, then made a profit off the crops.

Her mother, getting bored with social life, said: "If you buy me some vacant houses in Beverly it'll give me a job decorating them. Then I can either rent them or sell them at a profit." To date she and her mother have made a profit off four.

Her best friend is Jinx Falkenburg. When she asked Jinx to come and live with her she said, "Bring your maid along." The maid also did the cooking. And Jinx started teaching Paulette how to speak Spanish. To perfect that language she brought a couple of girls up from Mexico. One now serves as her studio secretary and another is a housemaid.

You might call her the modern Du Barry, and you'd be right on the beam. She has the same methods and the same charm and can be just as ruthless when it comes time to make a bargain.

But in all of this she never forgets for one moment that acting is her job and that's where the real gold lies. Yes, you can dig it and you can mine it, but when the gold is refined Paulette gets it. And I'm right here to give the little girl a great big hand and a lot of credit. She worked her head off for the chance, and can she help it if she's now cashing in?

WRIGHTS

Langley machine was flown in 1914 "with certain changes of the machine necessary to use pontoons." without mentioning the other changes included in Dr. Wright's list.

3. I point out that Assistant Secretary Rathbun was misinformed when he stated that the Langley machine "without modification" made "successful flight."

4. I sincerely regret the public statement by officers of the institution that "the tests" (of 1914) showed ".that the late Secretary Langley had succeeded in building the first aeroplane capable of sustained free flight with a man."

5. Leaving to experts to formulate the conclusions arising from the 1914 tests as a whole, in view of all the facts I repeat in substance, but with amendments, what I have already published in Smithsonian Scientific Series, vol. 12, 1932, page 27:

"The flights of the Langley aerodrome at Hammondsport in 1914, having been made long after flying had become a common art, and with changes of the machine indicated by Dr. Wright's comparison, as given above, did not warrant the statements published by the Smithsonian institution that these tests proved that the large Langley machine of 1903 was capable of sustained-flight carrying a man."

6. If the publication of this paper should clear the way for Dr. Wright to bring back to America the Kitty Hawk machine to which all the world awards first place, it will be a source of profound and enduring gratification to his countrymen everywhere. Should he decide to deposit the plane in the United States National museum it would be given the highest place of honor, which is its due.

Only Orville Wright can decide where the Kitty Hawk plane, the most revered aeronautical relic in the world, shall eventually be placed on exhibit. It was agreed when the plane was sent to London that it should stay there unless brought back to the United States before Orville Wright's death.

The Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson park, Chicago, is most anxious for the honor of housing the plane and is prepared to place it in the central hall, flanked by other aeronautical exhibits, to demon-

REVEALS THE HIDDEN BEAUTY IN YOUR HAIR

FIX IT WITH FIGS

By MARY MEADE

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

HOLIDAY STEAMED PUDDING

(Serves eight)

2 cups cranberries, cut in halves
½ cup molasses
½ cup hot water
½ cup sugar
½ cup raisins
1½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda

Combine cranberries, molasses, hot water, sugar, raisins, and flour and soda which have been sifted together. Turn into one large or eight small molds filling two-thirds to three-fourths full. Steam for 2½ hours (steam small molds about 1 hour). Serve warm with any preferred sauce.—MRS. MATILDA VAUGHN, 315 North Oneida street, Appleton, Wis.

IT'S BEEN a long time since we've seen a dried apricot, hasn't it? But there are other dried fruits available with which you can make delectable upside-down cakes—figs, for instance.

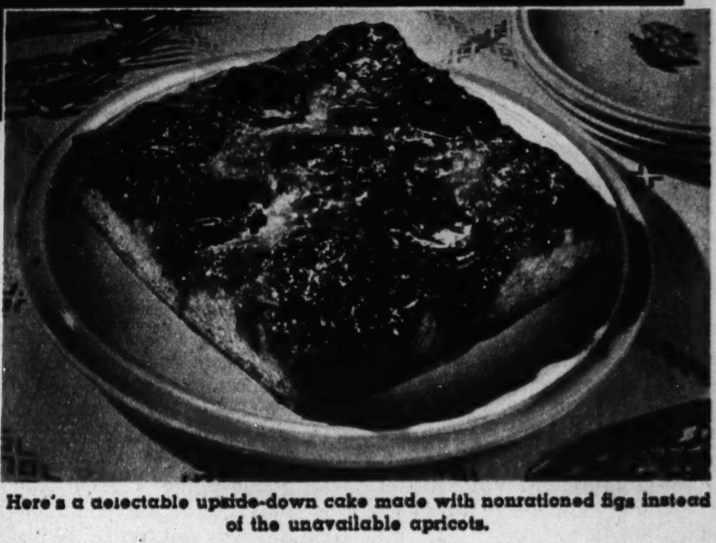
Figs are point-free and nutritious. A normal supply has come to market, too. So fig upside-down cakes and fig puddings are in order. Steamed or baked fig pudding is a possibility for Christmas dinner or supper dessert.

FIG UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

(Serves four or five)

About 6 dried figs
2 tablespoons margarine
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup orange marmalade
¼ cup chopped walnuts (optional)
¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup milk
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Prepare topping first. Cover figs with boiling water, cover pan, and simmer 10 minutes. Drain, clip stems. Melt margarine in small skillet and add brown sugar and marmalade. Mix well and spread evenly over bottom of skillet. Arrange whole or halved figs over this and sprinkle nuts between. Now mix batter. Cream shortening and sugar, beat in egg, then lemon juice and vanilla. Beat well. Add milk alternately with sifted dry ingredients, beating smooth. Pour batter over figs and bake at 350 degrees about 40 minutes. Turn upside down on platter and serve warm, plain, with cream, or with any sauce you like. For a large cake, double the recipe and bake in an 8 inch square pan 1 hour.



Here's a delectable upside-down cake made with nonrationed figs instead of the unavailable apricots.

BAKED FIG PUDDING

(Serves six to eight)

2 cups dried figs
¼ cup fat
½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk

Cover figs with boiling water, let stand 10 minutes, then drain and cut into pieces with scissors. Cream fat and sugar, add egg and vanilla. Sift flour, baking powder, and salt and add alternately with milk, beating well after each addition. Stir in figs. Bake in 8 inch square pan at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Serve hot with lemon sauce.

Raisins are one of the rationed dried fruits. This pudding doesn't require an excessive amount of them, tho, and it's a very good pudding.

RAISIN PUFF PUDDING

(Serves six to eight)

2¼ cups sifted self-rising cake flour
¼ cup sugar
1 cup raisins
1 egg, beaten
¾ cup milk
2 tablespoons melted margarine

Sift flour and sugar. Add raisins. Beat egg and combine with milk and margarine. Add liquid to flour all at once and beat until smooth. Steam in well greased mold (1 quart size) or in the greased top of your double boiler for 1 hour, or until done. Serve with lemon sauce or hard sauce made with margarine and flavored with a little sherry.

Any combination of dried fruit or mixed candied fruit may be used in place of the raisins. If you can't get self-rising cake flour, use 2¼ cups cake flour plus ¼ teaspoon salt and 2¼ teaspoons baking powder.

strate their debt to the Wright plane, the progenitor of them all.

There are strong reasons why the middle west should lay claim to the plane, with the hope that Orville Wright will accede. First, the Wrights' home in Ohio stamps them as midwesterners, and their earliest recognition as scientific investigators came at the 1901 meeting at Chicago.

The Chicago museum, one of the most famous of its type, already houses a vast collection of educational exhibits covering virtually the entire field of the sciences, in a building that would assure the Wright plane the surest protection. It is one of the most completely fireproof buildings in the world. The building is largely steel and concrete, with brick walls in some places three feet thick, and an exterior of stone.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Bryn Mawr, Pa.

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE appears exactly what it is, a stronghold of taste and tradition.

Bryn Mawr's main footpath entrance is thru a massive stone arch, known as the Owl gate, in the central tower of Rockefeller hall, that leads to its broad stretches of college green, almost braceleted by a chain of low, many-chimneyed gray stone buildings, heavy with ivy. It seems the ideal world of the mind and the spirit, buttressed by physical solidity, mellowness, and peace.

Bryn Mawr's heart is where its class bell hangs in a tower—Taylor hall, named for its Quaker founder, Dr. Joseph Wright Taylor. This, the first of its academic buildings, was built when the college opened in 1885, and serves now for administration offices and some classrooms. Traditionally Taylor steps are the property of seniors, relinquished with a farewell sing and some ceremony each spring when seniors move out and the juniors take over.

The freshmen's introduction to the wealth of Bryn Mawr tradition that has flourished down the years is lantern night, observed early in October, when, wearing caps and gowns for the first time, they line up in horseshoe formation in the dark library cloister. Sophomores, carrying lanterns lighted in the freshman class colors, come thru the arches singing their Greek lantern hymn, form a horseshoe within the one the freshmen already have made, then pass their lanterns to the freshmen, who file thru the cloister garden, singing their Greek anthem as they go.

Alumnae, on their return, love to revisit the Deanery, once the home of former President M. Carey Thomas, for whom the school's extensive and handsome library is named, and her gift to the college as an alumnae house.

May day is memorable at Bryn Mawr for its Maypole dancing, hoop rolling, and the May baskets which sophomores give to seniors. Hall traditions are abundant. The residence halls, with ivy walls and leaded windows that stretch along two sides of the upper campus, are sentimental shrines to Bryn Mawr girls. Merion, Denbigh (one wing of which is used as a German house, where only that language is spoken), Pembroke East and West, Rockefeller, Wyndham (a French house), and Rhoads all have developed traditions and celebrations of their own. This year, incidentally, there is a Spanish house on the first floor of Radnor, the graduate hall of residence.

Bryn Mawr is a singing school. The college choir, the glee club, and the Madrigal club are official and popular student institutions, reflections of the exuberance and love of music that seem to make Bryn Mawr girls break into song whenever and wherever they gather in groups, whether on the Taylor steps or at a tea table at the Deanery.

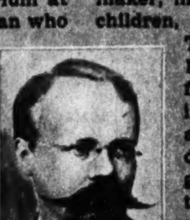
Tho by tradition and structure Bryn Mawr is entirely unlike the average midwestern college, a large and active group of midwest girls are represented in its enrollment, which numbers close to 500. Nancy Scribner of Winnetka, who will be graduated in the spring, is an outstanding student, chairman of the subfreshman committee, president of Madrigal, and varsity hockey captain. She, like Julie Turner of Geneva, Ill.; Margaret McEwan of Winnetka, Constance Chester of Milwaukee, Mary McAllister of Grand Rapids, and countless others, is a second generation student. A prominent student is a Chicagoan, Freshman Eva Krafft, who holds the alumnae regional scholarship for this district.

"HANSEL and GRETEL"

"Hansel and Gretel," starring Marion Claire, Bruce Foote, and Ruth Slater, will be presented by the Chicago Theater of the air from 8 to 9 p. m. (C.W.T.) Saturday, Dec. 18, on W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network.

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

WHEN professors unbend they quite often give to the world something of more value than their academic specialty. Thus Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, professor of mathematics at Oxford, assumed the pen name of Lewis Carroll and amused himself by writing "Alice in Wonderland," to the everlasting delight of satire lovers the world over, and A. E. Housman, a Latin professor at Cambridge, enriched English literature by some of its rarest lyrics in "A Shropshire Lad." And it remained for a professor of music at the Hoch conservatorium at Frankfurt am Main, a man who had been the associate of the great Richard Wagner, and burdened with the world's weightiest musical learning, to write the perfect—indeed, the only—opera for children, "Hansel and Gretel."



Humperdinck

The opera is in effect a gift from Engelbert Humperdinck to his nieces and nephews, the children of his sister, Frau Adelheid Wette, wife of a physician in Cologne. It had been Frau Wette's custom to write little plays for production in the family circle and to send these to her composer brother to be provided with the necessary music. One of these little family plays, based on the Grimm brothers' fairy tale of Hansel and Gretel, so struck the young professor's fancy that he elaborated it into a full-size opera. All the erudition which he had absorbed during his long training, and all the ponderous Wagnerian mechanics of composition, including the complicated system of "leading motives" whereby each character or situation is tagged with a characteristic musical phrase, went into the work, together with his love for children and his typically German feeling for folklore and the music which sprang from it.

Happily, inspiration guided his pen, and what might have been another forbidding essay in scholarship turned out to be an opera filled with lovely melody set in a richly colorful orchestral background. Tho there is nothing that particularly connects the fable with Christmas, ever since the first performance of the opera at Weimar on Dec. 23, 1893, it has seemed appropriate to the holiday season; and once the novelty wore off—for its initial success carried it around the world—it became a staple in the repertoire of every opera house at Christmas time.

The ancient fable, beloved of every child, is that of the broommaker, his wife, and their two children, Hansel and Gretel. The mother comes home weary from a futile day spent in trying to sell brooms, and sends the children to the woods to gather berries, that the family may have something to eat. The children depart and the tired mother falls asleep. When the father, who has had better luck and sold all his brooms, returns with food and gifts for the children, they are nowhere to be found. The parents start out in search of them. The second act reveals the two children lost in the woods. At length, utterly exhausted, they meet up with the Sandman, say their prayers, and drop off to sleep, while down a golden staircase white-robed angels descend to watch over them. In the morning they start out again and come to a sugar candy house inhabited by a fearful witch, who tries every trick in her power to turn the children into gingerbread. But Hansel and Gretel are too wily for her, and it is the old witch who gets thrown into the oven, breaking the spell of enchantment and turning back into human beings the other boys and girls she had trapped with her magic. Then the mother and father appear and all ends joyously with the hymn of thanksgiving:

When past bearing is our grief,
God the Lord will send relief.

75 BADLY BURNED MEN WILL LIVE

AMONG 75 "burn cases" recently admitted to a large Naval Hospital were some with burns covering as much as 60% of the body surface.

By all known evidence, many should have died. Yet not one did. And the great majority have returned to active duty.

Mothers, who must always be prepared for the first aid treatment of burns in their own families, will be interested to know that the substance used in the local treatment* of these remarkable cases was Petrolatum—better known to millions under the trade name 'Vaseline' Petroleum Jelly.

Today reports on burn treatment . . . including the local use of Petrolatum . . . are making medical history.

. . . It was used in the terrible Cocoanut Grove fire in Boston . . . as reported in Annals of Surgery, June 1943 issue.

. . . It has proved rapid and effective in the treatment of minor burns in war industries . . . as recently reported in another leading medical journal.

. . . It has been officially recommended in the first aid treatment of burns by the Medical Division of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Remember—every year in American homes there are actually millions of burn accidents. If you do not have a jar or tube of 'Vaseline' Petroleum Jelly in your medicine cabinet now, it will pay you to keep one on hand for the protection of your entire family.

Look for the trademark VASELINE, your guarantee of absolute purity.

FIRST AID TREATMENT OF EVERYDAY BURNS IN YOUR HOME

Bandage firmly—but not too tightly.

Call your physician immediately if the burn is deep or covers a wide area.

*NOTE: 'Vaseline' Petroleum Jelly (Petrolatum, U.S.P.) gives immediate relief and protection to the local burned area. In addition to this local treatment, serious burns often involve the use of blood plasma, sulfa and other drugs.

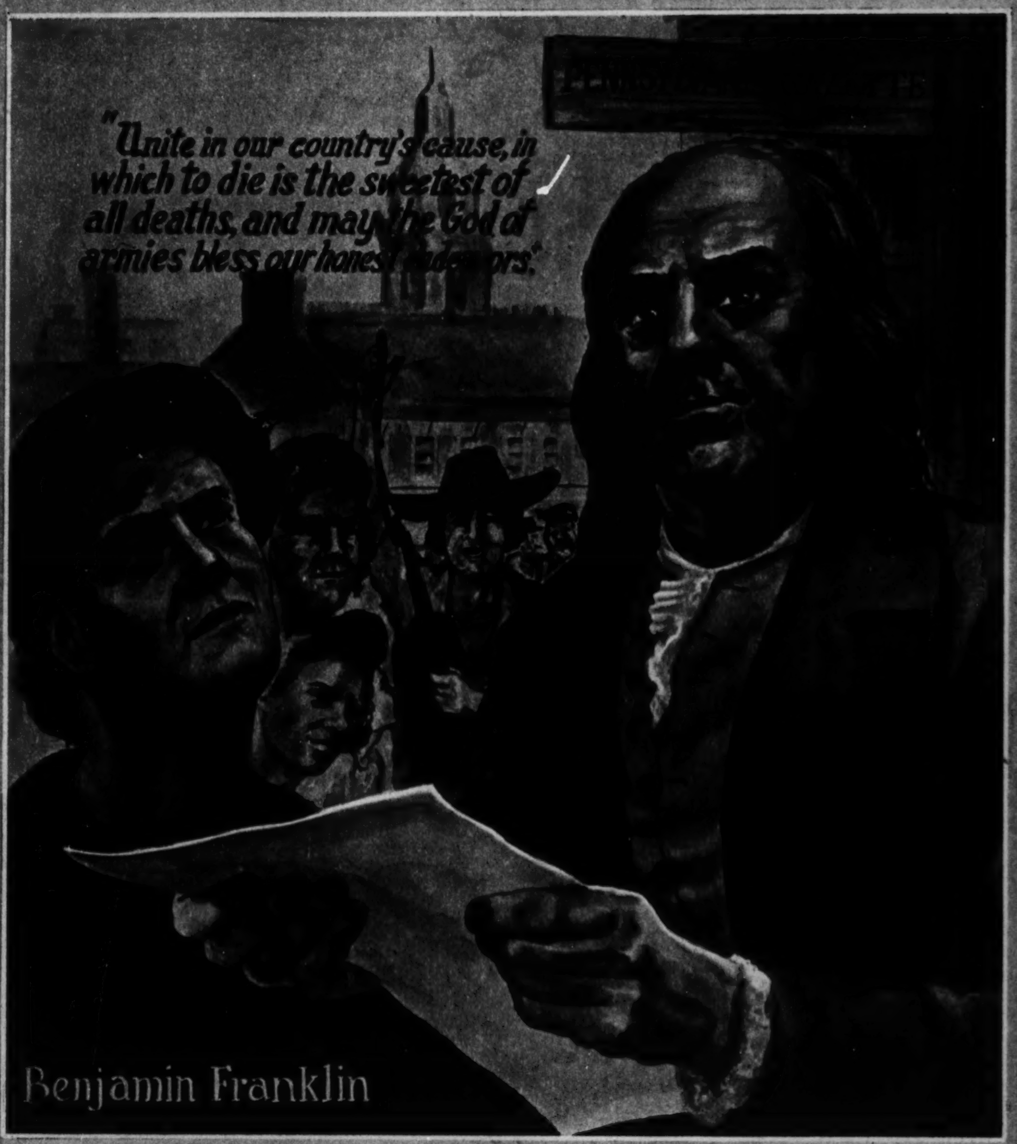
ROMANTIC FIGURES of AMERICAN HISTORY



"Unite in our country's cause, in which to die is the sweetest of all deaths, and may the God of armies bless our honest endeavors."
Benjamin Franklin

The dramatic illustration above, by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak, is another of the series appearing currently in this section with biographical sketches.

IT IS BARELY possible that a scant few other Americans may have been greater than Benjamin Franklin, but it is doubtful if any have been more human. Philosopher, statesman, scientist, man of letters, and patriot, Franklin will live to eternity in the affections of his countrymen. His achievements were so great and so numerous that it would be next to impossible to sum up all of them in anything less than a large book.

He was born in Boston on Jan. 17, 1706, and at the age of 12 was apprenticed to his half-brother James, who operated a small printing shop in Boston. In 1723 he went to Philadelphia, where he worked at the printing trade until, persuaded by William Keith, governor of Pennsylvania, he sailed for London to complete his training as a printer. After 19 months in England he returned to Philadelphia, where in 1728 he established a printing shop for himself.

In September, 1729, he purchased the weekly Pennsylvania Gazette. Under his direction its circulation grew to about 10,000, the largest in America at that time.

In 1732 Franklin wrote and published his first "Poor Richard's Almanack." It was this series of books that made a fortune for him.

Having been appointed printer for Philadelphia as early as 1730, Franklin began taking an important part in public affairs. He founded the first circulating library in America, was selected as clerk of the Pennsylvania assembly, and organized the first fire company in Philadelphia. In 1737 he became postmaster of Philadelphia, and in 1743 he founded the American Philosophical society. Shortly after this he began his experiments with electricity. His idea of electric particles, basis of the electronic theory, was a century ahead of his times.

A year before he retired from the printing business in 1749 he was elected to the Philadelphia city council. In 1750 he was elected to the Pennsylvania assembly, of which he remained a member for 14 years.

Of great service to the British in the French and Indian war, he was sent to England in 1757, where he was received with acclaim in scientific and literary circles. He traveled extensively up to 1774, when he left England after having failed in his purpose to keep the British empire united but at the same time help America grow within the empire.

Elected a member of the continental congress, he was in 1775 made postmaster general of the colonies. With the outbreak of the Revolutionary war he took a leading part in the movement for American independence. He was named to the committee to frame the Declaration of Independence. Thomas Jefferson wrote that famous document, but Franklin was its editor.

In September, 1776, Franklin was chosen to the commission to solicit aid from France. Arriving in that country three months later, he labored loyally and diligently for the treaty of alliance that was signed in Versailles in February, 1778.

He helped negotiate the treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain, which was signed in 1783, and remained in France as American minister until 1785.

For four consecutive terms after his return to America he served as president of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. In 1787 he was appointed a delegate to the constitutional convention, in which he played a leading part.

Franklin died in Philadelphia, April 17, 1790.

"HURRAY! LOTS MORE WASHINGS PER BOX FROM SUPER SUDS' EXTRA SUDS!"

"MORE SUDS, LONGER-LASTING SUDS, sure make wash-day easier, too," says Mrs. Lillian Charles

"WHY, I never knew a box of soap to go as far as this new, EXTRA-SUDSY Super Suds does! 'Course, it stands to reason that a soap givin' so MUCH MORE SUDS and SUCH LONGER-LASTIN' SUDS would go lots farther. What makes me even more tickled with Super Suds, though, is how those EXTRA, SPUNKIER SUDS hurry up my wash and cut down rubbin'. With eight of us altogether to wash for, that means everything!"

★ DON'T WASTE SOAP! ★

Vital materials needed to win the war are used in making soap

1 Don't just pour soap in from the box. Measure it out in a cup so that you don't use too much.

2 Don't wash a few clothes at a time, which means soap for each batch. Save them up and wash everything at once.

3 Don't soak clothes first in soapy water. Modern soaps are made to take out the dirt in the regular washing.

4 Don't wash dishes without first rinsing them. Less soap is needed if they are rinsed first. Wash greasy dishes last.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By Andrew B. Hecht, Ph. D.

Outdoor shots of pets are easier to make than indoor portraits. The light is stronger and the background is less of a problem if you shoot from a low angle, using the sky as a background.

PICTURES of pets rate high in the scale of human interest, but they aren't the easiest to snap. Even the best disciplined of pets are likely to become nervous and difficult. Strong lights add to their wariness if you are making your pictures indoors. One good solution to this problem is to pose them on a platform or table which is high enough so that they will not jump to the floor readily.

You can train your lights on a small table, after placing it before a suitable background, and then set aperture and shutter and focus for the required distance. Then place your subject on the table and shoot before he becomes excited or jumps off.

It takes patience and a few tricks to get the right pose for a good animal picture. If you are photographing a dog you can get your subject's attention with a sharp whistle just before you shoot.

Sometimes more subtle devices are called for, like warming up a spot on the table with a hot water bottle or electric heating pad before posing a cat.

When you select a place to take pet pictures, look for a background that will give good contrast. A plain wall is good; don't try to use a small sheet of cardboard, or you are likely to find that your subject moves off the background before you are ready to shoot.

Birds are somewhat easier to photograph than dogs and cats, for their movements are restricted by the cage. However, its bars create problems that are not so easy to overcome. You can get a plain background by fitting a piece of cardboard into one side of the cage to give it a solid wall.

One method of eliminating bars completely is to substitute an aquarium for the bird cage.

To bring out the texture of feathers and fur, use side lighting. Relieve the dark shadows with a reflector or a fill-in light.

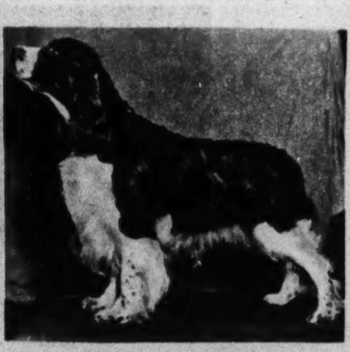
MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

Ch. Stormy Splendour is the unique name of this winning Irish terrier, owned by Joseph J. Corcoran.



This springer spaniel, Champion Chum of Sandblown Acre, owned by Mrs. Janet Henneberry of Golf, Ill., was photographed just after it had won a best of breed award. Note the dog's feathering, conformation, and beautiful coat.

THE ENGLISH springer spaniel is one dog in the United States whose future causes little worry to the many thousands of owners and breeders who are fond of this amiable breed. In the first place, it has more than its share of good looks. As a hunting dog capable of handling both furred and feathered game its future is in the hands of breeders, hunters, and field trial enthusiasts who are taking care that the splendid working qualities of the breed will not suffer.

The soft, very affectionate nature of the dogs makes them devoted pals for both children and adults. If a springer picks a boy as his "boss" you'll have trouble separating the two because of the bond of affection that will be established between them. And when a springer goes hunting with his owner there's really only one person in the world that the dog cares about. It's that human hunting partner who directs the dog's work afield and tramps the fields with him.

Because the springer is so friendly, it makes an ideal combination dog for the home and for hunting. We kept springers for years on that basis. One dog that we brought in from England from the Horsford kennel made just about as perfect a companion in the home as any one could ask for. In the fall this animal went to work on pheasants, jacksnipe, and rabbits and also retrieved ducks. To quarter its ground for five guns behind on a pheasant hunt was just a lark to this springer. Altho not supposed to be a rugged retriever in the same class as the Chesapeake Bay, Labrador, and golden retrievers, a good springer likes water and will do very well on the job of duck retrieving under conditions that are not too rough for a dog with no protective undercoat.

The springer has been called the ideal "rough shooting" and house dog by many enthusiasts, because it can be taught to handle both feathered and furred game. For example, a well trained specimen of the breed can be brought into the home with the assurance that it will fit into the family circle very well, because it is not a quarrelsome dog. It likes people and becomes devoted to its family.

Nearly every winter, after the duck season is over and only rabbits may be hunted, the owner can take the dog out to flush cottontails. Last winter we had such a hunt behind springers at Barrington. It was a cold winter day. Martin Hogan, noted spaniel trainer, worked two dogs around the edge of a lake where the cattails and other vegetation provided snug hideouts for the rabbits. The springers, taking their cues from the handler, worked back and forth in front of the guns to spring the rabbits so we could get shots. On two occasions the dogs trailed crippled rabbits out from the marsh to make retrieves.

Sportsmen who are trying to decide whether to buy a springer or a pointing dog for use on feathered game should remember that the springer does not point and therefore is not designed to take the place of the pointing breeds for certain types of hunting.

The Science to Come

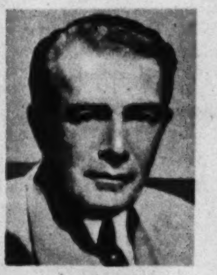
By DELOS AVERY

FOR A GUIDE to the future of science after the war watch (1) aviation, (2) communications, (3) radionics.

The three are related. They are parts of each other. And behind the screen of military secrecy great advances in the development of all three have been made under the stimulus of strategic urgency.

Fortunately many of the lessons learned at tremendous cost under the pressure of war will, in the opinion of industrial leaders, begin to pay back a large part of that cost when they are fitted into the pattern of peace.

Already the skyways have become the most important highways for the transport of destruction against the enemy, and what is wrecked today must be rebuilt tomorrow. For this the roads of the sky, which need no paving and which can always take the shortest route—without detours—will mean a huge saving of time. And when that saving of time is extended beyond the hurry-up period of post-war reconstruction it is expected to become a permanent factor in the faster moving every day life.



Comdr. Eugene F. McDonald

Men and nations will be as far apart as ever in the space which is measured in miles, but nearer in space time, the essential of swift communication. Faster planes, better motors, improved motor fuel, plus the increased safety which is promised thru the newest miracles of radionics, will be the heart of the new way of living, the research men agree.

To get a part of this story of the future we went recently to 6001 Dickens avenue, where Comdr. Eugene F. McDonald Jr. presides over the plant of the Zenith Radio corporation, a plant now guarded closely for the protection of its military secrets. Naturally, so far as such secrets are concerned, the law of the "buttoned lip" applies. But we found McDonald ready enough to talk about things to come.

"We're working for the future right now," he said. "It is a part of our agenda, added to the agenda of immediate war work. After all, the future is an extension of the present, and the two cannot be wholly separated. I can tell you now that the future will be distinguished by speed. More things can be done in a given time then than now. We shall be able to reach farther and do more. Here, look at this thing."

He picked up a rectangular object about the size and shape of a cigaret package.

"The government," he said, "is giving us special priorities to manufacture this because it helps solve the man power problem. There are 10 million people in the United States who need a thing like this, and a lot of them are men and women whose usefulness either in war jobs or in other employment releasing other men for war jobs will be greatly increased when they get it."

The thing appeared to be made of one of the new plastics. There was nothing in its outward appearance to startle the eye, but the magic is inside. Tiny tubes like those in your radio set, but about half the size of a cigaret, are inside. They connect with a battery so small that you could palm it, and they enable the deaf—not all, but many of them—to hear.

"Essentially," said McDonald, "it's a part of a radio receiver. It wires the human body for sound. For years our engineers have been working on the problem of how to make it good without making it expensive. Now, thru mass production, we can offer it for a fraction of the usual price. And I don't care if we never make a profit on it, because I know something about what deafness means, having lost the hearing of my own right ear in an accident 20 years ago. In a way that accident might be called a good thing, because it has enabled me to act as a guinea pig."

McDonald is in love with the science of radionics in all its phases, which include electronics, radio, and that mysterious new thing called radar—the bouncing ray. He watched radar when it was saving England from ruin. And he knows how it gave warning at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese bombers were approaching—a warning which was neglected.

"But it will do more for the world in peace than in war," he says. "In the world of the day after tomorrow there will be more planes in the sky than ever were seen there before, and in every one of them radionic devices will be as important as the motor, giving super-eyes, super-ears, and super-voices to the crews who fly them."

Such ideas are not new, of course, for everybody knows by this time how flyers "see" thru the clouds and fog that once were the most dreaded hazards of aviation, how men in the sky can talk to other men below, and how a plane can "ride a ray" as easily as a railroad train is guided by its rails. But McDonald sees the picture bigger. A friend once said of him:

"Gene's one of those rare fellows who know how to put their imagination in harness to make it do useful work instead of just playing around. He can send a dream to school and teach it to become a reality. He's one of the men whose mission in life is to create tomorrow today."

That is fancy language, no doubt, but it does describe McDonald in his most expansive moment. The rest of the time he's a working man with a brain focused on tough and solid problems of the laboratory and the ledger, assembling the facts that come out of test tubes and meters and coils, translating them into the language of production cost, mass manufacture, advertising, studying the delicate balance of one thing against another to solve a double-headed problem—first how to make it, then how to make it available where it is wanted.

Take television, for instance. He's got a bridle on his optimism so far as that is concerned. He cannot quite accept it—as yet—as an industry operating under the inflexible economic law. He thinks it likely that television, in order to meet its cost, may have to enter the home over a telephone wire and be paid for on a service basis, the way the telephone itself is paid for. But he isn't quarreling with those who hold rosier hopes.

"There's nothing wrong with television that money can't cure," he concedes. "But I doubt that it could be handled profitably as an advertiser-sponsored feature under present costs. It now costs motion picture makers more than $200,000 an hour to produce the film that the public enjoys at a cost of about 9 cents an hour per person. Television would have to be just as good and therefore just as expensive, which means that it would cost an advertiser $10,000,000 a year to put on a weekly one hour show. Too much."

MR. MOON MULLINS

for $1,000), but hardly a handful of people the world over know Willard, and every once in a while some one wonders if there is a Willard. Not long ago a propertied man of Johannesburg, South Africa, wrote Willard saying he had kept a scrapbook of every Moon Mullins cartoon since Moon's birth. "The war has stopped it here," he continued, "so I am subscribing to an American paper just to get him. But what I wonder is what are you like? Will you please send me a large picture?" In a beautiful reciprocal gesture he enclosed his own.

Willard was born in Anna, Ill., and at least one of his forebears had artistic proclivities. This was Archibald M. Willard of Cleveland, O., who painted the well known "Spirit of '76," originally exhibited at the Philadelphia centennial in 1876. The central figure, the elderly drummer, was the artist's father, the Rev. Samuel Willard, son of a Revolutionary war captain. This documentary touch is included here only because no one would ever get a glimmer of it from Willard's own account of his life, which begins with an offhand: "I had been fired out of a couple of schools and couldn't go any longer."

"Yes. Silly old man. I could use that dough. Union Academy of Southern Illinois kicked me out for greasing the car tracks.

"So I went to the state institution for the feeble minded where they were building a building and got myself a job as timekeeper. Somebody in a white coat was always getting me mixed up with the boarders and trying to lock me up when I strayed around the grounds, so I quit.

"Then, as I was always fond of hot dogs, pop, and hamburgers, I interested a chum whose old man had some dough in the business of following fairs. I tried to get rich by betting on the horses. I split my winnings with my chum, and he was to split the hamburger profits with me, but suddenly the last day of the fair he became interested in trains and went to California with the receipts, leaving me with a bunch of tough butchers and soda dealers with bills and a guy with a badge. However, I did meet a lot of interesting people in that business. Some very able tattoo artists, pickpockets, ballyhoo men, and shills.

"So I went to Chicago where my old man was practicing dentistry. He wanted me to be a lawyer or a doctor, but I couldn't be that because I had been fired out of so many schools. He didn't want me to be a cartoonist because they were all drunken bums, but I became one anyhow.

"So I went to the Boston store and became a claim tracer. If a woman ordered underwear and got a lace curtain you'd have to go straighten it out or try and make the lace curtain fit her. Then I went to the academy (Chicago Academy of Fine Arts) three nights a week for about three months. I was suspended part of that time because I couldn't get credit for 35 cents' worth of art supplies.

"Then the war came along, and McCutcheon was in Mexico, and Frank King, who used to pinch-hit for him, was on vacation, so I thought, 'Well, what the hell, here's the war starting and The Tribune with no cartoon for the front page, so I went home and drew a cartoon called 'Touring Europe.'

"It was a picture of the god of war as chauffeur with death and devastation as passengers and vultures in the air. A grewsome thing. I sold it to Mr. Beck (the late E. S. Beck, then managing editor of The Tribune, and they ran it four columns wide. That was Aug. 1, 1914. I'll never gorget it. I went right over and resigned my job at the Boston store because I made $15 from the cartoon and was working 11 hours a day at the Boston store for 11 bucks a week. I made it in two hours.

"Quit my job and spent the whole day walking around Chicago looking at Tribunes on the newsstands with my cartoon on the front page. Thought everybody in Chicago was doing the same thing. Wore out a $3.50 pair of shoes.

"Then I was so darned dumb I went over to The Tribune at 8 o'clock the next morning. That was the time I went to work at the Boston store, so I thought Mr. Beck went to work then, too. But he didn't come down until 5. I thought that was fine. I didn't realize he had to work at night, too. I thought it was just from 5 to 6.

"So the next day Mrs. Woodrow Wilson obliged me by dying, and I drew a picture of Uncle Sam hanging a wreath on the White House door. The people there (at The Tribune) thought I was a child prodigy—I was 21—but in the meantime King came back from his vacation and there wasn't too much for me to do, so they had me doing sport cartoons."

Not too long after that he had an offer from the old Chicago Herald and accepted it. The managing editor there, Willard says, said to him baldly: "You haven't enough brains to be a political cartoonist. Anyway, there isn't any dough in it. The money is going to be in strips and comics, and maybe you'd like it better."

That, Willard says, is how he started. He remained with the Herald until 1919 when he went into the army. He served overseas and became a sergeant "but was always getting cut back to corporal for one thing and another" and emerged a sergeant on July 4, 1919.

"I was a very lousy soldier," he now says. "I couldn't get all that discipline stuff in my head. When I came back to Chicago, the Hearst outfit had bought the Herald. They put me to drawing the Out of Luck Club, which was rightly named, and Penny Ante, and Let the Wedding Bells Ring Out. I did them all in New York, with King Features, and I scrapped with them all. Anyway, I had forgotten everything I knew about drawing while I was in France and forgotten how to think, if ever I did know."

It was at this time that Capt. J. M. Patterson started the New York News, and Willard went to see him:

"He wanted a roughneck cartoon," he recalls. "They were all nasty nice home organ sort of things, you know. So Patterson seemed to think I could do it. I made a bunch of sketches and in picking out a name, he said, 'We want a name that's catchy. Now, every one's talking about whisky, moonshine'—that was during prohibition—'Call him Moonshine, Moon for short.' Then he said, 'Hand me that classified directory. What's a good tough profession? I got it . . . plumbers!'

"The first name he saw in the directory under plumbers was Mullins. 'I got it!' he said. 'Moon Mullins.' That's how he got the name."

So on June 14, 1923 Moon Mullins, a tough customer in a derby and checked pants with a stump of a cigar cocked in his mouth appeared. He was really tough, so much so, Willard now says, that in retrospect he was repulsive. He was cocky, impudent, slaphappy, and knew all the ins and outs of the lower levels. He violated every social amenity—and the public lapped him up. The Dempsey-Gibbons fight was greatly in the public eye at this time, and Willard and Moon horned in on it. In Willard's words:

"The fight was at Shelby, Mont., so I had Moon in a box car bumming his way to the fight. In the box car he met Mushmouth (an enormous, dark, rather amorphous character with a mouth like a manhole). Maybe you know that they were having a terrible time getting sparring partners for that fight, so Moon put Mushmouth in a box, addressed the box to Dempsey, and shipped him into the training camp. Then he hires Mushmouth out as a sparring partner for Dempsey. That was the start of it."

Frank Willard, without costume.

The next character to be introduced was Emmy Schmaltz, a romantic spinster and harridan with a chin, a nose, and the tongue of a harpy. Emmy, who now is known as Lady Plushbottom, ran a boarding house. Then came Moon's kid brother, Kayo, a rascally little whippersnapper of 6, who at times exceeded Moon in toughness. Then came Little Egypt, a siren (described by Willard as a "hootchy kootchy dancer") whose charms snared the rough and tumble Moon. Then in came pompous, walrus mustached Lord Plushbottom, a gentleman on permanent leave of absence from the peerage.

"Plushbottom got stuck on Egypt, and Egypt was stuck on Moon, and old lady Schmaltz made up her mind she was going to get Plushbottom," Willard sums it up. "Plushbottom wanted to get married, but he wanted to marry Egypt, who by that time was performing at the Chicago World's Fair, a fan dancer. So Moon fixed everything up so Plushbottom could get married without having it cost him a cent. He threw a public wedding and charged every one $1 to come. Only it was Emmy, of course, who became Lady Plushbottom."

On one of her innumerable, unplanned residences in jail Lady Plushbottom met up with a buxom Irish crone called Mamie, an irrespressible old bag. They became so chummy that when Emmy went home, Mamie came to call. This was embarrassing, but the Plushbottom menage was short on kitchen help at the time, so Mamie stayed as cook, to the eternal mortification of Emmy. Mamie has remained, a dauntless, infamous member of the Moon Mullins cast, as has a bewhiskered bum known as Willie who came to the back door for a handout, discovered the Mamie he had not seen for 20 years, and remained.

Altogether it is a wild, incorrigible, harum-scarum group of corruptibles gathered together morning after morning, seven days a week. Every one asks Willard whom he models these unattractive creatures on, and he says blithely: "On every one. I've known people like all of them. A kind of fresh guy like Moon, a stiff old faker like Plushbottom, a gabby old maid like Emmy."

None of them grows any older. Moon is still 26. His clothes have changed a trifle thru the years, altho he still wears the same Derby and checked pants, and his grammar has improved, no doubt from his association with a renegade from the peerage, and both he and Mamie are in war work. (An indignant lady wrote to demand why a healthy young man like Moon wasn't in the army.) But other than this, nothing. Emmy still is 52, but still claims 42. Lord Plushbottom is 57, Uncle Willie 49, and Kayo 6.

The happenings in the outer world rarely affect these products of the pen and pencil and paint brush of a man in long underwear and a baseball cap. Long ago Willard stopped trying to keep up with the news. It got too complicated.

Many persons wonder if Willard draws his own pictures and writes his own lines. He does. And it is a hard job.

"Humor," he says wearily, "is the toughest racket of all. You try to pack a little humor into the balloons and get action, too, and that's a tough job."

It isn't every humorist, however, who can get New Year's greetings in verse penned for him alone such as one Willard received from a rhymester in Manitoba who started out in Homeric vein with:

Long may thy wit convulse this earth
And mellow our declining days

And concluded with a touch of Eddie Guest:

God blundered on the luckless day
That he forgot to make you twins.

Willard's prize fan letter in recent months, when every one writes to say that what the world needs is more humor, says in part:

"I don't know when I've laughed so hard as I did at Mamie training to be a chorus girl. Am sending it to my husband in war zone. More power to you. We need laughs. I've two little boys that just love laughter."

Remember . . . Friskies is not a wartime substitute. This solid dog food has been the standby of thousands of dog owners for ten years.

HOW TO INTRODUCE YOUR DOG TO FRISKIES

First, give him a few cubes of Friskies from your hand, so he learns their appealing flavor.

Next, mix a little Friskies, just as it comes from the package, with his accustomed food.

And Finally, increase the quantity of Friskies in your dog's regular feedings, at the same time reducing the amount of his former food until Friskies is the major item in his daily diet.

Your dog will eat Friskies eagerly, if you follow these simple rules to accustom him to Friskies. If now and then he does not eat Friskies readily, remove his dish and try later. Remember, just as children must be taught to eat the most beneficial foods, so dogs must be trained to new eating habits.

THE GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER Presents MICKEY ROONEY and JUDY GARLAND in "GIRL CRAZY"

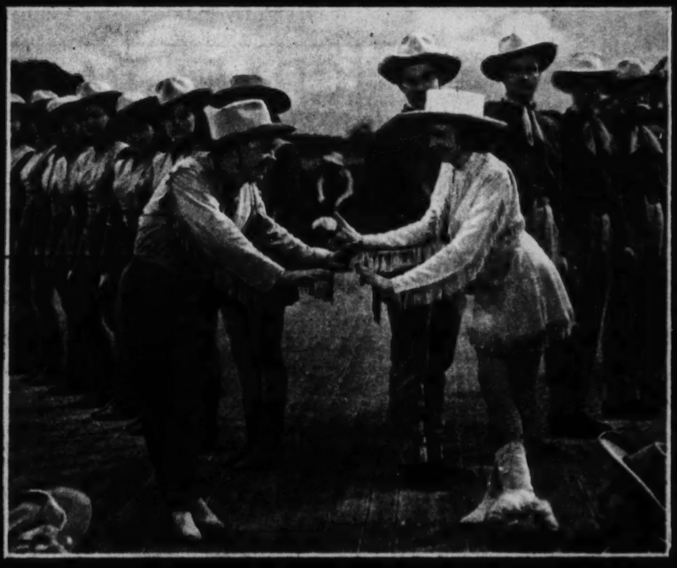
1 Danny Churchill (Mickey Rooney), youthful playboy, has had one night club escapade too many. His father ships him off to a girl-less western school, Cody college.

2 Getting off the train, Danny finds that the only girl around is Ginger Gray (Judy Garland), niece of the dean. She is repairing the old car in which she delivers mail for the school, and takes an instant dislike to Danny.

3 He gets a western welcome from Bud Livermore (Gil Stratton) as he arrives to become Bud's roommate. At a picnic Danny takes a hazing with good grace and enters into the western spirit. Ginger begins to warm up to him.

4 But life at Cody isn't too pleasant, at that. Danny, however, takes an interest when Dean Armour (Guy Kibbee) tells him that the governor is going to close the school because its enrollment has fallen off so.

5 Danny gets an idea. With Ginger backing him, he goes to the governor and gets a stay for the school until he can put on a super-duper rodeo to attract publicity and new students.



6 The show is a tremendous success, starring Danny and Ginger in some fast and furious song-and-dance turns.

7 Cody college is on the map. Even Danny's father hears about the good job his boy did and reinstates Danny in his good graces. The dean is happy as applications for enrollment pour in, and the governor approves continuation of the school's appropriation.

Two Stars in Color

Color portraits of Virginia Weidler and Nan Wynn appear in today's Picture Section.

VIRGINIA WEIDLER has appeared in nearly 50 pictures since her screen debut with John Barrymore in "Moby Dick" in 1930. She was 2 years old and showed a strong case of temperament that put her into retirement for two years. In 1933 she got a part with Constance Bennett in "After Tonight" because of her ability to speak English, French, and German. That same precocity had won her a stage role the year before with Francis Lederer in "Autumn Crocus." Since then she's been in great demand. You've seen her recently in "Best Foot Forward." Virginia was born on March 31, 1928, in Los Angeles. Her mother was noted as Margaret Louise, German opera singer.

NAN WYNN'S mother was determined she'd never be an actress. Her schoolmates voted her, in jest, the least likely to succeed. She was rejected by the high school dramatic society. So now she's in the movies as the result of a hard-earned singing career in night clubs, radio, and stage. Determined to get into show business, she took a small theater singing job, finally landed in Alec Templeton's radio show. Following that she was singing in Chicago's Pump room when a Warner Brothers talent scout heard her, rushed her to Hollywood. Her first picture was "A Shot in the Dark." Recent picture: "Jam Session." Nan was born on May 8, 1918, in Johnstown, Pa.

How to Write a Short Story:

1. Take a girl with a problem (beauty)

. . . Jane's at an officers' dance—and something's wrong! The music's grand—but she isn't dancing. It's a dinger of a night for a twosome—but she's a lonesome. If only . . .

2. Add a handsome Marine . . . (her rival's). He says, "Hello!"—and his smile lifts her heart. But it falls with a thud—when he passes her by to dance with somebody else. Somebody with a complexion as smooth and radiant as—say! . . .

3. Bring in a beautiful baby . . . (her sister's). Maybe that's the answer—she's always bathed with gentle Ivory Soap. Doctor's orders. No soap is purer than mild Ivory—it contains no coloring, medication or strong perfume that might be irritating. Better change to regular, gentle cleansings with Ivory—Jane!

4. YOU write the happy ending! Does Jane meet the handsome Marine again? Does he fall like a ton of bricks? Does she marry him? Could be. It's easy for a gal with a baby-radiant skin! Better start using gentle Ivory for your skin—tonight!

$99^{44}/100\%$ pure . . . It floats.

Save Soaps! They Use Vital War Materials!

1. DON'T LEAVE SOAP IN WATER when you're through lathering. Put the bar in a soap-dish when not in use.

2. BE SURE YOUR SOAP-DISH IS DRY before you put bar back. Keep a cloth handy to keep your soap-dish dry.

3. USE UP SOAP SCRAPS in wire shaker or tied in cloth. Or make soap jelly by dissolving scraps in boiling water.

BEWARE OF THESE 2 DANGERS (DENTURE BREATH and LOOSE PLATES) DUE TO BRUSHING with MAKESHIFT CLEANERS

BRUSHING your plates with tooth pastes, tooth powders or soap, may scratch the denture material which is 60 times softer than natural teeth. These small scratches cause odorous film, food particles, and stains to collect faster and cling tighter . . . resulting in Denture Breath. Remember, you may not know you have it, but others do! Besides, brushing and scrubbing your denture with makeshift cleaners often wears down the delicate fitting ridges designed to hold your dental plate in place. With worn-down ridges, of course, your plate loosens.

DO THIS EVERY DAY!

PLAY SAFE . . . SOAK YOUR PLATE IN POLIDENT. Place denture in Polident solution for 15 minutes, or longer if convenient. Rinse—and it's ready to use.

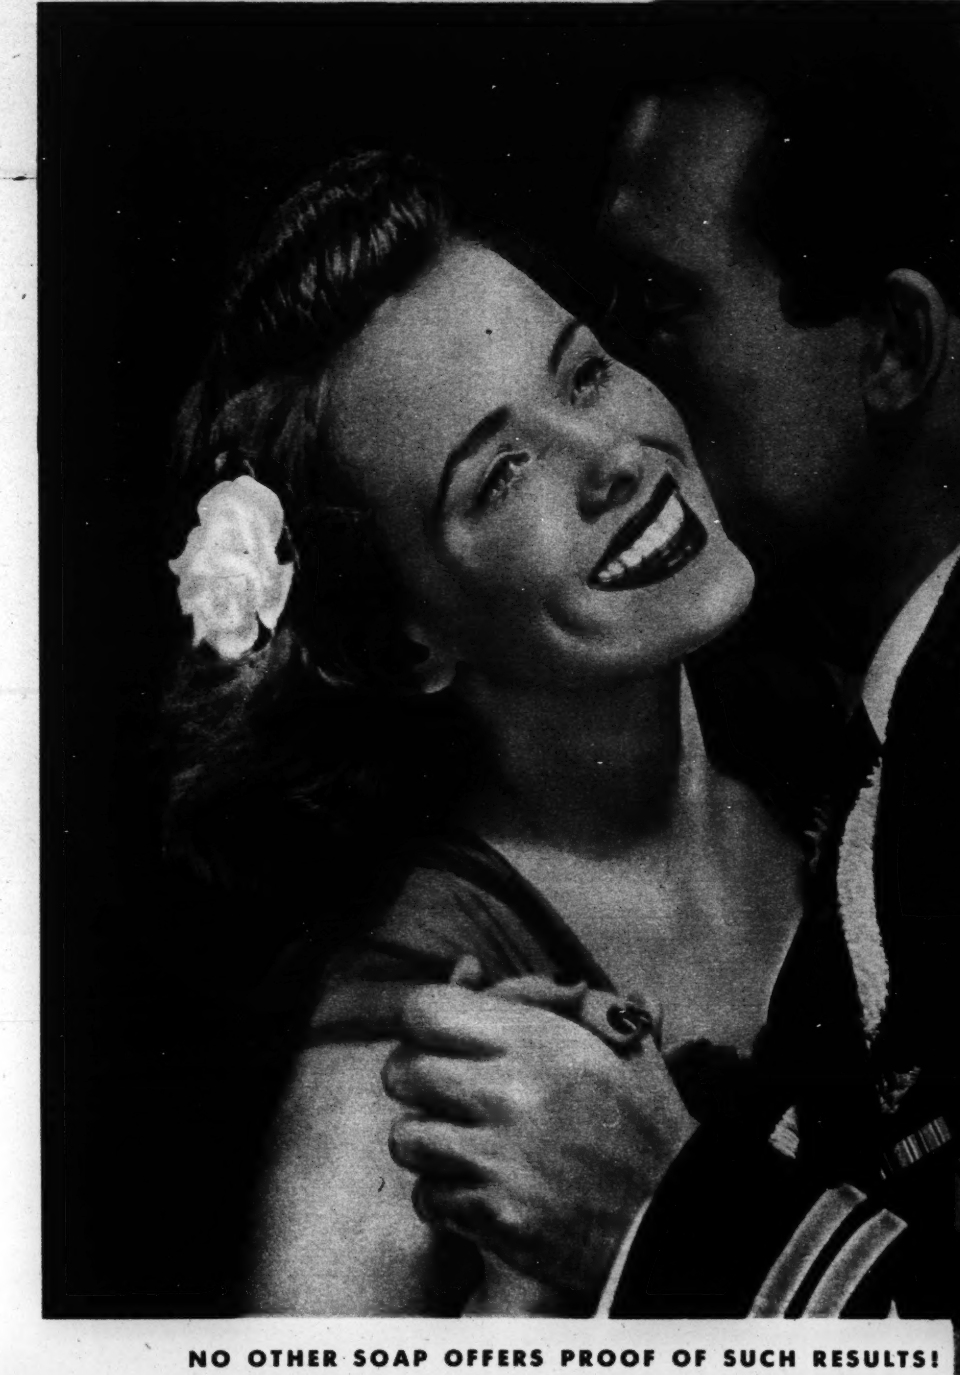
READ THIS TRUE STORY of what the Proved 14-Day Palmolive Plan did for Helen Brooks of St. Louis, Missouri

"My complexion had lost its lovely look. So I said 'yes' quick when I was invited to try the new 14-Day Palmolive Plan—along with 1284 other women all over the U.S.A.! My group reported to a St. Louis skin doctor. Some of us had dry skins; some oily; some 'average.' After a careful examination, we were given the Palmolive Plan to use at home for 14 days.

"Here's the proved Palmolive Plan: Wash your face 3 times a day with Palmolive Soap. Then—each time—massage your clean face with that lovely, soft Palmolive beauty-lather . . . just like a cream. Do this for a full 60 seconds. This massage extracts the full beautifying effect from Palmolive lather for your skin. Then rinse and dry. That's all!

"After 14 days, I went back to my doctor. He confirmed what my mirror told me. My skin was fresher, smoother, finer-textured! Later I learned many skin improvements had been observed by all the 36 examining doctors. Actually 2 out of 3 of all the 1285 women got see-able, feel-able results. So the 14-Day Palmolive Plan is now my beauty plan for life!"



YOU, TOO, may look for these skin improvements in only 14 Days!

- ★ Brighter, cleaner skin
- ★ Finer texture
- ★ Fewer blemishes
- ★ Less dryness
- ★ Less oiliness
- ★ Smoother skin
- ★ Better tone
- ★ Fresher, clearer color

This list comes right from reports of the 36 examining doctors! Their records show that 2 out of 3 of all the 1285 women who tested the Palmolive Plan for you got many of these improvements in 14 days! Now it's your turn! Start this new proved way of using Palmolive Soap tonight. In 14 days, you, too, may look for fresher, clearer, lovelier skin!

DON'T WASTE SOAP!

Vital Materials Needed to Win the War Are Used in Making Soaps

- DON'T let soap soak in water because soap in water wastes away.
- DON'T let soap rest in wet soap dish—this makes soap soft and mushy.
- ALWAYS moisten the last sliver and put it on a new cake. This way you use every bit of soap.

NO OTHER SOAP OFFERS PROOF OF SUCH RESULTS!

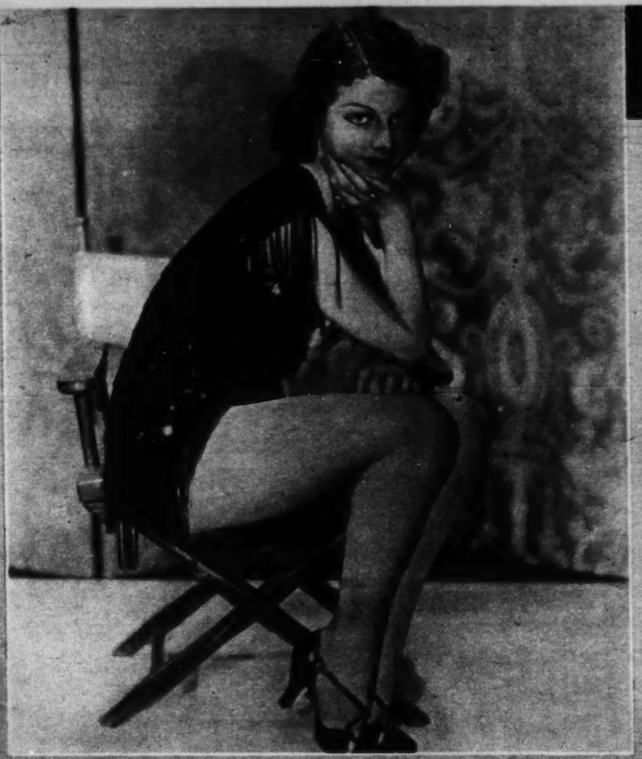
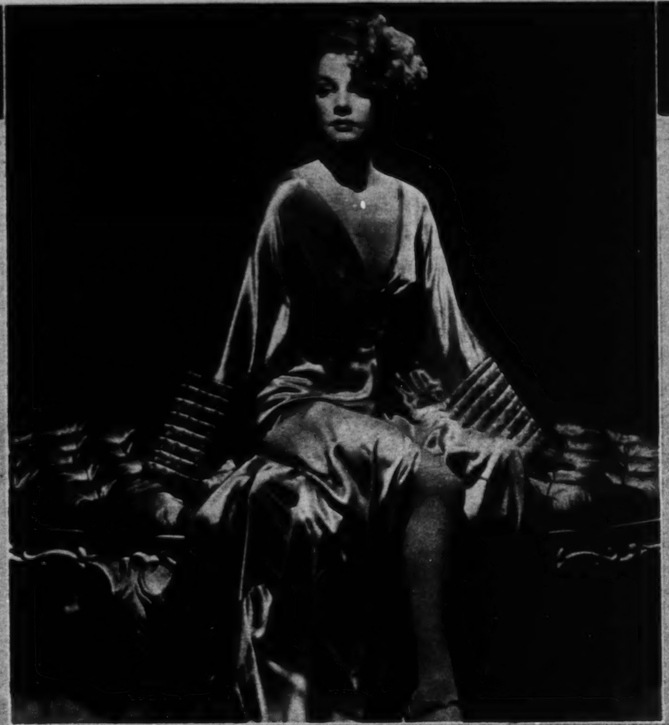
ALTERATIONS

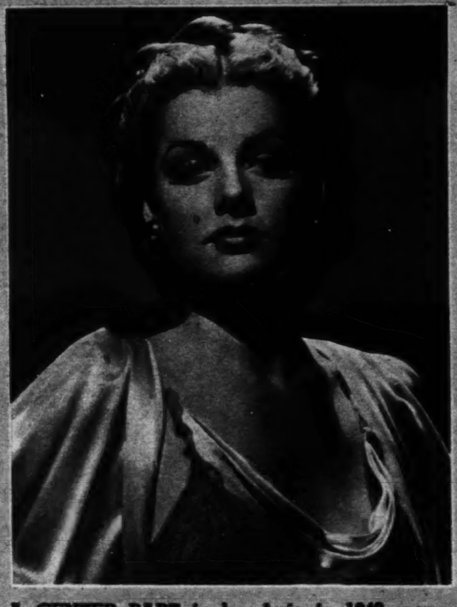
Hollywood stars change with the years . . . V: Ann Sheridan.



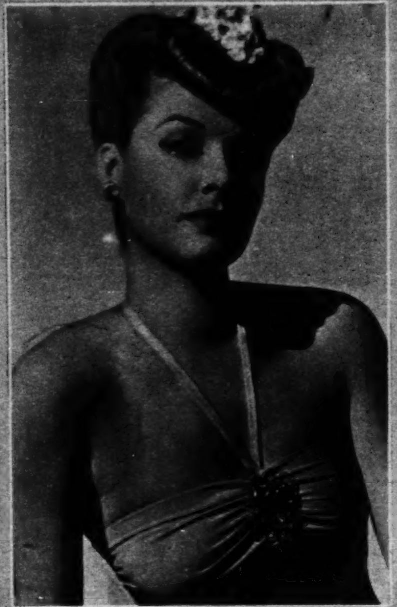
IN 1933, her first year in the movies, Ann Sheridan was a pretty and amiable Texas redhead. But she didn't have personality. Wherefore her Hollywood career all but expired during its first three years, and remained spindly for three years more.



OOMPH exploded into the American vocabulary in 1939: Ann's studio spent a million dollars building her up as successor to the late glamor girl, Jean Harlow; beauty and hair and fashion experts used every artifice at their command to turn the redhead out as a sultry siren.



A CENTER PART in her hair, in 1940, gave Ann an appearance of winsomeness that is natural. Emphasis continued, as it still does, on her curvaceousness.



HER POMPADOUR OF 1941 was fashionable and sophisticated, but not too beguiling.

THE ANN OF 1943 attains an aura of distinction that was wanting in the oomph years. Note the ear buttons, almost inseparable from the Sheridan personality.

WALNUTS

Save on meat points!

GET EXTRA PROTEIN – EXTRA FLAVOR – EXTRA VARIETY

Just add walnuts

When you buy walnuts this year—you're getting more than your family's favorite nut! You're really getting a first-rate bargain in food, lady. Listen!

Walnut meats are a good source of vegetable protein! That means you can use them often, to fill in when you're short of meat points. Ever try walnuts in a meat-stretching meat loaf? Ever add 'em to your vegetable rings or spaghetti dishes? You'll love the flavor. And the extra vitamins and minerals they add are a real plus value!

What's more—walnuts do the same thing for any course of your meal! They put new zest into salads—make old cake recipes taste like new discoveries—turn hasty puddings into rich, flavorful tempters. Walnuts take away the rationed look, and give them grand new goodness!

Right now, you can probably get all the walnuts you want. But the present crop won't last long. And remember—the kind of walnuts you get makes a big difference, too! Here's why you save money by insisting on "Diamonds" when you buy:

1—"Diamonds" are crack-tested for quality.
4—"Diamonds" are branded plainly, on every shell, for your protection.

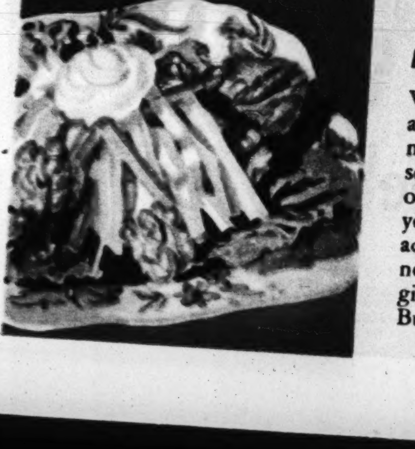
• • • WALNUTS COST NO RATION POINTS — AND THEY MAKE ANY MEAL TASTE BETTER • • •

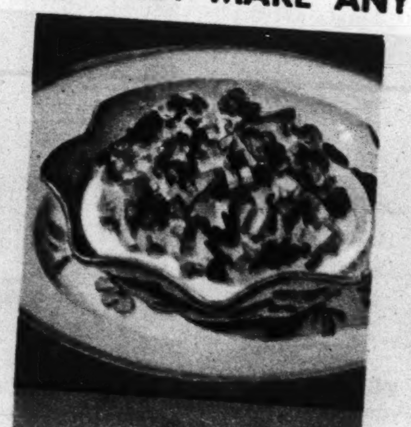
Make meat dishes more nourishing

Start out with only a pound of ground meat, some dry bread crumbs, and walnuts—and you have enough of these crunchy, stick-to-the-rib meat balls to feed four! Walnuts can even take the place of meat occasionally, thanks to the generous amount of protein they contain. In spaghetti or vegetable loaves—in stuffed peppers or creamed casseroles—they add the food values and the hearty flavor these dishes need, especially in chilly weather.



Make your salads more tempting

Watch the forks fly into this simple salad—and it doesn't cost you one point! Cut shimmering slivers of carrot and apple, toss in some crunchy walnuts, blend with a tiny bit of mayonnaise. It couldn't be better! And you can do the same for any salad. Walnuts add the crisp texture that all gelatin molds need. See what better-than-ever flavor they give to fruit or vegetable combinations, too! But for best results, always use "Diamonds."



Make your desserts more exciting

With sugar and butter so scarce right now—here's a tip for desserts. Use walnuts generously. They give this simple Brown Betty a new lease on life, a rich mellow flavor. Press big golden walnuts on your cakes, too; you won't mind thin icing. And don't forget salted walnuts, especially for the holidays. They'll help to take the place of candy, and give your family extra food values, as well! Walnuts are a perfect gift suggestion, too.

Make lunch boxes more interesting

Get rid of lunch box monotony—get new variety with walnuts! Try a spread made of chopped walnuts, any chopped dried fruit, and mayonnaise. Or blend chopped walnuts, cream cheese and mayonnaise for a delicious treat. Use walnut bread for sandwiches. Bake some toasty walnut cookies. And tuck in a handful of walnuts for your war-workers and school-age kiddies. Walnuts are always welcome, always nourshing. No trouble at all.

WAR FOOD PRICES START BIG DEMAND FOR BETTER FLOUR

"Baking failures too costly," smart women are saying

by Nancy Holmes

Every item in a baking recipe gets a careful eye turned on it nowadays. It's either hard to get, or up in price. Together, they run into money. And a baking failure wastes that money — all of it.

No wonder women are finding cheap, variable flours unsatisfactory. So they're paying a little more. And they're getting a LOT more for that little extra money—in Ceresota.

Ceresota contains correct amount of "stay-up" element — protein gluten

Ceresota contains the exact amount of gluten necessary for "good-luck" baking. Gluten is the secret of springiness and texture in dough. You need just so much—not too much, not too little. You get it just right in Ceresota. And the uniformity of both quality and quantity is scientifically maintained.

That's why you get the same plump loaves of bread every baking day. That's why piecrust, rolls and biscuits turn out so beautifully, time after time. That's why your baking flops turn into baking triumphs!

Of course, Ceresota is right in tune with the Government's Nutrition Program—enriched with valuable Vitamin B$_1$, niacin and nutritional iron. And it's as fine and satiny as modern milling can make any flour.

Ceresota quality is an old story to the best cooks. They know there's more than fifty years of know-how in every package of it. Give it a workout in your own baking pans this week.

WHEN YOU FEEL A COLD COMING ON

Start at once to do these basic things physicians advise to help your system throw off the infection.

5 BASIC THINGS TO DO FOR COLDS advised by physicians and public health authorities
(See how lemons help with all 5)

1.	GET PLENTY OF REST; BUILD RESISTANCE. Lemons are among the richest sources of anti-fatigue, anti-infection vitamin C.
2.	ALKALINIZE YOUR SYSTEM. Lemon and soda (fresh lemon juice with water and baking soda) forms sodium citrate, excellent to offset acid condition.
3.	KEEP ELIMINATION REGULAR. Lemon and soda has a gentle, natural laxative effect for most people.
4.	EAT LIGHTLY. TAKE PLENTY OF LIQUIDS. Citrus juices are most frequently advised.
5.	KEEP WARM; AVOID FURTHER CHILL. Hot lemonade is almost universally prescribed.

If cold does not respond, call your doctor.

HOW TO USE LEMONS FOR COLDS
Make Lemon and Soda

First day, drink a glass of lemon and soda every 2 to 3 hours at home or at nearest fountain. (And to induce perspiration, take a hot lemonade when you go to bed.)

Then,—continue with lemon and soda 3 to 4 times a day while cold lasts.

Lemon and soda forms natural sodium citrate. Gives vitamins and all benefits of fresh lemon juice plus increased alkalinizing and laxative effects. Consumed at once, soda does not appreciably reduce vitamin content.

To make lemon & soda pour juice of 1 lemon in a half glass of water. Add—slowly—half teaspoon baking soda (bicarbonate). Drink as foaming quiets.

To avoid colds build your resistance! Join the millions who now drink lemon and water daily for health. Juice of 1 lemon, in glass of plain water, first thing on arising.

Your Wish Comes True... a new Face Powder that STAYS and STAYS and STAYS...

SENSATIONAL NEW TANGEE
Petal-Finish
FACE POWDER

By Constance Luft Huhn

Head of the House of Tangee

Sitting at your dressing table mirror, haven't you often longed for a complexion as clear and soft and smooth as a rose petal? Haven't you hoped, too, that somewhere, sometime, you would find a face powder that would really cling—not just for a little while—but for hours and hours and hours?

Well, at last, your wish has come true—thanks to Tangee's cosmeticians. For two years we've been experimenting with a new face powder that would stay and stay and stay... a face powder that wouldn't cake or streak—that would give all types of complexions—blondes, brunettes or redheads—a lovely petal-finish. We've called our new face powder, appropriately, Tangee PETAL-FINISH Face Powder.

You'll be amazed how smoothly and easily Petal-Finish applies to your skin—how cleverly it helps conceal tiny freckles and blemishes.

And Tangee's Petal-Finish is delightfully scented, too, with the soft and dreamy fragrance of crushed flower-petals. To complete the illusion of loveliness . . . I suggest you use Tangee Petal-Finish Face Powder along with its complementary cosmetics—Tangee Satin-Finish Lipstick and Tangee Petal-Finish Rouge.

Don't Marines know what Mistletoe means?

IF THEY DON'T KNOW IT'S CUSTOMARY TO KISS A GIRL WHEN SHE'S STANDING UNDER THE MISTLETOE —THEN I THINK IT'S TIME FOR SOMEBODY TO TELL IT TO THE MARINES!
PIPE DOWN, SIS! YOU WANT EVERYBODY TO KNOW YOU'VE RUN AGROUND?
JUST WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY THAT CRACK?
LISTEN, SIS! NO MARINE EVER MISSES A CALL TO ARMS UNLESS THERE'S A REASON! AND ONE REASON IS-- IS THE KIND OF BREATH YOU ASK YOUR DENTIST ABOUT! GET IT?
HERE'S WHAT THE DENTIST SAID!
TO GET RID OF BAD BREATH, I RECOMMEND COLGATE DENTAL CREAM! FOR SCIENTIFIC TESTS PROVE THAT IN 7 OUT OF 10 CASES, COLGATE'S STOPS ORAL BAD BREATH INSTANTLY!

"HERE'S WHY: Colgate's active penetrating foam gets into the hidden crevices between teeth—helps clean out decaying food particles—stop stagnant saliva odors—remove the cause of much bad breath. And Colgate's soft polishing agent cleans enamel thoroughly, gently, safely!"

COLGATE'S MAKES TEETH SPARKLE, TOO! AND I SIMPLY LOVE COLGATE'S DELICIOUS WAKE-UP FLAVOR!
LATER—THANKS TO COLGATE DENTAL CREAM
HI, SIS! STILL THINK SOMEBODY SHOULD "TELL IT TO THE MARINES"?
CAPITAL N-O, NO! THANKS TO YOU, I'M DELIRIOUS WITH WHAT THE MARINES ARE TELLING ME!
Play Safe! TWICE A DAY—AND BEFORE EVERY DATE—USE COLGATE DENTAL CREAM

A Teenie Weenie Skating Pond

A THIN coat of ice had frozen over the creek and the Teenie Weenies began to talk of nothing but skating. The Turk had forged some very handsome skate runners out of an old safety razor blade, and the Old Soldier, with a wooden leg, had fitted the runners into wooden soles which could be easily strapped to Teenie Weenie feet with a bit of tanned frog leather.

"Now I don't want any skating until the ice is frozen hard enough to be safe," warned the General.

"Wouldn't it be all right to skate on the ice if the water wasn't deep?" asked the Dunce.

"Yes," answered the General, "if the water wasn't over two feet deep." (Two Teenie Weenie feet would be about half an inch in big folks measurement.)

The Dunce began to search for a suitable place to skate but all the places he found were either too deep or there were leaves or sticks frozen in the ice which made skating impossible. Finally he discovered an old pie tin which had been thrown away. It was quite battered and rusty but there were no holes in it and the Dunce decided it could be turned into a skating pond if the pan had some water in it.

It would take a lot of work to get the water into the pan for it lay some distance from the creek where the little people usually found their water but most of the Teenie Weenies loved to skate and they readily agreed to help carry the water. It took almost a whole day to carry enough water to cover the bottom of the pan for the little men had to carry it in thimbles. They carried eighty-nine thimbles full of water, or to be exact, eighty-nine and a half for Gogo and the Chinamen fell down on one of their trips for water and spilled half a thimble.

The next morning the ice had frozen hard enough to skate on and the little people spent most of their time gliding over the smooth ice. They built a big fire out of burned matches and twigs where they could warm Teenie Weenie fingers and toes when they grew cold. The Cook kept a thimble full of hot sassafras tea over the fire so that the little skaters could have a warm drink occasionally. Every one had a grand time and all the Teenie Weenies agreed that a pie pan made a mighty fine skating pond.

dreft gets dishes clean without wiping!

SEE even glasses rinse so sparkling clean they dry without streaks, cloudiness!

Leading authorities endorse the way DREFT makes dishes and glasses sparkle. "I've seen the proof!" says Martha Holmes, well-known home economist. "When dishes are as clean as they are with Dreft, they just don't need wiping." U. S. Health Authorities say this modern dishwashing, now made practical by Dreft, is far more sanitary than the old soap-washing way.

NOTE:

As the war limits the amount of Dreft available, use it wisely. Measure it out. A little will go a long way.

HOLD up a glass that has been washed in Dreft and rinsed—and look closely. It's crystal clear. Now watch the Dreft miracle. It dries so sparkling clean it looks polished-for-company without even wiping. None of the streaks or cloudiness you get with soap!

Lady, this means dishes and glassware that sparkle like jewels . . . easier, quicker than with any soap you've ever used!

You see, Dreft is not just a soap. Dreft is an amazing new suds discovery—first in the world to wash even glassware so clean it dries sparkling clear . . . streakless . . . cloudless! Dreft is so different it holds 7 U. S. patents. So different it makes 5 times more suds than the finest soap flakes in hardest water. And Dreft is non-alkaline—neutral as pure drinking water. Won't redden or roughen hands.

The amazing suds discovery!

LEGION PLANS VETERANS' MEMORIAL

CHEER LONELY YANKS, KIN AT CHRISTMASTIDE

Red Cross Presses New Service.

At no time of the year is loneliness so hard to bear, nor homesickness so overwhelming, than at Christmas time. And no other group of workers is more conscious of what Christmas in war time means than is the Red Cross. They know of the nostalgia of countless families here, of thousands of service men overseas, of prisoners in the hands of the enemy, and of families in occupied countries.

So this year the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross has added another role—Santa Claus—to its ever increasing list. The thousands of Red Cross workers themselves have taken on the added task, for the Christmas program of the Red Cross is "extra-official." No part of the war fund is used for this purpose. The gifts, the lovely wrappings, the greeting cards and trimmings, and the work necessary to get them all together, are all the result of individual donations and volunteer work added to regular tasks of the Red Cross workers.

Yule Task Many Sided.

The Red Cross Christmas program is divided into several parts, many of them interlocking. For instance, there are thousands of gifts made and donated by members of the production corps of the Chicago chapter. They are still coming in, and the total probably will reach 20,000 individual gifts. Under the direction of Mrs. Charles Krutchkoff, 5000 East End avenue, these mountains of gifts have been checked, wrapped, and are being assembled into gift boxes for some 1,400 families of service men recommended by the Red Cross home service.

Hundreds of beautifully dressed dolls will gladden the hearts of little girls whose fathers are overseas. Toys of every kind will appear under Christmas trees, along with warm snow suits, overcoats, and caps. The mothers of infants will welcome layettes exquisite with handwork. There will be afghans, quilts, blankets, robes, and slippers for the older folks. Many of the items have been made from salvaged material, coats from woolen samples, knitted suits from ravelled-out sweaters, cuddly toys from scrap-bag cottons.

The wrapping fund was donated, and makes possible that these gifts go forth done up in gay red and green tissue, complete with Christmas stickers and cards. Junior Red Cross members made boxes in which the gifts could be packed, and members of the motor corps deliver the gifts.

Numbers Hide Identities.

Red Cross workers believe the best part of the entire plan is the fact that both Santa Claus and the recipients are anonymous. Home service workers make the recommendations from among the families of service men being contacted. Each recommendation is accompanied by a thumbnail sketch of the members of the family, and suggestions as to the most appropriate gifts. These records come to the workers not as the Smiths or the Jones', but as numbers. When delivery is made, the numbers are matched with those on address labels.

What kind of families receive these gifts? Sometimes they are in financial straits, sometimes just unhappy. For instance, a warm bathrobe and slippers will go to the widowed mother of two marines, one of whom has been a Japanese prisoner since the early part of the war. Another, the wife of a seaman and her son, 3, is ill and finds it hard to live on a small income, but the boy looks forward to a bounteous Santa. There will be a housecoat and books for the mother, toys and warm clothing for the boy. And there are the eight children whose mother died a few weeks ago, and whose father is in a veterans' hospital. An older sister cares for the brood, and for an infirm grandmother of 85.

Remembering the families here at home is not all the Red Cross does. Chicago Juniors have shipped 2,600 pounds of gifts and favors to the boys overseas, as well as making 10,000 Christmas menu covers for navy ships at sea.

Remember Wounded, Prisoners.

The juniors remember children of other lands, too. Last year they sent 1,800 boxes of gifts to children in foreign countries who probably received no other Christmas remembrance. Gray Ladies are planning Christmas festivities for the six military and naval hospitals in the area. Thousands of gifts will go to these hospitals thru the camp and hospital committee. The Red Cross has shipped 10,000 special Christmas parcels so that each American prisoner of war and civilian internee in Europe should receive one. To our prisoners of war and internees in the far east, Christmas gifts this year should mean something special, because the $1,500,000 Red Cross relief supplies shipped aboard the Gripsholm are expected to reach Japanese prison camps by Christmas.

She's Only 8 but Already Adept at Magic Tricks

With plenty of what magicians call "swift patter" accompanying her repertoire of tricks, Jerry McDermott, 8 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McDermott, 3602 North Bell avenue, is perhaps the north side's youngest magic artist. She stages her own show for the "kids at school" and has given several performances along with professional magicians.

Last Christmas Jerry McDermott, 8 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McDermott, 3602 North Bell avenue, gave up playing with dolls and started playing with magic. Under the Christmas tree she happily found a large box of tricks—it had been her special request to Santa. She got the idea from watching mother and dad, both of whom are members of magic societies and much engrossed in exploring the mysterious realms of "greater magic."

She practiced hard on her tricks after school and evenings. When her parents went to professional magic shows she accompanied them and usually smiled the "pros" into giving her a few tricks for her repertoire.

Cat a Partner in Acts.

Mother made her a sleek costume from black satin, and "Rochester," the family cat, consented readily to participate in some of Jerry's magic acts.

Soon this junior magician became proficient enough to stage a magic show for the children in her class at St. Andrew's school. That was last year, when she was in the second grade. The "kids were fooled," she said, and so was the teacher. When her show was over the teacher asked her to tell the class how the tricks were done.

Turns Down Teacher.

"I can't," replied Jerry. She was adamant. That was one time she figured it was not impudent to refuse her teacher's request. "I couldn't tell them about the tricks," she explained solemnly, "that's a professional secret."

Quickly Jerry graduated to putting on magic shows for adult audiences. She has made up her own line of "patter" to accompany each trick, which older magicians have agreed is clever chatter. Jerry's current hope is that she will soon be accepted as a "pro."

N. SHORE POST BUYS BUILDING ON BROADWAY

See Need for Civic Meeting Place.

The North Shore American Legion post recently took title to a building at 5657 Broadway which will be called the War Veterans Memorial hall for the general use of north side civic and community organizations as well as for Legion activities.

Robert E. Owens, 4246 Sheridan road, judge advocate of the post and a member of the building committee, pointed out that "except for large hotels the north side does not now have a hall for civic meetings large enough to hold more than 200 people. The memorial building should be able to accommodate 700 persons."

Dedication Next April.

A dedication ceremony is planned for Sunday, April 30, 1944. The property represents an investment of the original owners of over $75,000, Owens said. It was owned formerly by the Stewart-Warner corporation and used as an automobile salesroom. Its size is 50 by 150 feet, a portion of it two stories high. The room which will be used for the lodge hall is 80 by 50 feet. The lounge will be 40 by 50 feet, and at the back of the building will be a smoking and game room.

Tentative plans are being made for a carnival next June 23 to July 2 to raise funds for remodeling and redecorating.

"The building committee also has under consideration," Owens said, "the possibility of a contest to choose the best design for remodeling the building as a fitting memorial."

Seek to Increase Rolls.

The North Shore Legion post is the largest neighborhood post in Cook county. It has a membership of 655, and it is expected that the number of members will increase to 1,000 by the middle of next year. The post's present headquarters, at 1103 Bryn Mawr avenue, in addition to legion activities, is now being used as a meeting place for OCD groups, Red Cross units, neighborhood clubs, and a rifle corps. In the new memorial building the opportunity for such meetings will be greatly increased.

Members of the post's building committee are Capt. R. E. Hutchison, chairman, 5508 Kenmore avenue; Raymond J. Hecht, 1457 Lascher avenue; Fred W. Kelley, 7662 Sheridan road; William M. Conway, 6568 Lakewood avenue; William H. Karls, 1626 Carmen avenue; Reuben P. Markus, 5057 North Winchester avenue; James S. Russell, 1062 Bryn Mawr avenue; Samuel K. Spicker, 5746 Kenmore avenue; Thomas N. Leervig, 1961 Winona street, and Owens. Marcus also is chairman of the post home building finance committee. Handling the legal details of the transaction were Owens and Emmett J. Cleary, associate judge advocate.

S. Pacific Boys Invest $1,000,000 a Month.

Col. Russell S. Cheney.

That service men overseas invest a large share of their pay in war bonds is evidenced by the record of Col. Russell S. Cheney, a former Evanston manufacturer now in charge of all sales of war bonds to soldiers fighting in the Southwest Pacific area.

As war bond officer for army forces in the area since July, 1942, Col. Cheney has sent back to the treasury department more than $5,000,000 in cash purchases of bonds and has arranged for soldiers there to buy more than $1,000,000 worth of bonds a month thru allotment, cash, and personal transfer of funds to the United States.

Use Bonds as Yule Gifts.

Purchases of bonds are voluntary, but the men are encouraged to put their savings into bonds by posters, talks, and pamphlets. Many of the soldiers are sending bonds home as Christmas presents.

Col. Cheney, whose headquarters are in Australia, was born in Madison, Wis., and graduated from Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis., in 1915. He was a pre-medical student at Northwestern university when the United States was preparing to enter World War I., and left to go to the Mexican border with the 2d Wisconsin infantry. During the war he was an instructor at the officers' training school at Camp Upton, N. Y.

Family in Evanston.

For several years after the war Col. Cheney was with La Salle Extension university in Chicago. In 1929 he was graduated from the command and general staff school, Fort Leavenworth, Kas. From April, 1941, until he was sent overseas, Col. Cheney served in the Gulf coast recreational area, Mobile, Ala.

His wife and three daughters live at 2007 Lincoln street, Evanston.

APPOINT FOUR NEW TEACHERS ON NORTH SIDE

Among 50 Authorized by School Board.

Recent authorization by the board of education for 50 new teachers in the elementary schools included the appointment of four to posts in north side schools.

They include: Manierre and Peabody schools, Allan A. Chasin; Motley, Evelyn L. Crispe; Franklin, Fred Silberschein, and J. A. Sexton, Jean Turnbull, all in physical education posts.

Loss to War Industry.

The appointments were made by Dr. William Johnson, superintendent of schools, when a sufficient number of substitutes ceased to be available to fill vacancies. High wages in industry have attracted many counted upon to do substitute work, Dr. Johnson explained.

Many of the appointments were made on a temporary basis. The teachers will receive regular salaries and other regular teacher benefits, but will be subject to dismissal when regular teachers, most of whom have left for war service, return from leaves of absence.

List Other Transfers.

Transfer of other elementary school teachers and schools to which they have been assigned include: Schneider school, Elinor Levett; McPherson, Goldie Neigoff; Le Moyne, Eileen R. Brady; Budlong, Adrea H. Heiden; Jenner, Bertha Birman; Blaine, Loretta Boerschinger; Motley, Catherine Campbell and David Katz; J. A. Sexton, Doris Olsen and Sadie S. Shapiro; Trumbull, Gladys Robbins; Thomas, Regina Ryan and Lucia M. Stoeckley, and Boone and Kilmer schools, Geraldine Rasmussen.

Teachers transferred to north side high schools include: Lane, Mabel Garrette and Chester S. Dobrzynski; Senn, Gertrude Gilman; Amundsen, James A. Hamilton and Ina T. Walton; Lake View, Rudolph C. Meuller, and Waller, Marie E. Schiefer.

North Shore Congregation Will Meet Tuesday Night

WOMAN ARTIST SEEKS INSTITUTE HONOR 3D TIME

Gray Haired Clubwoman Knows Her Art.

"My daughter thinks I should be satisfied to have had two of my paintings hung in the Art institute but I crave the honor just once more."

The determination in the steady voice of gray haired Mrs. Nellie O'Connor belies her statement and indicates that she would hardly be satisfied even tho the walls of the institute were covered with her works.

As a matter of fact Mrs. O'Connor's daughter, Mrs. Francis T. Wilson, 535 Cherry street, Winnetka, has wondered why her mother ever adopted the easel and brushes at an age when most women are content to survey their accomplishments and applaud the deeds of their grandchildren.

Travel Leads to Art Interest.

Mrs. O'Connor also has wondered why she took up painting, for fresh in her remarkable memory is the distaste with which her school girl art efforts were regarded by her teachers. She believes her extensive travel since her husband's death led to the shift in her abilities. She toured first in Europe and then in the orient and South Pacific, spending considerable time in India, China, Japan, and the islands now being used by marines as stepping stones to the land of the rising sun.

Feminine about her age, Mrs. O'Connor is not backward in discussing her painting. "My style is modern but not modernistic," she insists. In her mind the difference is that modern paintings resemble the subjects while modernistic efforts have the same abstract qualities as mathematics and thus are sometimes difficult for the laymen to interpret.

First Lesson in Michigan.

It was after she rounded out three-quarters of a century that Mrs. O'Connor took her first informal lesson in Saugatuck, Mich. The next year one of her paintings was hung in the institute. Later she studied in Provincetown, Mass., and again one of her efforts found its way to the institute.

While her new work takes up a great deal of her time, Mrs. O'Connor has not neglected her other interests and is still an active member of the Chicago Woman's club whose lavish headquarters at 72 East 11th street she helped plan. She has also continued her literary efforts. Having published a book dealing with Buddhism historically, she is working on another to be titled "The Wisdom of China and India."

Active in Art Association.

Mrs. O'Connor also is a member of the South Side Art association and largely because of her interest in that group has established winter residence in the Windermere East hotel. Last winter she lived with Mrs. Wilson in Winnetka but found it too difficult to commute to the city for the many events in which she was interested.

Sailor's Bride

MRS. EWALD KLEIM.

A recent bride is Loretta Jane Piedlow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Piedlow, 1318 Rosedale avenue, whose marriage to Ewald Kleim, petty officer second class, took place recently at St. John's Lutheran church, Lavergne and Montrose avenues. The bridegroom formerly resided at 3605 North Kildare avenue. The couple are residing in Cleveland, O., where Mr. Kleim is stationed.

EVANSTON HIGH TO PRESENT 4TH YULE FESTIVAL

Christmas music drawn from the classics, folklore, and modern compositions will ring out in joyous blend when the Evanston Township High school entertains the community at its 4th annual Community Christmas festival Thursday night in Beardsley gymnasium.

Climaxing the music program, a pantomime tableau entitled "And a Little Child Shall Lead Them" will be set against a background of flags of allied nations, intended to portray the universal good will of Christmas which recognizes neither boundary lines nor nationalities. Characters in the finale, attired in native costume, will be portrayed by members of the drama classes.

Alumni on Furlough Invited.

Role of the child will be taken by 6 year old Judith Rohner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Traugott Rohner of Evanston. As a special tribute to its graduates now in service, the school has invited alumni home on furlough to participate in the finale.

The school orchestra, directed by Mr. Rohner, will accompany the finale with Christmas music. School choruses will join in the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "Messiah."

"King of Heaven," from Bach's cantata, "For Unto Us a Child Is Born," will be sung by the festival chorus of 600. This group also will sing "Hallelujah, Amen," from Handel's oratorio, "Judas Maccabeus." The first of these numbers will be unaccompanied; the second will be accompanied by Miss Hadassah McGiffin at the piano.

Sing Christmas Spiritual.

Other numbers by the festival chorus will include a Negro Christmas spiritual, "Go Tell It to the Mountain," and a modern arrangement of a familiar French carol. The latter selection will have special parts for the Madrigal singers, the girls' choir, and the a cappella choir.

Each of the choral groups will be heard in individual selections. The Madrigal singers, composed of 45 girls under direction of Miss Ruby Shaw, will appear in a number entitled "Star Candles." The girls' choir, 45 junior and senior girls led by Miss Claire Vander Griend, will present an arrangement of an old carol, "Jesus, Jesus, Rest Your Head." All girls of the festival chorus will sing "Little Children All," a modern arrangement of an old French carol.

The a cappella choir of 60 boys and girls chosen largely from the junior and senior classes also will present a group of selections under direction of Miss Sadie Rafferty. This choir will sing an American carol, "I Wonder as I Wander," arranged for mixed voices by John Jacob Niles. The Mastersingers, a chorus of 24 boys also led by Miss Rafferty, will present a gay nonsense tune, "Pat-a-Pan."

Surprise Formation by Band.

Evanston Township High school concert band, under direction of Frederick Krueger, in addition to presenting a novel surprise formation will be heard in Cesar Franck's "Panis Angelicus" and Irving Berlin's "White Christmas." "Farandole," an arrangement of a French carol by Bizet in his L'Arlesienne Suite, also will be presented by the orchestra.

Another annual feature will be community singing of carols by the audience and chorus. This will be directed by Miss Rafferty, general chairman of the Christmas festival.

In charge of the grand finale are Howard Wilson and Miss Helen Hoode of the drama department.

Anshe Emet synagog, which is celebrating its 70th anniversary, will hold a jubilee banquet Wednesday evening in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. Prof. Louis Ginzberg of in New York City the Jewish Theological seminary will be a special guest.

They will be presented by Dr. James M. Yard, director of the Round Table of Jews and Christians. Meyer T. Lazar, general chairman, will be toastmaster.

Service for Youth Saturday.

On Saturday a special children's and youth's Sabbath service will be held. Dr. Leo L. Honor, executive director of the Board of Jewish Education, and Dr. Samuel M. Blumenfield, dean of the College of Jewish Studies, will be the guest speakers.

Congregation Anshe Emet was organized in 1873 at the home of Louis Sax, Lobby street and North avenue, when about 20 Bohemian, English, German, and Russian Jews assembled there to hold religious services.

From 1876 to 1893 members of the congregation met at Phoenix hall on Division street. In 1893 a new temple was built on Sedgwick street, where services were held until 1922. To meet the needs of a larger membership then the congregation met in a building on Gary place, and in 1929 moved to its present location, Pine Grove avenue and Grace street.

The coming of Rabbi Solomon Goldman, in 1929, is regarded as the turning point in the history of the synagog. His Friday evening services became increasingly popular. He inaugurated a program of adult education in both general and Jewish subjects.

Membership over 1,000.

The congregation's membership has grown to more than 1,000. The sisterhood has an equal membership. There also are a men's club and a business women's group. The institution conducts a daily afternoon Hebrew school for 300 students.

The synagog also sponsors a Players group, Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops, maintains a 3,000 volume library and the Korshak museum of Jewish ceremonial and art objects.

Committees for the anniversary celebration include Max M. Grossman, Seymour W. Schiff, and David Tumpeer, vice chairmen; Mrs. Hattie Callner, Judge and Mrs. Harry M. Fisher, Jacob Lasker, Sol Levisohn, and Fred Salzman, honorary chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Jacobson, chairmen of the Friday evening service committee; Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Hoffman, Sabbath morning service committee chairmen; Mrs. Seymour Schiff and Leon Silvertrust, program committee chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. William Ginsberg, reception committee chairmen, and Miss Minnie Tumpeer and Martin S. ZION WOMAN, 101, WAS GIVEN YEAR TO LIVE AT 24

'Secret: No Worry, Active Life,' Mrs. Julia Chase.

Mrs. Julia Chase, who traveled by covered wagon from Ohio to Minnesota as a child, celebrated her 101st birthday recently. She is living with one of her daughters, Mrs. Samuel Williams, 73, of 2900 Schol avenue, Zion.

Mrs. Chase has 66 living descendants. There are six children, whose ages range from 58 to 80, 22 grandchildren, 37 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

Born Dec. 1, 1842.

Mrs. Chase was born in Hamilton, O., on Dec. 1, 1842. She lived in Minnesota, where she had gone with her parents, until 19 years ago, when she moved to Zion. At the age of 24 Mrs. Chase was given a year to live, but since then, in 77 years, she has never had a serious illness. She thinks the doctor who prophesied her early death certainly would be chagrined if he could see her now. Her rules for longevity are "don't worry, get plenty of rest, lead an active life, and shun liquor and tobacco."

Mrs. Chase took her last trip alone when she was 80, going to Tacoma, Wash., to visit one of her sons. She is five feet three inches tall, weighs 130 pounds and has silvery white hair.

Has Read Bible 40 Times.

She likes to listen to the radio and keep up on the latest news, and she enjoys hearing slang phrases. She said that she has read the Bible thru 40 times.

Her son, Courtly, who is 76, came from Iola, Kas., to be with her on her birthday, and a grandson, Ralph, 44, came from Bettendorf, Ia. One of her visitors during the day was General Overseer Michael J. Mintern of the Christian Catholic church of Zion, of which Mrs. Chase has been a member for many years.

Her husband, Frank, a farmer, died 26 years ago.

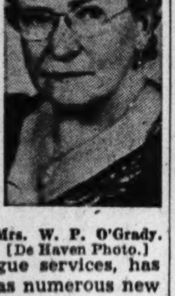
DUTTON LEAGUE CARD PARTY SATURDAY TO AID LEPER PATIENTS



Mrs. W. P. O'Grady. [De Haven Photo.]

The Dutton league, a nonsectarian organization which supplies funds for the personal needs of lepers, is sponsoring a card party Saturday in the C parlor of the Morrison hotel.

In stressing the necessity of raising funds this year, Mrs. W. P. O'Grady, 1319 Hood avenue, explained that the number of patients in the colony at Carville, La., which the league services, has increased recently as numerous new cases have been discovered thru draft board examinations.

Officers of the league in addition to Mrs. O'Grady include: Mrs. J. W. Kohler, 6456 North Fairfield avenue; Mrs. I. J. Chevlin, 1425 Winnemac avenue, and Miss Mae Crowley, 4000 Washington boulevard; Mrs. Henry C. Binder, 4859 North Rockwell street; Mrs. James Roche, 4536 Hermitage avenue; Mrs. J. P. Van Duzer, 2720 Dayton street; Mrs. Catherine Loy, 7258 South Racine avenue, and Mrs. H. A. Jacobs, 1529 East 76th street, vice presidents; Mrs. J. J. Steinbach, recording secretary; Mrs. William F. Mortell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. D. Lindquist, 7032 Merrill avenue; Mrs. F. L. Kaye, 512 Fifth street, Wilmette; Mrs. E. PLAN HOLIDAY PROGRAMS AT M'CORMICK 'Y'

Christmas festivities at the McCormick residence Y. W. C. A., 1001 North Dearborn street, will start Wednesday afternoon with a Christmas tea for navy wives and will continue until the girls who spend Dec. 25 at the residence lean back contentedly after their old fashioned turkey dinner on Christmas day.

Triming the Christmas tree is a job assigned to 10 service men who will come to dinner at the residence Thursday evening. Their hostesses will direct the work. The same evening a candlelight dinner for former residents of McCormick Y will be followed by a program of Yuletide music by the Y's "singing doorman," James Lapsley.

Plan Christmas Dance.

Midshipmen and men from other Chicago army and navy training centers will be guests at the Christmas dance and Christmas tree party Saturday night. Betty O'Shea is dance chairman, assisted by Eleanor Duffy and Marjorie Bateman.

Mrs. Carroll H. Sudler, chairman of the McCormick residence committee and member of the Y. W. C. A. board of directors, will preside at the Christmas tea from 4 to 6 p. m. next Sunday. The glee club, under direction of Marjorie Hunter, will present a program of Christmas music.

ARTIST THECLA RELUCTANTLY TELLS HER LIFE

Hailed by Critics, She Hides Personality.

BY PHYLLIS FORD.

Julia Thecla.

Julia Thecla is an artist who would delight a novelist and worry a biographer. Her obliquity about certain facts in her life history is of little concern to art critics, however, for she has been hailed as the Degas of modern ballet and highly praised for her shows at the Art institute. Her last exhibit there was in October, and, more recently, she designed the scenery and some of the costumes for "Pandora," a production of the Ballet Repertory company.

Miss Thecla lives at 63 West Ontario street and likes privacy. A neatly lettered sign by her doorbell informs visitors that they should "telephone first for appointment." Even when this has been done she greets them with a certain timidity and shyness.

A Quality of Genius.

She has that combination of naiveté and sophistication which has been called a quality of genius. At one moment she will look as excited and eager as a child. At the next she will be discussing the Freudian ego as the source of artistic inspiration with all the assurance of a psychiatrist.

Her reputation for being a mystery, for she prefers to tell few things about herself, led a friend to say recently that Miss Thecla is "silent as the grave. And, the friend added, "Bohemian as all hell!" Referring no doubt to a few of Miss Thecla's ways which are not necessarily those of other people: a fondness for always wearing a net or scarf over her red hair; sleeping without a mattress; her penchant for posting small notes and signs on her walls or furniture; once keeping a pet chicken.

Straight Backed Visit.

On a recent afternoon in her studio, after she had hospitably made coffee and brought out some cookies, Miss Thecla talked a little about her background. But this don't make her happy. She sat all the while on the edge of a straight backed antique chair.

She comes from a small town in Illinois, "where all any one knew of art was the covers on women's magazines." She went to the University of Illinois and then studied at the Art institute here, supporting herself by working in an antique shop and with decorating jobs. When she wasn't painting or working she read philosophy, psychology, and poetry.

Withholds Her Poetry.

Miss Thecla has been exhibiting at the Art institute since 1931 and she has had her work shown in New York and Cleveland. Besides ballet dancers, some of her favorite subjects seem to be dreamlike, startling, brilliantly colored figures. Miss Thecla also writes poetry, altho she has not allowed many people to see much of it. "In painting you can often disguise what you mean," she said, by way of explanation, "but not in poetry."

Commenting on one of her shows at the institute, a critic wrote that Miss Thecla was a "maker of the most sensitive water colors, jewel-like in quality." The same critic called her "lazy" when her last exhibit opened. Miss Thecla, much concerned, bought some tablets and took them for five days. Then she decided she was as she was, and would only paint when she wanted to anyway, and threw out the pills.

UPTOWN DRAMA GROUP WILL GIVE FANTASY AT TEA

"The Christmas Window," a fantasy written by Mary Conen, 6242 North Bell avenue, with music arranged by Margaret Cashman, 2633 Estes avenue, will be presented at a drama tea to be given at 3 o'clock this afternoon by the Uptown Players, 1219 North La Salle street.

During the tea members of the Hawthorne choruses will sing. Those who plan to attend the tea are asked to bring a gift for service men.

Lorraine Hall, social chairman of the Uptown Players, is in charge of arrangements for the tea and of the distribution of the gifts, which will be given to men at the Howard Service Men's center.

Mallinckrodt Mothers' Club to Hold Yule Party

OPEN FIREPLACE IS GOOD FRIEND FOR HOLIDAYS

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Is your fireplace ready for the holidays?

The fireplace is one of our oldest friends when it comes to giving us extra heat. There are several things to do for a fireplace that seems dingy or sooty, dulled or soiled.

If your bricks are clean, but they seem dullish and you would like to give them a richer and slightly darker color, you can do this by giving them a good coat—a soaking coat—of raw linseed oil.

Good Points Available.

If you want to change their color you can paint them a light shade to match the woodwork, using a good grade of cement paint, or a casein paint. If you want to have a smart, modern black fireplace, you can use a paint especially manufactured and recommended for this work. Or you can make them black by use of nigrosine dye, also available at stores that carry paints.

If all your brickwork needs is a good scrubbing, you can use a stiff brush and some mechanic's soap that contains sand. Then rinse the bricks well with clear water after you have scrubbed them. You can use steel wool instead of a brush if you still have any on hand.

Where a fireplace face or hearth has stains that ordinary strong soaps or powders plus elbow grease won't remove, there's always the carborundum block to fall back on. Hardware dealers carry these and using one on the brickwork will give you, in time, a clean, smooth surface.

Study Damper Use.

A good damper, and knowledge of how to control it, is one way to assure a good grate fire. You will want plenty of draft at first, to start it and take off the first smoke. Then, when wood and kindling has started to burn briskly you can experiment and close damper enough to keep too much heat from going up the chimney, and yet not enough to cause any smoke.

And of course it is an old rule, but more necessary to be remembered this year than ever before, to keep the dampers closed when there's no fire.

U. OF CHICAGO GIVING DEGREES TO 255 FRIDAY

Fall Convocation Finds Many at War.

The autumn convocation of the University of Chicago, at which degrees will be conferred on 255 candidates, will be held at 3 p. m. Friday in Rockefeller Memorial chapel. It will be the 215th convocation at the university.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the university, will deliver the baccalaureate address at 11 a. m. today in Rockefeller chapel in the first ceremony of the convocation.

The exigencies of war time are reflected in the university announcement that of the 255 candidates, 44 will receive their degrees in absentia. Several of the graduates are in army camps and will receive their diplomas thru the mails.

Eleven Under 20 Years.

The graduating class includes 11 students under 20 years of age, who will receive diplomas under the Chicago plan, which provides for beginning college study at the end of the sophomore year in high school. These 11 young students have completed a four year college course at an age when most college students are beginning their junior year.

Seventy-seven students will receive bachelor degrees, 95 will receive master's degrees, and 26 will receive the degree of doctor of philosophy. The school of medicine, part of the division of biological science, will graduate 45 men and one woman. Of the men, 24 are in the army and 18 are in the navy.

Fifty per cent of the candidates for diplomas are women, a marked increase over the pre-war proportion of 40 per cent. The percentage rises among candidates for master's degrees, 72 per cent of whom are women. Eleven per cent of the women receiving degrees are married and are completing their college work.

Two Faculty Wives on List.

Two faculty wives are among the women receiving advanced degrees. Mrs. Herrlee G. Creel, 5434 Woodlawn avenue, whose husband is on leave from the university with the army, will receive the doctor of philosophy degree in absentia, and Mrs. Aaron J. Brumbaugh, 1360 East 58th street, wife of the dean of students, will receive a master's degree.

Dr. A. Eustace Haydon, professor of comparative religion, will give the convocation address on "Toward a New Synthesis in Culture." Emerly T. Filbey, vice president of the university, will confer the degrees. Harold A. Anderson, assistant professor of education, is in charge of the convocation.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? SGT. WILLIAM RILEY FINDS OUT ON FORT

Sgt. William D. Riley.

An 8th air force Flying Fortress, Blind Date, nearly became more than the name of a plane for Staff Sgt. William D. Riley, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Riley of 6019 Dorchester avenue, right waist gunner.

A dispatch from a bomber command station in England describes how Sgt. Riley's flying goggles were torn from his face, altho he escaped injury, in a bombing assault on Gelsenkirchen, Germany. The raid was Sgt. Riley's 17th over Germany and occupied Europe.

"There were at least 20 holes in the ship. One piece of flak came up thru the floor and sent splinters all over the place," Sgt. Riley said. Its controls damaged, the Blind Date had to leave its formation just as it started to cross the North sea, but managed to return safely to its home base. Sgt. Riley holds the air medal with three oak leaf clusters, and has been credited with destroying one enemy plane.

Capt. John Baptiste Routhier (center) chatting with his chief engineer, James Young, in office of Great Lakes ore boat, The International, welcomes a visit from his former first mate, left, Capt. Mark F. Plaar of sister ship, The Harvester. The boats are at 106th street docks of the Wisconsin Steel company, and made last run of the season last week-end. Next spring Capt. Routhier begins his 20th year as a Great Lakes captain.

Homecoming dinner for le capitaine at end of strenuous 7 day voyage from Chicago to Superior, Wis., is festive. Attractive Mrs. Routhier, John, 11, and her mother, Mrs. Pauline Brennecke, keep home fires stoked at 11320 Union avenue in captain's absence. Wedding gift dishes are from Quimper, France.

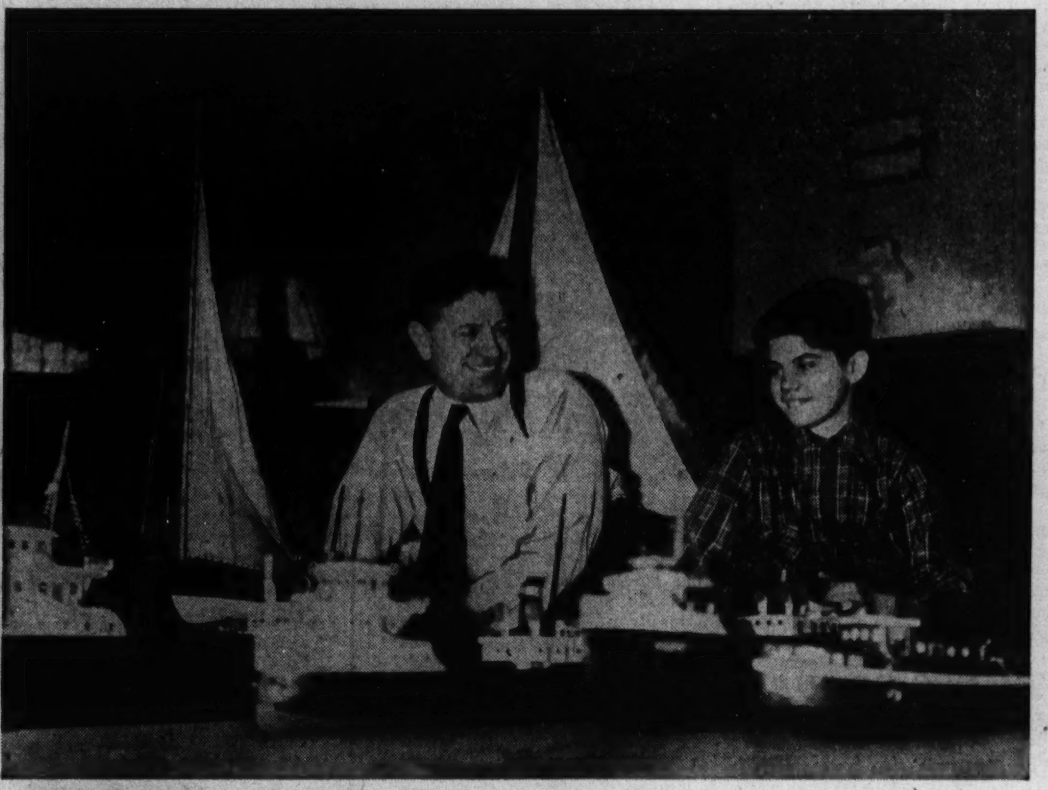
Kettelson (center), 1454 East 84th street, and wheelsman, Arne Krogh, salt tar from Oslo, Norway. In a hard blow, hot, black coffee helps keep men awake for 36 to 48 hour stretches.



A first rate skipper passes his knowledge of ships on to his son. John has ore boats, tug, life boat, and two yachts to sail in Jackson park. All were made aboard ship by Capt. Routhier. John, however, expects later to pilot ships thru the air.

SOUTH SIDE MAN RISKS DEATH TO DROP LAST BOMB

Without a parachute and with Germany several miles below, Lt. Robert D. Deloughary, 25, bombardier on the 8th air force Flying Fortress, Miss Mac, recently squirmed out on a narrow catwalk and worked for 10 minutes in subzero temperature to pry loose a large bomb.

An official army dispatch from England tells how Lt. Deloughary, son of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Deloughary, 10612 Yates avenue, called "bombs away" only to be told by the radio operator that "there's another one in here yet."

Flak was exploding all around the bomber, and his oxygen ran out so that he had to dive back into the engineer's compartment, and the plane was over the water by the time the bomb was released. The incident occurred during the Gdynia attack, one of the longest on record in the European theater of war. Lt. Deloughary, a graduate of Harper High school, told of the incident angrily. "How I wanted to drop that bomb on Germany," he said.

LAKES SKIPPER QUITS SHIP FOR WINTER LAYOFF

Ore Boat Will Spend Icy Season at Dock.

BY IRENE PONTO.

The fleet's in! And the captains and crews depart for a yearly wintry season holiday, good until spring begins to thaw the frozen north.

Last week-end Capt. John Baptisté Routhier brought in the International, block long Great Lakes ore boat of the Wisconsin Steel company, to the 106th street docks on its last trip of an eight month season of steady voyages to the iron ore docks at Superior, Wis.

Right now the crew is going over the boat, washing and cleaning the hold and quarters. Under Chief Engineer James Young, whose domain is the deep well of the engine room, machinery is being oiled, repaired, painted. Because of the man power shortage, a stoker will be installed.

Hibernate at Dock.

Soon, when a heavy blanket of snow covers the International and its sister ship, the Harvester, the two boats will slumber snugly at dock thru sleet and blizzard until mid-April.

Next spring, fresh from a four month vacation, Capt. Routhier will begin his 20th year as a captain on the Great Lakes, and his former first mate, Capt. Mark F. Plaar, will come from Cleveland, O., to pilot the Harvester for his second year.

Shipmates for 14 years, often times the two officers met over cribbage, the fun-loving Plaar's quips causing the serious mien of his captain to break into smiles and hearty chuckles. Now their two boats, passing on the lake, signal with long and short blasts.

Up in Superior, Wis., iron ore from the Mesabi range of Minnesota is loaded into the holds. The round trip takes about seven days, said Capt. Routhier, altho fog, storm, and delay in loading and at the Sault Ste. Marie locks vary the time.

Wife Meets Boat.

From the locks, Capt. Routhier wires the company the approximate time of making port in Chicago, and the company informs Mrs. Routhier, 11320 Union avenue. Whether morning, afternoon, night, or wee small hours, she drives to meet the captain and bring him home.

"During prohibition," the black-eyed skipper's lady who collects hobnail glass declared, "new neighbors wondered if we weren't bootleggers."

At home the captain partakes of a gala homecooked meal, catches up on local news, tweaks 11 year old John's ear, makes a rare business trip to the loop, and then is off again, the boat having been unloaded meanwhile, to ship north with ballast in the tanks.

Aboard ship the captain is warmly comfortable in paneled quarters, carpeted, airy, furnished with a damask draperies at portholes, sofa, parlor items, and a stateroom, office, bath, and adjoining passenger stateroom with twin beds. Business furniture includes a Sperry gyro-compass and a coffee thermos bottle strapped to the captain's desk.

Tension in Storm.

In storm the captain, ascending a steep flight of stairs, is at the wheelsman's elbow in a jiffy. All the comforts, plus superb meals in the stern dining rooms, fade. Tension fills the air, as high and thick as waves which have hurled themselves over the pilot house. Behind the captain and wheel lie the responsibility for a 2 million dollar boat, valuable war cargo, and 37 men.

As the fog horn bleats endlessly into an absorbing pillow of snow, the ship struggles thru embattled waters, its pilots relying greatly on a detection finder. For as much as 36 or 48 hours on end Capt. Routhier and assistants have kept their posts.

The "graveyard of the lakes" is off the Caribou Islands in Lake Superior, said the skipper, who has sailed the five Great Lakes with cargoes of rock, stone, gravel, sand, coal, and ore. Treacherous weather and currents up there make the captain shake his head gravely.

14 Trips in Fog.

"Last spring," he said, "we were slowed up with 14 straight trips thru fog on Michigan and Superior.

Of an old French-Canadian family, Capt. Routhier will visit his father, 88 years old, at St. Ignace, Mich., during the holidays. Once French speaking himself, the captain has lost his fine hand with the language, he admits.

CHEER LONELY YANKS, KIN AT CHRISTMASTIDE

Red Cross Adds Service to Bolster Spirits.

At no time of the year is loneliness so hard to bear, nor homesickness so overwhelming, than at Christmas time. And no other group of workers is more conscious of what Christmas in war time means than is the Red Cross. They know of the nostalgia of countless families here, of thousands of service men overseas, of prisoners in the hands of the enemy, and of families in occupied countries.

So this year the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross has added another role—Santa Claus—to its ever increasing list. The thousands of Red Cross workers themselves have taken on the added task, for the Christmas program of the Red Cross is "extra-official." No part of the war fund is used for this purpose. The gifts, the lovely wrappings, the greeting cards and trimmings, and the work necessary to get them all together, are all the result of individual donations and volunteer work added to regular tasks of the Red Cross workers.

Yule Task Many Sided.

The Red Cross Christmas program is divided into several parts, many of them interlocking. For instance, there are thousands of gifts made and donated by members of the production corps of the Chicago chapter. They are still coming in, and the total probably will reach 20,000 individual gifts. Under the direction of Mrs. Charles Krutchkoff, 5000 East End avenue, these mountains of gifts have been checked, wrapped, and are being assembled into gift boxes for some 1,400 families of service men recommended by the Red Cross home service.

Hundreds of beautifully dressed dolls will gladden the hearts of little girls whose fathers are overseas. Toys of every kind will appear under Christmas trees, along with warm snow suits, overcoats, and caps. The mothers of infants will welcome layettes exquisite with handwork. There will be afghans, quilts, blankets, robes, and slippers for the older folks. Many of the items have been made from salvaged material, coats from woolen samples, knitted suits from ravelled-out sweaters, cuddly toys from scrap-bag cottons.

The wrapping fund was donated, and makes possible that these gifts go forth done up in gay red and green tissue, complete with Christmas stickers and cards. Junior Red Cross members made boxes in which the gifts could be packed, and members of the motor corps deliver the gifts.

Numbers Hide Identities.

Red Cross workers believe the best part of the entire plan is the fact that both Santa Claus and the recipients are anonymous. Home service workers make the recommendations from among the families of service men being contacted. Each recommendation is accompanied by a thumbnail sketch of the members of the family, and suggestions as to the most appropriate gifts. These records come to the workers not as the Smiths or the Jones', but as numbers. When delivery is made, the numbers are matched with those on address labels.

What kind of families receive these gifts? Sometimes they are in financial straits, sometimes just unhappy. For instance, a warm bathrobe and slippers will go to the widowed mother of two marines, one of whom has been a Japanese prisoner since the early part of the war. Another, the wife of a seaman and her son, 3, is ill and finds it hard to live on a small income, but the boy looks forward to a bounteous Santa. There will be a housecoat and books for the mother, toys and warm clothing for the boy. And there are the eight children whose mother died a few weeks ago, and whose father is in a veterans' hospital. An older sister cares for the brood, and for an infirm grandmother of 85.

Remembering the families here at home is not all the Red Cross does. Chicago Juniors have shipped 2,600 pounds of gifts and favors to the boys overseas, as well as making 10,000 Christmas menu covers for navy ships at sea.

FIFTH GRADERS AT BRYN MAWR LEAD BOND DRIVE

$10,736 Total Almost Half for School.

Forty children in the 5-B class at Bryn Mawr school, 7355 Jeffery avenue, have set a record in the sale of war bonds and stamps that will provide the rest of the classes with a real goal in future drives to sell government war investments.

Mrs. Nita Kinsley's pupils at the school, in a drive that began Sept. 13 and ended Dec. 7, bought and sold war bonds and stamps with a total maturity value of $10,736.95. The rest of the school's classes sold a total of $11,810.

Will Buy Jeeps.

At the end of the campaign Miss Mary G. Borough, principal, said the class had notified the treasury department to purchase three jeeps, two "quacks" or amphibious jeeps, and one "grasshopper" or flying jeep with the money the class raised. The rest of the school bought four jeeps, two "quacks," and one "grasshopper."

Sold $1,000 Bond.

The class sold stamps and bonds ranging in value from 10 cents to $1,000. One boy, by being persistent, talked his father into buying a $1,000 bond, the largest sold by any class at the school. Pupils in the 5-B class are 10 and 11 years old.

How did they accomplish their record? "The teacher set the example for them," Miss Borough said. "Miss Kinsley was so interested in the drive that her enthusiasm transmitted itself to the children in her class so that they really went out and worked to put their group at the top for the whole school."

MAN IN A HURRY IS SOUTH SIDER; WANTS AT JAPS

Hero of Italy Invasion Goes to Pacific.

Ensign Dale Einhorn, son of Mrs. Alfred Lee of 7625 Essex avenue, is a young man in a hurry. A hero of the invasion of Italy, he is on his way to the Pacific ocean.

"I'm anxious to get at some of those Japs," Ensign Einhorn said. So anxious is he, in fact, that he declared that if he wasn't out on a ship in the Pacific by Jan. 1 "it will be because I'm dead and can't get there."

Treated for Injuries.

Ensign Einhorn has been receiving medical treatment in Chicago for second and third degree burns and a back injury he received when the Liberty ship on which he was serving suffered a direct hit from a German plane at Salerno, Italy, about five days after the initial invasion force hit the beach.

Exploding munitions and burning gasoline spread flames along the deck and Ensign Einhorn told a group of army engineers to jump overboard to escape the flames. Einhorn threw three liferafts over the side, then jumped into the sea with a line to lash the rafts together.

He suffered his burns and back injury before he jumped from the ship. After treatment in a hospital at Palermo, Sicily, he returned to this country for further treatment and requested duty in the Pacific. He received the Purple Heart medal for his wounds.

Ship Survives Other Attacks.

Ensign Einhorn's ship survived two other attacks by enemy planes. Once it was at anchor in the harbor of Bizerte when German planes attacked. The ship was not hit altho one nearby was hit by bombs. At the time of the invasion of Sicily, the ship was attacked by German planes in the Mediterranean. On this occasion the ship accounted for five German planes, Einhorn said.

A graduate in 1942 of Hyde Park High school, Ensign Einhorn sailed on Great Lakes ships in his high school days before entering the maritime service. He served as ship's purser, manning a gun and passing ammunition whenever more men were needed for those duties.

Altho he doesn't have to report on the west coast until Jan. 1, he didn't figure on staying around long. "I'm tired of it here already," he said. "I want to get back out there in it again."

ARMY HOSPITAL PATIENTS SHOP EARLY, EASILY

Patients at the Gardiner General hospital, 1660 Hyde Park boulevard, are doing their Christmas shopping early this year, and doing it without milling thru the holiday season crowds that now fill shopping districts.

Col. John R. Hall, commanding officer at the hospital, announced that Red Cross Gray Ladies go thru all wards each day with extensive shopping lists from Chicago stores, so that soldiers may select gifts for examination.

The Gray Ladies in the arts and skills department wrap and mail packages if the patients desire it. The service, intended to stimulate early shopping and mailing of Christmas gifts, will end Wednesday, Col. Hall said.

WOMAN ARTIST SEEKS INSTITUTE HONOR 3D TIME

Gray Haired Clubwoman Knows Her Art.

"My daughter thinks I should be satisfied to have had two of my paintings hung in the Art institute but I crave the honor just once more."

The determination in the steady voice of gray haired Mrs. Nellie O'Connor belies her statement and indicates that she would hardly be satisfied even tho the walls of the institute were covered with her works.

As a matter of fact Mrs. O'Connor's daughter, Mrs. Francis T. Wilson, 535 Cherry street, Winnetka, has wondered why her mother ever adopted the easel and brushes at an age when most women are content to survey their accomplishments and applaud the deeds of their grandchildren.

Travel Leads to Art Interest.

Mrs. O'Connor also has wondered why she took up painting, for fresh in her remarkable memory is the distaste with which her school girl art efforts were regarded by her teachers. She believes her extensive travel since her husband's death led to the shift in her abilities. She toured first in Europe and then in the orient and South Pacific, spending considerable time in India, China, Japan, and the islands now being used by marines as stepping stones to the land of the rising sun.

Feminine about her age, Mrs. O'Connor is not backward in discussing her painting. "My style is modern but not modernistic," she insists. In her mind the difference is that modern paintings resemble the subjects while modernistic efforts have the same abstract qualities as mathematics and thus are sometimes difficult for the laymen to interpret.

First Lesson in Michigan.

It was after she rounded out three-quarters of a century that Mrs. O'Connor took her first informal lesson in Saugatuck, Mich. The next year one of her paintings was hung in the institute. Later she studied in Provincetown, Mass., and again one of her efforts found its way to the institute.

While her new work takes up a great deal of her time, Mrs. O'Connor has not neglected her other interests and is still an active member of the Chicago Woman's club whose lavish headquarters at 72 East 11th street she helped plan. She has also continued her literary efforts. Having published a book dealing with Buddhism historically, she is working on another to be titled "The Wisdom of China and India."

Active in Art Association.

Mrs. O'Connor also is a member of the South Side Art association and largely because of her interest in that group has established winter residence in the Windermere East hotel. Last winter she lived with Mrs. Wilson in Winnetka but found it too difficult to commute to the city for the many events in which she was interested.

SOUTH SIDE PILOT WINGS CRIPPLED FORTRESS HOME

Bombing the southern end of the Brenner pass at Bolzano, Italy, the meeting place of Mussolini and Hitler, and returning to his base with one engine on his Flying Fortress out of commission was the experience recently of Lt. Col. Frank Allen of 6736 East End avenue.

In a story from the 15th army air forces in North Africa Col. Allen said the weather "was really 'stinko'" as the ships went in to their target, "but it cleared up before long and we saw some fighters on the way in.

"The entire crew began to 'sweat' when those fighters made a couple of passes at us," said Col. Allen, a former United Air Lines pilot. "I heard the guns bark a little and kept heading for home, and after about half an hour the boys informed me that Jerry had decided to call it a day. You know there is one thing I like about these Flying Fortresses. There really has to be something wrong with them before they fail to get you back."

SINATRA DOUBLE MAKES GOOD IN OWN FILM ROLES

Dave Willock, a former south side resident, who was born and reared in Chicago, is making a career for himself in the movies in spite of such a likeness to Frank Sinatra that he is often taken for the latest sensation in the singing world.

Dave Willock.

Dave, the son of Mr. and Mrs. David W. Willock, 7300 South Shore drive, is a graduate of Parker High school and the University of Wisconsin. He studied applied arts at the university and was part of a radio comedy team heard over station WTNJ in Milwaukee before he went west.

In California, Dave continued to work in his own field until he entered dramatic school. Later he was signed to a long term contract by 20th Century-Fox, and launched upon a movie career. He has appeared in two Bob Hope films, "Let's Face It," and "Caught in the Draft."

Other films in which he has appeared include "Good Girls Go to Paris," with Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas; "The Gang's All Here," with Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, and Phil Baker, and "Pin-Up Girl," with Betty Grable.

Married to a Los Angeles girl, Dave lives in North Hollywood, Cal., with his wife and two daughters, Lynn, 8 years old, and Suze, 3. His brother, Jack, is a staff sergeant in the air force, stationed in Sicily. Dave has appeared at the Hollywood canteen and at army camps and bond rallies.

TECH BECOMES LARGEST SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING

The nation's largest engineering school, the Illinois Institute of Technology, completes two years operation in war time with the mightiest program in its history and a record of having become the busiest as well as the biggest engineering college in the country.

As a result, the lights go on early in buildings on the Tech campuses and in classrooms, before ordinary folks are stirring from their homes, and flicker late into the night as Tech turns to the task of instructing trained war plant personnel and engineers.

Shortage of Engineers.

Altho the war has brought an influx of army and navy students and thousands of special students in courses set up to meet war time demands of industry, Tech has had a prominent place in the war program from the very beginning, for its main product has always been engineers, and the war man power commission has termed the lack of engineers as one of the nation's worst man power shortages.

An accelerated program put into effect this year now finds the school on a round-the-year calendar of three 16 week terms, with all holidays eliminated except Christmas, when students receive a one day vacation from class work. Classes begin at 7:30 a. m. and continue to 5:20 p. m., not including special courses, and engineers are trained in two and a half years under the streamlined setup. Four years of school was necessary under the pre-war schedule.

Because Illinois Tech is primarily an engineering college, the demands of war are always near at hand. Frills in college life have been discarded; graduation ceremonies cut to the minimum as senior classes increase in number, and, if four weeks of the year were not the absolute smallest amount of time needed for registration and administrative work, college officials say those weeks would be utilized for classes.

Add Russian Language.

The college curriculum has undergone little change. A course in the Russian language has been added, and American history is a requirement for graduation. Because instruction in physics is first on the list of both army and navy, these classes have the biggest enrollment in their history.

Any one of 41 separate places in Chicago where Illinois Tech conducts classes could be called a part of the campus. These include 27 war plants, where Tech is pioneering at "in-plant" training classes to develop foremen, supervisors, safety directors, and other trained employes needed by industry.

The south and west side campuses, the John Marshall law school classrooms, George Williams college, where 300 navy men attend classes on a subcontract basis, the safety training center in the Civic Opera building, the explosives safety school at 333 North Michigan avenue, and the department of architecture, which meets at the Art institute, are among the places where training is given.

End Signal Corps School.

In the school set up for the army signal corps, 4,316 men were trained in basic pre-radar work, advanced electronics, ultra-high frequency technics, and code and radio procedure, by last August, when the training program closed because the signal corps had enough men trained. The ordnance inspection training program also ended this year after 1,446 persons, 556 of them women, had been trained as ordnance inspectors.

The engineering, science, management, and war training program at Illinois Tech is the largest in the country. Since Pearl Harbor day two years ago 34,256 persons have enrolled in war training courses, and the current courses have an enrollment of 4,665. Thousands of women have graduated from the courses into jobs in industry. This program included instruction in food dehydration.

Party Will Aid Leper Colony

The Dutton league, a nonsectarian organization which supplies funds for the personal needs of lepers, is sponsoring a card party Saturday in the C parlor of the Morrison hotel.

In stressing the necessity of raising funds this year, Mrs. W. P. O'Grady, 1319 Hood avenue, explained that the number of patients in the colony at Carville, La., which the league services, has increased recently as numerous new cases have been discovered thru draft board examinations.

Officers of the league in addition to Mrs. O'Grady include: Mrs. J. W. Kohler, 6456 North Fairfield avenue; Mrs. I. J. Chevlin, 1425 Winnemac avenue, and Miss Mae Crowley, 4000 Washington boulevard; Mrs. Henry C. Binder, 4859 North Rockwell street; Mrs. James Roche, 4536 Hermitage avenue; Mrs. J. P. Van Duzer, 2720 Dayton street; Mrs. Catherine Loy, 7258 South Racine avenue, and Mrs. H. A. Jacobs, 1529 East 76th street, vice presidents; Mrs. J. J. Steinbach, recording secretary; Mrs. William F. Mortell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. D. Lindquist, 7032 Merrill avenue; Mrs. F. L. Kaye, 512 Fifth street, Wilmette; Mrs. E. G. de Launty, 1732 North Park avenue, and Mrs. Katherine Wilkinson, 1464 Pensacola avenue.

OPEN FIREPLACE IS GOOD FRIEND FOR HOLIDAYS

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Is your fireplace ready for the holidays?

The fireplace is one of our oldest friends when it comes to giving us extra heat. There are several things to do for a fireplace that seems dingy or sooty, dulled or soiled.

If your bricks are clean, but they seem dullish and you would like to give them a richer and slightly darker color, you can do this by giving them a good coat—a soaking coat—of raw linseed oil.

Good Points Available.

If you want to change their color you can paint them a light shade to match the woodwork, using a good grade of cement paint, or a casein paint. If you want to have a smart, modern black fireplace, you can use a paint especially manufactured and recommended for this work. Or you can make them black by use of nigrosine dye, also available at stores that carry paints.

If all your brickwork needs is a good scrubbing, you can use a stiff brush and some mechanic's soap that contains sand. Then rinse the bricks well with clear water after you have scrubbed them. You can use steel wool instead of a brush if you still have any on hand.

Where a fireplace face or hearth has stains that ordinary strong soaps or powders plus elbow grease won't remove, there's always the carborundum block to fall back on. Hardware dealers carry these and using one on the brickwork will give you, in time, a clean, smooth surface.

Study Damper Use.

A good damper, and knowledge of how to control it, is one way to assure a good grate fire. You will want plenty of draft at first, to start it and take off the first smoke. Then, when wood and kindling has started to burn briskly you can experiment and close damper enough to keep too much heat from going up the chimney, and yet not enough to cause any smoke.

And of course it is an old rule, but more necessary to be remembered this year than ever before, to keep the dampers closed when there's no fire.

Some 80 members of this year's chorus have sung in previous "Messiah" concerts in the suburb. The chorus will be supplemented by several of Mrs. Pohlmann's pupils at Austin High school, and a group from Peace Lutheran church in Chicago.

Fifteen minutes before the concert begins, six trumpeters, members of the high school band, will play Christmas carols from the church tower.

Sing in Austin Tonight.

Members of the Oriana a cappella choir and the Austin Choral club will give their 13th annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" at 8 o'clock tonight in Austin Methodist church, Race and Central avenues. Dr. Paul Vernon, director of the Austin Academy of Fine Arts, will direct the choir, Blanche Webber Vernon will again be at the organ, and Doris Sale Stevenson at the piano.

Others appearing with the group for the first time will be Maurine Parzybok, contralto who is soloist at the Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago; Maxwell Wilson, tenor, and Harry Swanson, bass-baritone soloist of the First Methodist church of Evanston.

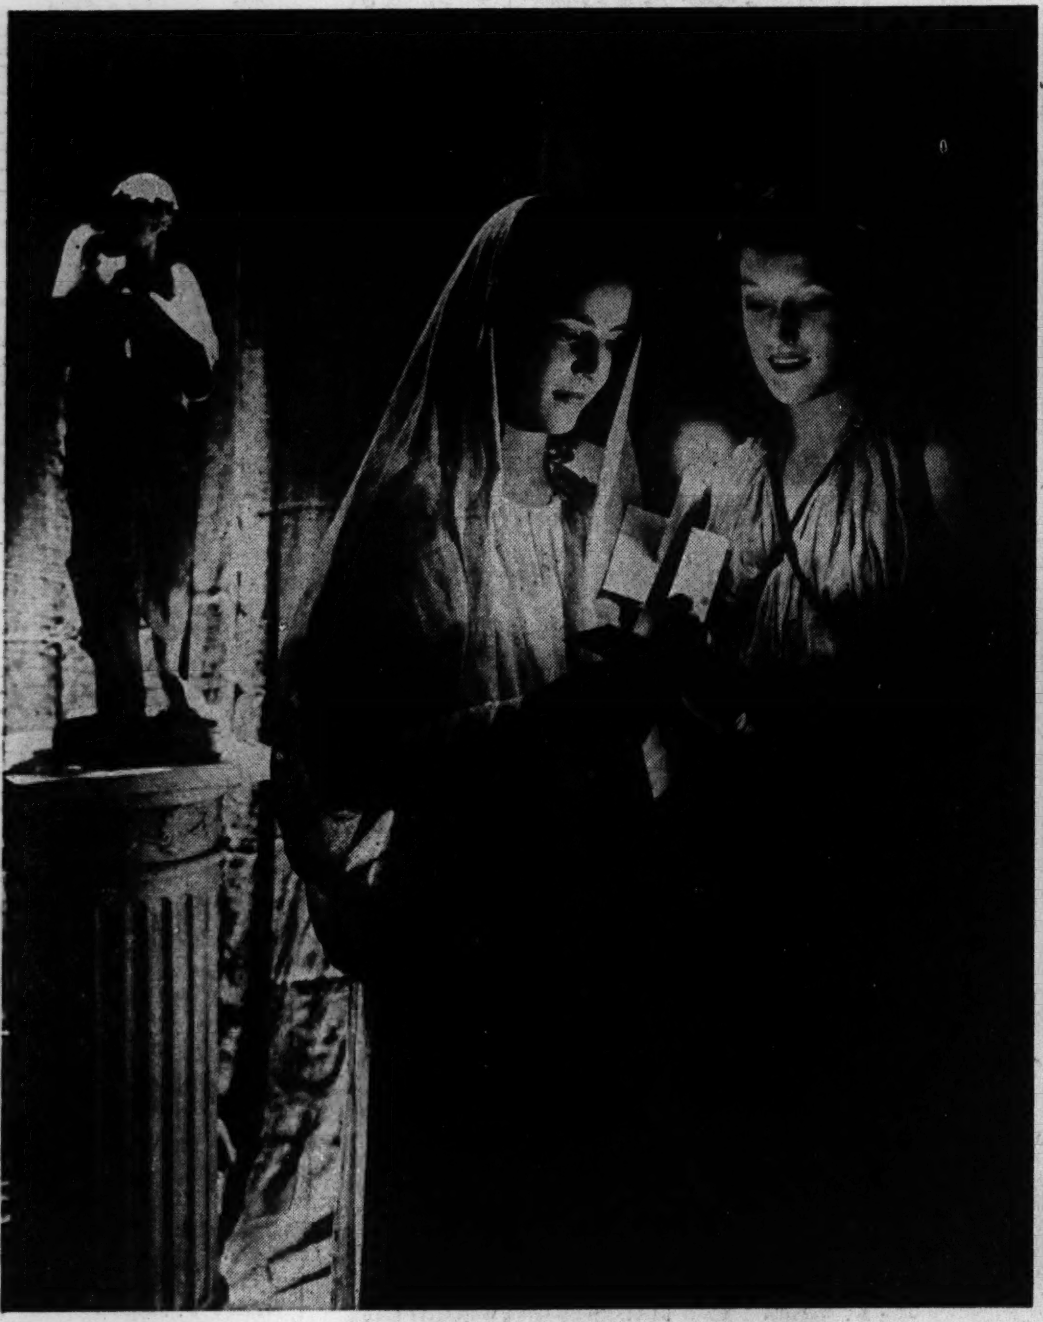
Latin Club Members at York High Don Togas for a Banquet in Style of Ancient Rome



Rationing problems meant special planning, but did not deter the Latin club of York High school, Elmhurst, from holding its 22d annual Roman banquet in the classical manner. Lighting the banquet candles in the girls' gymnasium that was decorated like a Roman garden was assigned to Marilyn Halbe, left, and Jean McCall. The toga clad guests included those who were taking Latin or had studied the subject for at least three years.

Nor did ancient Rome have girls more beautiful than those at York who dramatize the morning visit to the spring. It was a time for gossip as well as for the filling of pitchers. The custom is still followed in many Italian villages of today.

The glory that was Rome was recaptured at the 22d annual Roman banquet recently held by the Latin club at York High school, Elmhurst. For the night, students translated the words of their text books into a scene where slaves dressed in brown tunics waited upon brilliant men wearing togas and women with their beauty enhanced by stolas and pallas of varied colors.

The long tables in the school gymnasium were lighted by candles, and favors consisted of alternating tiny chariots and Roman lamps. Interested in watching that the quotations from Horace and Vergil were correct were Miss Dorothy Howe, sponsor of the Latin club, and Miss Lois Ashton, former sponsor.

Letter from Australia.

From far off Australia, Jack Kelly, now in service, wrote that he hoped the traditional event at York would be a happy one. Alumni remember the night of historic make believe, and freshmen look forward to taking the role of slaves who wait on the banquet guests.

It was Rome in its days of power that was interpreted by the Latin club and there was no hint of the dilemma in which that ancient city finds itself today. But war time necessitated a substitute for the roast boar that, in pre-ration days was borne into the banquet hall by the slaves. This year, the pig was paper mache. Roast pork and apple sauce was a part of the menu.

A Microphone Intrudes!

Fred Koecher, a senior, acknowledged to be the school's best Latin student, was paterfamilias. Don Anderson was program chairman [princeps optimus maxium]. Georgine Kalsch, president of the Latin club, was hostess [hospes, but unlike any hospes of Roman days she spoke thru a microphone.

As secretary of the Latin club, Carolyn Brehm had the title of discipula praestantissima. Stuart Roeder was chairman of programs [delectatio]. Other chairmen were June De Wolf, food [cibus]; Elaine Strauschild, dress [vestitus]; Robert Brown, decorations [ornamenta]; Lois Smith, hospitality [hospitum]; Katherine Dimmitt, scrolls [volumina]; Ludwig Grandl, publicity [celebritas]; Margaret Arent, posters [signa]; Dorothy Boultbee, tickets [tessura pittacium]; and Kathryn Schmitt, favors [apophoreta]. Miss Mary Jordan, faculty member, and Ellen Zwicky, directed the dance of the vestal virgins [choragae].

GLENBARD HIGH PRESENTS YULE PROGRAM TODAY

Tell Holiday Story in Music and Drama.

Glenbard High school's annual Christmas program will be presented at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the school auditorium at Glen Ellyn. Participating will be the a cappella choir, the band, the orchestra, and the department of speech.

The program will begin a candlelight processional by the choir singing "Adeste Fidelis." Augmented by members of the junior choruses, the choir will sing "Stars Lead Us Ever On," a Sioux tribal carol arranged by Harvey B. Gaul, and "And the Trees Do Moan," also by Gaul. Other numbers by the vocalists will include "Shepherd's Story" by Dickinson; and "Nowell We Sing," a novelty by Donald E. Sellew of La Salle, Ill. For nearly a decade, Raymond N. Carr's setting of "Silent Night" has, by popular demand, been a feature of the Glenbard yuletide concerts and it has been given careful attention again this year.

Rhapsody by Band.

The Glenbard band has prepared a Christmas rhapsody on two well know carols, "First Nowell" and "Deck the Hall with Boughs of Holly," and the "White Christmas" excerpt from "Holiday Inn," in which they will be assisted by a semi-chorus of girls selected from the choir. The band also will play several marches.

"Why the Chimes Rang" has been chosen as the Christmas play to be presented by the dramatic department. Members of the cast are George Albue, Werner Jacuh, Phil Troyke, Sarah Ross, Don Merkel, Richard Schroeder, Robert Saxon, Jo Keller, William Roake, and Pat Jensen.

Soloists With Choir.

Soloists on the choir program will be Betty Nichol, Beverly Bruroughs, Joan Ross, Patricia Rawlings, Herbert Moulton, Philip Troyke, and Richard Rogers. Bette Stitt, Eulalie Wolebin, and the orchestra will assist in the choir accompaniments.

Miss Rachel Whitfield is director of the dramatic department, Orth G. Baer directs the band, and Raymond N. Carr leads the choir and choruses as well as the singing of carols by the audience.

The choir and choruses will give a program of Christmas songs and carols on the night of Dec. 23 over the loud speaker system in the Glen Ellyn village square.

Doll Party Will Aid Cook County Hospital Patients

A doll party for the patients at Cook County hospital will be given Friday night in the Columbus park recreation center, Central avenue and Congress street. Every one is requested to bring a doll to be dressed and then given to a young patient on Christmas morning.

HINSDALE PUPILS PREPARE ANNUAL NATIVITY DRAMA

More than 300 pupils are rehearsing for the seventh annual Nativity pageant to be given at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m. Thursday in the gymnasium of Hinsdale High school.

The performance is composed in part of a religious tableau by a small group against a background of church windows. An a cappella choir of 120 voices will sing from the darkened balcony. Below, a procession of 180 candle bearing upper classmen will move to the accompaniment of chimes and kneel to sing the Lord's Prayer.

A junior high school chorus will lead the processional, and a group of fifth grade pupils will appear on the stage as the angel host. H. F. Mossman, principal, is general chairman of the pageant. Musical numbers will include Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" and Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring." Admission invitations may be obtained thru the high school office or from a chorus member.

Post to Observe Shelton Day in Maywood Today

John H. Shelton American Legion post will celebrate John H. Shelton day with an Americanism program at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Washington elementary school, 12th avenue and Washington boulevard, Maywood. The post is inviting all veterans to take part in the ceremony. Posts also are requested to bring their colors in time to have them massed before the actual program begins.

MECHANICS OPERA COMPANY WILL GIVE CONCERT IN AUSTIN

Gabriele Tose.

The Dragosh Opera company will present the Tose Symphony orchestra in a concert at 8 o'clock next Sunday night in Austin Masonic auditorium, 241 North Central avenue. Gabriele Tose will conduct and the guest soloists will be Adelina Trentadue, soprano, and Enrico Clausi, tenor.

For five years John Dragosh, a former dancer with the Chicago Opera ballet, and now a mechanic, has presented a series of operas, concerts, and dramatic productions in various parts of the city. His object is to cultivate the public's taste for opera and classical music with productions brought to the immediate neighborhood.

The conductor for next Sunday night's concert is the son of Vito Tose, one of the first bandmasters to introduce Italian bands into Germany and Scandinavian countries. Tose began studying with his father at the age of 6 years and later entered the Bologna Conservatory of Music in Italy where he eventually became a member of the faculty.

Austin Sisterhood

Members of the Austin Jewish Community Center sisterhood will meet at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday in the center, 116 South Central avenue.

Not Everyone Can Live in

La Grange

If you're a good citizen, with a family that believes in the true American way of life, we would welcome you as a neighbor.

That invitation to live here can't be extended for immediate acceptance, for this town, because of its desirability, has only a limited number of homes to be rented or sold.

Some day new homes will rise here . . . to take their places in harmony with the well-kept houses, the well-groomed lawns and gardens which mark this exceptional American village. Then you can come.

Meanwhile you might choose this pre-Christmas season to visit here, to learn the pleasure of shopping in a village where customers are received, not as strangers, but as friends. You'll be welcome and you'll know it.

APPOINT SIX NEW W. SIDE SCHOOL GYM TEACHERS

Temporary Jobs Relieve War Shortages.

Recent authorization by the board of education for 50 new teachers in the elementary schools included the appointment of six to posts in west side schools.

All teachers of physical education, they include: Jean Dillion, Haven and Foster schools; Virginia Jordan and Joseph Kennedy, Bryant; Annamarie Leahy, Brainard; Shirley F. Walker and Maurice Lieb, Lawson.

Loss to War Industry.

The appointments were made by Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, when a sufficient number of substitutes ceased to be available to fill vacancies. Higher wages in industry have attracted many counted upon to do substitute work, Dr. Johnson explained.

Most of the appointments were made on a temporary basis. The teachers will receive regular pay and other regular teacher benefits, but will be subject to dismissal when regular teachers, most of whom have left for war service, return from leaves of absence.

List New Transfers.

Recent transfers of elementary school teachers and the schools to which they have been assigned include: Florence Carlson, Froebel school; Wilma B. Oldfield, Jefferson; Mary A. Larsen, Key; Minetta Burke, Ella McMahon, and Florence N. Ward, Spalding; Gertrude Curtin, Lillian F. Davis, Claudia N. Jackson, and Lucille V. B. BOYS AND GIRLS ORGANIZING OWN SOCIAL CENTER

A social center which will be known as the Corral is being planned in La Grange for teen-age groups. Most of the work on the project is being done by the boys and girls themselves, and the high school and junior college young folk hope to have a place to visit on week-end nights.

The large hall on the second floor of the Odd Fellows building on Harris avenue is being considered for quarters of the new center.

Plans call for an adult advisory board, a list of adults who will serve as chaperons, and an application for a charter from the Junior Achievement National headquarters.

A goal of $2,500 has been set tentatively. Charles Cassell of the Recreation commission estimates the amount would be sufficient to guarantee the rental of the center and assure for the project a sound financial start.

SINGING SOCIETY IN BERWYN LOOKS FOR NEW TALENT

Berwyn has a new singing society in the process of organization. A meeting place for Monday night rehearsals has been provided thru the courtesy of the Berwyn United Lutheran church, 24th street and Harvey avenue, of which the Rev. Andrew Swasko is pastor. Stephen Erst has agreed to direct the group of persons of all ages who have a common interest in good music.

Plans for the choral group were originated by Mrs. Bessie Haralik, 2645 Harvey avenue, Berwyn. First meetings were held in Mrs. Haralik's home, and Mr. Erst volunteered the services as pianist and director.

Mr. Erst has had long experience as a choral club director. He was director of the Suburban Choral club and of the Smetana club, and is himself a music composer.

Offer of the Berwyn United Lutheran church as a meeting place was particularly appreciated because of its central location. Mrs. Haralik said any one over 15 years old who was interested in joining in the singing of semi-classical songs would be invited to join the club. Eventually, she said, the choral group would present concerts. The repertoire will include Czech songs.

Among those who attended the organization meeting at Mrs. Haralik's home were Mrs. Mildred J. Anderle, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Nastek, Mrs. Elsie Cernota, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Budnik, Mr. and Mrs. Erst, James Schwab, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smrz, Jerome A. Pav, Miss Helen Koska, Mrs. Marie Donat, Miss Dolores Simek, Miss Blanche Erst, and Mrs. Haralik.

OPEN FIREPLACE IS GOOD FRIEND FOR HOLIDAYS

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Is your fireplace ready for the holidays?

The fireplace is one of our oldest friends when it comes to giving us extra heat. There are several things to do for a fireplace that seems dingy or sooty, dulled or soiled.

If your bricks are clean, but they seem dullish and you would like to give them a richer and slightly darker color, you can do this by giving them a good coat—a soaking coat—of raw linseed oil.

Good Points Available.

If you want to change their color you can paint them a light shade to match the woodwork, using a good grade of cement paint, or a casein paint. If you want to have a smart, modern black fireplace, you can use a paint especially manufactured and recommended for this work. Or you can make them black by use of nigrosine dye, also available at stores that carry paints.

If all your brickwork needs is a good scrubbing, you can use a stiff brush and some mechanic's soap that contains sand. Then rinse the bricks well with clear water after you have scrubbed them. You can use steel wool instead of a brush if you still have any on hand.

Where a fireplace face or hearth has stains that ordinary strong soaps or powders plus elbow grease won't remove, there's always the carborundum block to fall back on. Hardware dealers carry these and using one on the brickwork will give you, in time, a clean, smooth surface.

Study Damper Use.

A good damper, and knowledge of how to control it, is one way to assure a good grate fire. You will want plenty of draft at first, to start it and take off the first smoke. Then, when wood and kindling has started to burn briskly you can experiment and close damper enough to keep too much heat from going up the chimney, and yet not enough to cause any smoke.

And of course it is an old rule, but more necessary to be remembered this year than ever before, to keep the dampers closed when there's no fire.

N. W. SIDE PARKS PLAN YULE PARTIES

CHEER LONELY YANKS, KIN AT CHRISTMASTIDE

Red Cross Presses New Service.

At no time of the year is loneliness so hard to bear, nor homesickness so overwhelming, than at Christmas time. And no other group of workers is more conscious of what Christmas in war time means than is the Red Cross. They know of the nostalgia of countless families here, of thousands of service men overseas, of prisoners in the hands of the enemy, and of families in occupied countries.

So this year the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross has added another role—Santa Claus—to its ever increasing list. The thousands of Red Cross workers themselves have taken on the added task, for the Christmas program of the Red Cross is "extra-official." No part of the war fund is used for this purpose. The gifts, the lovely wrappings, the greeting cards and trimmings, and the work necessary to get them all together, are all the result of individual donations and volunteer work added to regular tasks of the Red Cross workers.

Yule Task Many Sided.

The Red Cross Christmas program is divided into several parts, many of them interlocking. For instance, there are thousands of gifts made and donated by members of the production corps of the Chicago chapter. They are still coming in, and the total probably will reach 20,000 individual gifts. Under the direction of Mrs. Charles Krutchkoff, 5000 East End avenue, these mountains of gifts have been checked, wrapped, and are being assembled into gift boxes for some 1,400 families of service men recommended by the Red Cross home service.

Hundreds of beautifully dressed dolls will gladden the hearts of little girls whose fathers are overseas. Toys of every kind will appear under Christmas trees, along with warm snow suits, overcoats, and caps. The mothers of infants will welcome layettes exquisite with handwork. There will be afghans, quilts, blankets, robes, and slippers for the older folks. Many of the items have been made from salvaged material, coats from woolen samples, knitted suits from ravelled-out sweaters, cuddly toys from scrap-bag cottons.

The wrapping fund was donated, and makes possible that these gifts go forth done up in gay red and green tissue, complete with Christmas stickers and cards. Junior Red Cross members made boxes in which the gifts could be packed, and members of the motor corps deliver the gifts.

Numbers Hide Identities.

Red Cross workers believe the best part of the entire plan is the fact that both Santa Claus and the recipients are anonymous. Home service workers make the recommendations from among the families of service men being contacted. Each recommendation is accompanied by a thumbnail sketch of the members of the family, and suggestions as to the most appropriate gifts. These records come to the workers not as the Smiths or the Jones', but as numbers. When delivery is made, the numbers are matched with those on address labels.

What kind of families receive these gifts? Sometimes they are in financial straits, sometimes just unhappy. For instance, a warm bathrobe and slippers will go to the widowed mother of two marines, one of whom has been a Japanese prisoner since the early part of the war. Another, the wife of a seaman and her son, 3, is ill and finds it hard to live on a small income, but the boy looks forward to a bounteous Santa. There will be a housecoat and books for the mother, toys and warm clothing for the boy. And there are the eight children whose mother died a few weeks ago, and whose father is in a veterans' hospital. An older sister cares for the brood, and for an infirm grandmother of 85. The Red Cross will see to it that their Christmas is made merrier!

Remembering the families here at home is not all the Red Cross does. Chicago Juniors have shipped 2,600 pounds of gifts and favors to the boys overseas, as well as making 10,000 Christmas menu covers for navy ships at sea.

Remember Wounded, Prisoners.

The juniors remember children of other lands, too. Last year they sent 1,800 boxes of gifts to children in foreign countries who probably received no other Christmas remembrance. Gray Ladies are planning Christmas festivities for the six military and naval hospitals in the area. Thousands of gifts will go to these hospitals thru the camp and hospital committee. The Red Cross has shipped 10,000 special Christmas parcels so that each American prisoner of war and civilian internee in Europe should receive one. To our prisoners of war and internees in the far east, Christmas gifts this year should mean something special, because the $1,500,000 Red Cross re-

Pupils of Linne School Portray Manger Scenes for Christmas Pageant

Wise men come from afar, bearing gold, frankincense, and myrrh. For atmosphere, this part of the tableau is graced by a realistic, homemade camel, complete with ornate trappings. Resplendent in robes which were backdrops for last year's play, and crowned with pasteboard diadems studded with tinfoil gems, are Robert Wendtland, Donald McKay, and Elmer Jones. Walter Kaste painted the backdrop, and Gus Poulos and William Eggert constructed the camel.

Hardly the orthodox version of seraphic choir boys, these Linne students put aside mischief temporarily, just for the school play. They are Richard Pendergast, 7; John Schweitzer, 8; Robert Miscevich, 5½; Freddie John Timley, 7½, and Gale Johnson, 6½. Gale is the third generation in his family to attend Linne school.

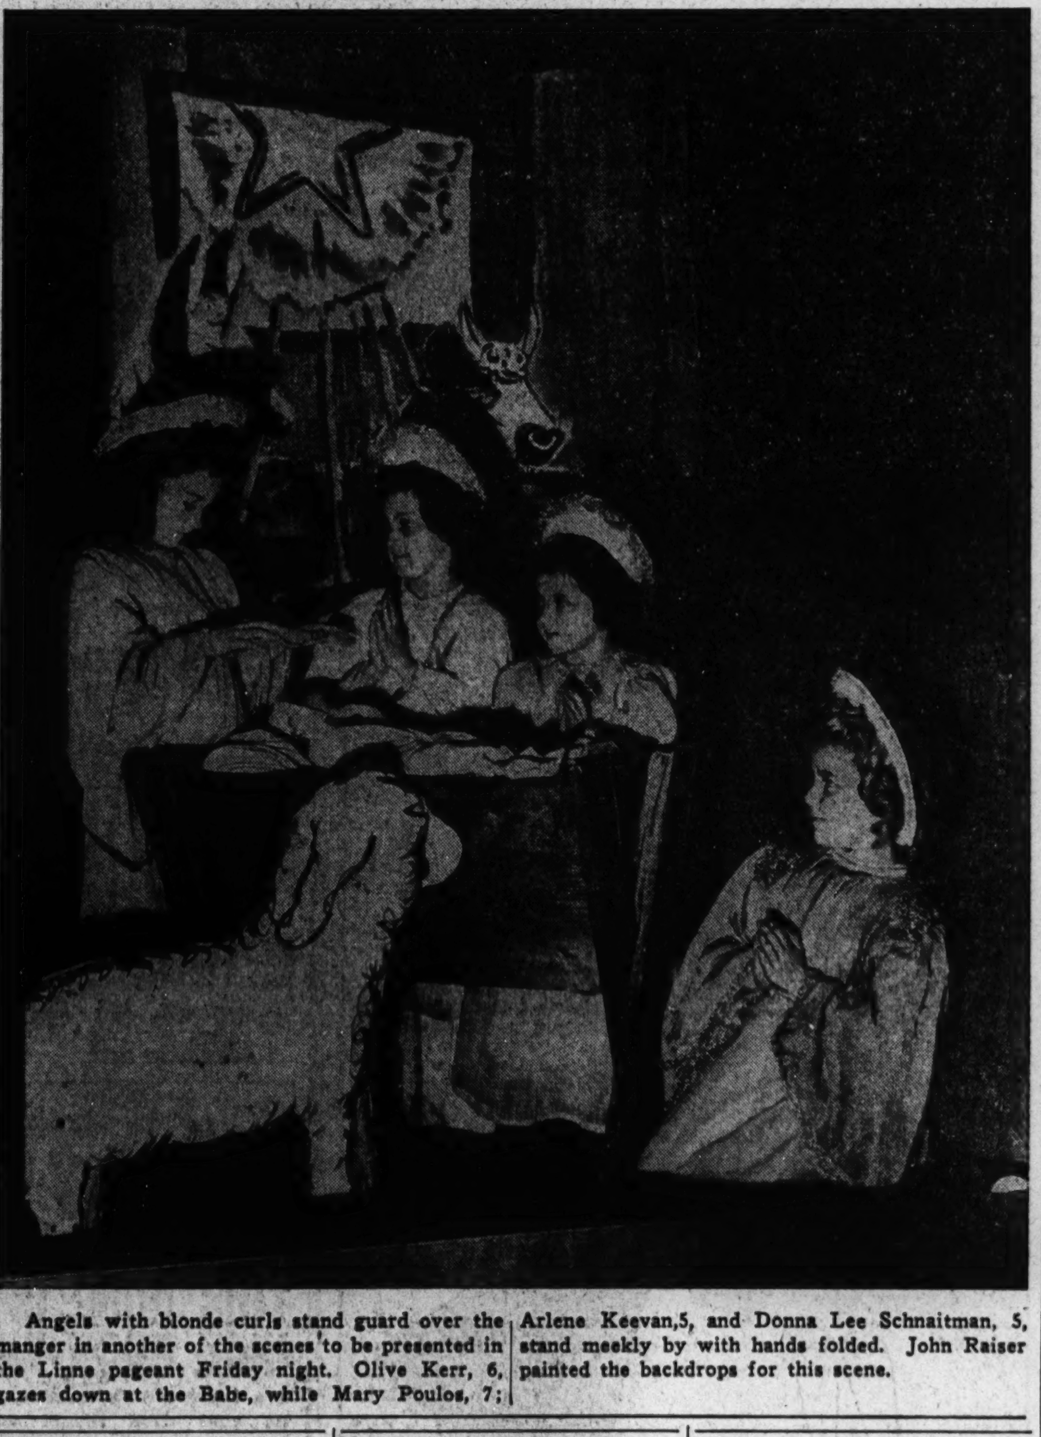
For weeks the paint shop at Linne has been humming with activity, as upper grade boys bend over the canvas which will become brilliant backdrops to the various scenes. Here Gus Poulos and William Eggert are at work on a donkey for one of the sets, while, left to right, painting a manger scene are Edward Bonk, Walter Kaste, Donald Neubauer, and Roger Sprigings.



Angels with blonde curls stand guard over the manger in another of the scenes to be presented in the Linne pageant Friday night. Olive Kerr, 6, gazes down at the Babe, while Mary Poulos, 7; Arlene Keevan, 5, and Donna Lee Schnaitman, 5, stand meekly by with hands folded. John Raiser painted the backdrops for this scene.

SOLDIER DREAMS OF CHRISTMAS IS PAGEANT THEME

Maine Pupils to Conjure Memories of Past.

"Christmas in My Dreams," a yuletide pageant depicting memories of other Christmases recalled by a group of service men as they spend the holiday at a U. S. O. center in England, will be presented this week by students of Maine Township High school. The pageant will be given in the school gymnasium at 7:30 p. m. on Thursday and Friday.

More than 300 students will take part in the production, which will be presented on three stages at three different levels. Theme song for the production will be "I'll Be Home for Christmas, If Only in My Dreams."

Written by Faculty.

The script for the pageant was written by a faculty committee consisting of Miss Grace Chapman, head of the English department; Miss Dorothy Dunn, Miss Elaine Highland, Miss Edna Johnson, and Miss Elaine Leeka. Thru a series of flashbacks, the various scenes will depict regional Christmas celebrations as they are remembered by the service men in the U. S. O. hut.

From a typical childhood Christmas with the whole family gathered about an old-fashioned Christmas tree, the setting changes to "Christmas on the Range," showing a jovial group of men around a glowing campfire. "Home on the Range," "The Old Corral," and similar songs reinforce the western motif.

Sing Southern Songs.

Against a background of orange blossoms, and to the rhythm of banjos and violins, "Christmas in the Southland" will be presented. The act will feature dancing parties doing the Virginia reel and the minuet. Students will sing southern melodies, including "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Church steeples veiled in falling snow will form the backdrop for "A Northern Christmas." After the ringing of the church bells, carolers will sing "Silent Night."

Faculty members in charge of arrangements for the play include Willadell Allen, general director; Grace Chapman, Dorothy Dunn, Elaine Leeka, Elaine Highland, and Edna Johnson, who will act as supervisors. Thy will be assisted by James Irving, Liddie Kukral, Pauline Yates, Robert Wells, Arthur Serfling, Elizabeth Williams, Virginia Snyder, Ruth Smith, Kathryn Williams, Edith Adams, Louise Wood, Mrs. Leila Baas, and Lois Furley.

Plan Special Lighting.

Kenneth Myer is chairman of the lighting committee; Marie Scheinpflug is in charge of costumes; Alexander Harley, music; Dale Roberts, staging; Margaret Lowery, decorations; Marian Ruch, dances; E. J. Braun, properties and equipment; Einar Anderson, publicity; C. J. Rogers, safety, and Franklin Kaiser, ushers.

NORTHWEST SIDE AERIAL GUNNERS WIN HERO RATING

Rescues Buddy with Bad Oxygen Line.

Northwest side men are distinguishing themselves for heroism and quick thinking on the world's far flung battle fronts, reports from combat areas attest. Typical of their achievements is the story of Sgt. Edward B. Wisowaty, waist gunner on a bombing plane, who recently was awarded the distinguished flying cross.

Sgt. Wisowaty.

Sgt. Wisowaty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Wisowaty of 2026 Moffat street, while on a high altitude bombing mission heard a call for help from the tail gunner on the plane. He removed his oxygen mask and went to the tail position, where he found the gunner almost unconscious from anoxia.

Replaces Disabled Buddy.

After carrying his helpless comrade to the radio room and reviving him, Sgt. Wisowaty donned an emergency mask and took over the operation of the tail guns.

Another recent winner of the distinguished flying cross was St. Joseph N. Tanney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Tanney of 3929 Palmer street. A top turret gunner in a Flying Fortress, he has official credit for bagging an enemy plane which he set afire during a raid over Nantes, France.

Wears Air Medal.

Sgt. Tanney, who holds the air medal with three oak leaf clusters in addition to his newly awarded distinguished flying cross, has taken part in more than a score of bombardment raids over Nazi held Europe.

Quick thinking and a piece of chewing gum saved the day for Sgt. George W. Linco, 2500 Moffat street, when his gun jammed during an air raid over enemy lines.

"On one of our missions, 60 enemy planes jumped us," said Sgt. Linco, a turret gunner on a Marauder. "I couldn't fire steadily because a bolt kept jumping out, jamming the gun. I got tired of stopping to pick it up, so I stuck it in place with a wad of chewing gum. It worked and we drove the ME-109s away, disabling quite a few of them in the process."

FIRST ENGLISH CHURCH HONORS PASTOR TODAY

Rev. E. H. Busekros at Charge 5 Years.

The congregation of the First English Evangelical and Reformed church will celebrate the fifth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Edward H. Busekros this morning in the church auditorium, 3062 Palmer square. The Rev. Alvin Munstermann, superintendent of the Evangelical Home for Children and Aged in Bensenville, will be the guest speaker. The Rev. Paul Repke, pastor of the Church of Peace in Kewanee, will preside and Raymond H. Giesecke, church president, will extend greetings.

John Stilley, U. S. N. R., choirmaster of First English church, will direct the choir. Decorations have been in charge of R. P. Boitz, and Mrs. Florence Andersen has been in charge of publicity. George Zahn is chairman of the general committee, assisted by Mr. Boitz and C. W. Bruser.

Gifts for Pastor and Wife.

This morning's service is the final in a series of three special events for the church. Last Wednesday evening the congregation honored the Rev. and Mrs. Busekros at a reception, at which the pastor was presented a clerical robe, and Mrs. Busekros a purse. Co-chairmen of the reception committee were Mrs. Millie Nielsen and Nels Olson, assisted by Charles Brietzke, Walter Degischer, John Obermaier, Frank Bell, Mrs. Herman Elich, Mrs. W. H. Bobsin, Mrs. George Otis, and Mrs. George Zahn.

Serving on the presentation committee were C. W. Bruser, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Bruser, Mrs. Herman Elich, Mrs. A. J. Ehlers, Mrs. George Zahn, Mrs. F. A. Kallsen, and Mrs. R. P. Boitz.

Fund for Returning Yanks.

Also climaxed at this morning's service will be the opening of the post-war reserve fund, with which church members now in service may be aided after the war in finding new health or new business opportunities. Lawrence Schulte heads this committee, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Eric Tellschow, Mr. and Mrs. Cal Lund, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Windmier, Mrs. Janet McMurray, and Miss Betty Rad.

The Rev. Mr. Busekros came to First English church after a pastorate of 10 years at St. John's church in Chicago Heights. He succeeded Dr. L. W. Goebel, now president of the Evangelical and Reformed church, who had served at First English for 26 years.

Last Sunday the Rev. Mr. Busekros received 38 new members, bringing to approximately 300 the number who have joined since his pastorate began. Altho most of First English's congregation reside some distance from the church, a change in the program has counteracted the effects of gas rationing on attendance.

In the last five years, the church has had redecoration and renovation. But the Rev. Mr. Busekros is proudest of the work his people are doing in their post-war reserve fund, preparing for the day when the 82 men from the congregation now in service come home. Contributions to the fund are being made in special series war bonds, signed over to the fund. "In this way," the Rev. Mr. Busekros points out, "our people are truly turning war bonds into peace bonds."

LINNE STUDENTS PASTE AND PAINT FOR YULE PARTY

Fathers to See Pageant First Time Friday.

Hammering, pasting, sewing, painting, and singing—for weeks the rooms of Linne school, 3221 North Sacramento avenue, have been buzzing with these activities as students prepare for their traditional Christmas pageant. For five years Linne mothers have been entertained at Christmas time by Linne boys and girls, but this year for the first time Linne fathers will come into their own, for the Christmas program will be presented at the regular Community night program of the Linne Parent-Teacher association Friday evening in the school auditorium.

Weeks ago the singing groups began practicing Christmas carols, and the speaking choir started to learn the Christmas story according to St. Luke. Miss Violet Mau's art classes, after singing and studying the words of the carols, submitted sketches of their conception of the meaning of these songs. The best of these were chosen to be reproduced as living pictures in the pageant.

Large Lighted Frame.

On the stage on Community night will be a large picture frame, which was constructed and electrically wired by Miss Vera Becker and her pupils of the ungraded class. Within this frame living pictures will be posed, under the direction of the student artists who produced the originals. These artists will be assisted by Miss Marie Egan and Miss Marion Hoyne, who are guiding activities of the costume committee.

At the right of the frame, in caps and capes of the school colors, yellow and blue, will be the junior choir, comprised of selected voices from the primary grades, directed by Miss Marie Pahl. At the opposite side there will be the speaking choir, under the direction of Miss Adeline Bendix. For the first time they will be wearing their scarlet choir robes, purchased and made by PTA members, with Mrs. Lillian Laase as president. Miss Mabel R. Loucks is school principal.

Glee Clubs and Choir.

From various parts of the auditorium will be heard the voices of the girls' glee club under the direction of Miss Dorothy McLaughlin and the boys' glee club and 8th grade a cappella choir, both directed by Miss Evelyn Farr.

The story will unfold in 14 scenes, with scores of Linne students taking part in the pictures, the choruses, and behind the scenes activities. The costumes may be made of cheesecloth, Christmas tree tinsel, tinfoil, and last year's canvas backdrops, but the enthusiasm and sincerity the Linne students put into their performance will give the pageant the true glamor of Christmas.

Chanukah Party

A Chanukah card party will be given by the Shain-Del Charity club at 7 o'clock next Sunday evening in the Cultural center, 3117 Logan boulevard.

U. OF CHICAGO GIVING DEGREES TO 255 FRIDAY

Fall Convocation Finds Many at War.

The autumn convocation of the University of Chicago, at which degrees will be conferred on 255 candidates, will be held at 3 p. m. Friday in Rockefeller Memorial chapel. It will be the 215th convocation at the university.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the university, will deliver the baccalaureate address at 11 a. m. today in Rockefeller chapel in the first ceremony of the convocation.

The exigencies of war time are reflected in the university announcement that of the 255 candidates, 44 will receive their degrees in absentia. Several of the graduates are in army camps and will receive their diplomas thru the mails.

Eleven Under 20 Years.

The graduating class includes 11 students under 20 years of age, who will receive diplomas under the Chicago plan, which provides for beginning college study at the end of the sophomore year in high school. These 11 young students have completed a four year college course at an age when most college students are beginning their junior year.

Seventy-seven students will receive bachelor degrees, 95 will receive master's degrees, and 26 will receive the degree of doctor of philosophy. The school of medicine, part of the division of biological science, will graduate 45 men and one woman. Of the men, 24 are in the army and 18 are in the navy.

Fifty per cent of the candidates for diplomas are women, a marked increase over the pre-war proportion of 40 per cent. The percentage rises among candidates for master's degrees, 72 per cent of whom are women. Eleven per cent of the women receiving degrees are married and are completing their college work.

Two Faculty Wives on List.

Two faculty wives are among the women receiving advanced degrees. Mrs. Herrlee G. Creel, 5434 Woodlawn avenue, whose husband is on leave from the university with the army, will receive the doctor of philosophy degree in absentia, and Mrs. Aaron J. Brumbaugh, 1360 East 58th street, wife of the dean of students, will receive a master's degree.

Dr. A. Eustace Haydon, professor of comparative religion, will give the convocation address on "Toward a New Synthesis in Culture." Emerly T. Filbey, vice president of the university, will confer the degrees. Harold A. Anderson, assistant professor of education, is in charge of the convocation.

LAKES SKIPPER QUITS SHIP FOR WINTER LAYOFF

Ore Boat Will Spend Icy Season at Dock.

BY IRENE PONTO.

The fleet's in! And the captains and crews depart for a yearly wintry season holiday, good until spring begins to thaw the frozen north.

Last week-end Capt. John Baptisté Routhier brought in the International, block long Great Lakes ore boat of the Wisconsin Steel company, to the 106th street docks on its last trip of an eight month season of steady voyages to the iron ore docks at Superior, Wis.

Right now the crew is going over the boat, washing and cleaning the hold and quarters. Under Chief Engineer James Young, whose domain is the deep well of the engine room, machinery is being oiled, repaired, painted. Because of the man power shortage, a stoker will be installed.

Hibernate at Dock.

Soon, when a heavy blanket of snow covers the International and its sister ship, the Harvester, the two boats will slumber snugly at dock thru sleet and blizzard until mid-April.

Next spring, fresh from a four month vacation, Capt. Routhier will begin his 20th year as a captain on the Great Lakes, and his former first mate, Capt. Mark F. Plaar, will come from Cleveland, O., to pilot the Harvester for his second year.

Shipmates for 14 years, often times the two officers met over cribbage, the fun-loving Plaar's quips causing the serious mien of his captain to break into smiles and hearty chuckles. Now their two boats, passing on the lake, signal with long and short blasts.

Up in Superior, Wis., iron ore from the Mesabi range of Minnesota is loaded into the holds. The round trip takes about seven days, said Capt. Routhier, altho fog, storm, and delay in loading and at the Sault Ste. Marie locks vary the time.

Wife Meets Boat.

From the locks, Capt. Routhier wires the company the approximate time of making port in Chicago, and the company informs Mrs. Routhier, 11320 Union avenue. Whether morning, afternoon, night, or wee small hours, she drives to meet the captain and bring him home.

"During prohibition," the black-eyed skipper's lady who collects hobnail glass declared, "new neighbors wondered if we weren't bootleggers."

At home the captain partakes of a gala homecooked meal, catches up on local news, tweaks 11 year old John's ear, makes a rare business trip to the loop, and then is off again, the boat having been unloaded meanwhile, to ship north with ballast in the tanks.

Aboard ship the captain is warmly comfortable in paneled quarters, carpeted, airy, furnished with a damask draperies at portholes, sofa, parlor items, and a stateroom, office, bath, and adjoining passenger stateroom with twin beds. Business furniture includes a Sperry gyro-compass and a coffee thermos bottle strapped to the captain's desk.

Tension in Storm.

In storm the captain, ascending a steep flight of stairs, is at the wheelsman's elbow in a jiffy. All the comforts, plus superb meals in the stern dining rooms, fade. Tension fills the air, as high and thick as waves which have hurled themselves over the pilot house. Behind the captain and wheel lie the responsibility for a 2 million dollar boat, valuable war cargo, and 37 men.

As the fog horn bleats endlessly into an absorbing pillow of snow, the ship struggles thru embattled waters, its pilots relying greatly on a detection finder. For as much as 36 or 48 hours on end Capt. Routhier and assistants have kept their posts.

The "graveyard of the lakes" is off the Caribou Islands in Lake Superior, said the skipper, who has sailed the five Great Lakes with cargoes of rock, stone, gravel, sand, coal, and ore. Treacherous weather and currents up there make the captain shake his head gravely.

14 Trips in Fog.

"Last spring," he said, "we were slowed up with 14 straight trips thru fog on Michigan and Superior.

Of an old French-Canadian family, Capt. Routhier will visit his father, 88 years old, at St. Ignace, Mich., during the holidays. Once French speaking himself, the captain has lost his fine hand with the language, he admits.

BROTHER, SISTER FIND MATES IN ARMY HOSPITALS

Members of Argo Family Reveal Romances.

Handsome patient marries pretty nurse—that is the theme of two marriages in the Vincent Samatowic family of 6204 75th avenue, Argo.

Mrs. Samatowic recently returned from the wedding of her daughter, Martha, in Coral Gables, Fla., to be home for a visit of her son, Corp. Joseph of Camp Adair, Ore., who soon afterward married Nancy Pierce of Billings, Mont.

Both are army hospital romances. Lt. Martha Samatowic, a graduate of St. Joseph's hospital school of nursing, Chicago, is with the army nurses' corps at the army regional hospital, Coral Gables. One of her patients was a handsome air forces pilot, Lt. Arthur B. Cleaveland of Springfield, O., who was wounded in the North African theater of war.

Lt. Martha nursed her patient back to health, finding love on the way. The couple were married in St. Patrick's church, Miami Beach, Fla. Lt. Cleaveland is at West Palm Beach awaiting orders. He wears the wings of both the army air forces and the Royal Canadian air forces which he joined before this country entered war. He is the veteran of numerous flying missions.

Corp. Joseph was wounded while in this country. During nine months as an invalid in a northwest army hospital he met and fell in love with a pretty army nurse, Lt. Nancy Pierce. Following his recent marriage he returned to the hospital for approximately six months, and then may expect complete recovery, physicians informed him.

Martha and Joseph and a brother, Bernard, are all graduates of Argo High school. Mary Anne, a sister, is an Argo High school sophomore. Bernard, 17½ years old, is in the army specialized engineering program at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

The father of the family is a war plant worker and Mrs. Samatowic is a Red Cross worker. In September she received her pin for 144 hours of sewing and knitting with the unit which meets in St. Blaze Catholic church, Argo.

TECH BECOMES LARGEST SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING

The nation's largest engineering school, the Illinois Institute of Technology, completes two years operation in war time with the mightiest program in its history and a record of having become the busiest as well as the biggest engineering college in the country.

As a result, the lights go on early in buildings on the Tech campuses and in classrooms, before ordinary folks are stirring from their homes, and flicker late into the night as Tech turns to the task of instructing trained war plant personnel and engineers.

Shortage of Engineers.

Altho the war has brought an influx of army and navy students and thousands of special students in courses set up to meet war time demands of industry, Tech has had a prominent place in the war program from the very beginning, for its main product has always been engineers, and the war man power commission has termed the lack of engineers as one of the nation's worst man power shortages.

An accelerated program put into effect this year now finds the school on a round-the-year calendar of three 16 week terms, with all holidays eliminated except Christmas, when students receive a one day vacation from class work. Classes begin at 7:30 a. m. and continue to 5:20 p. m., not including special courses, and engineers are trained in two and a half years under the streamlined setup. Four years of school was necessary under the prewar schedule.

Because Illinois Tech is primarily an engineering college, the demands of war are always near at hand. Frills in college life have been discarded; graduation ceremonies cut to the minimum as senior classes increase in number, and, if four weeks of the year were not the absolute smallest amount of time needed for registration and administrative work, college officials say those weeks would be utilized for classes.

Add Russian Language.

The college curriculum has undergone little change. A course in the Russian language has been added, and American history is a requirement for graduation. Because instruction in physics is first on the list of both army and navy, these classes have the biggest enrollment in their history.

Any one of 41 separate places in Chicago where Illinois Tech conducts classes could be called a part of the campus. These include 27 war plants, where Tech is pioneering at "in-plant" training classes to develop foremen, supervisors, safety directors, and other trained employes needed by industry.

The south and west side campuses, the John Marshall law school classrooms, George Williams college, where 300 navy men attend classes on a subcontract basis, the safety training center in the Civic Opera building, the explosives safety school at 333 North Michigan avenue, and the department of architecture, which meets at the Art institute, are among the places where training is given.

End Signal Corps School.

In the school set up for the army signal corps, 4,316 men were trained in basic pre-radar work, advanced electronics, ultra-high frequency technics, and code and radio procedure, by last August, when the training program closed because the signal corps had enough men trained. The ordnance inspection training program also ended this year after 1,446 persons, 556 of them women, had been trained as ordnance inspectors.

The engineering, science, management, and war training program at Illinois Tech is the largest in the country. Since Pearl Harbor day two years ago 34,256 persons have enrolled in war training courses, and the current courses have an enrollment of 4,665. Thousands of women have graduated from the courses into jobs in industry. This program included instruction in food dehydration.

Party Will Aid Leper Colony

Mrs. W. P. O'Grady. [De Haven Photo.]

The Dutton league, a nonsectarian organization which supplies funds for the personal needs of lepers, is sponsoring a card party Saturday in the C parlor of the Morrison hotel.

In stressing the necessity of raising funds this year, Mrs. W. P. O'Grady, 1319 Hood avenue, explained that the number of patients in the colony at Carville, La., which the league services, has increased recently as numerous new cases have been discovered thru draft board examinations.

Officers of the league in addition to Mrs. O'Grady include: Mrs. J. W. Kohler, 6456 North Fairfield avenue; Mrs. I. J. Chevlin, 1425 Winnemac avenue, and Miss Mae Crowley, 4000 Washington boulevard; Mrs. Henry C. Binder, 4859 North Rockwell street; Mrs. James Roche, 4536 Hermitage avenue; Mrs. J. P. Van Duzer, 2720 Dayton street; Mrs. Catherine Loy, 7258 South Racine avenue, and Mrs. H. A. Jacobs, 1529 East 76th street, vice presidents; Mrs. J. J. Steinbach, recording secretary; Mrs. William F. Mortell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. D. Lindquist, 7032 Merrill avenue; Mrs. F. L. Kaye, 512 Fifth street, Wilmette; Mrs. E. G. de Launty, 1732 North Park avenue, and Mrs. Katherine Wilkinson, 1464 Pensacola avenue.

OPEN FIREPLACE IS GOOD FRIEND FOR HOLIDAYS

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Is your fireplace ready for the holidays?

The fireplace is one of our oldest friends when it comes to giving us extra heat. There are several things to do for a fireplace that seems dingy or sooty, dulled or soiled.

If your bricks are clean, but they seem dullish and you would like to give them a richer and slightly darker color, you can do this by giving them a good coat—a soaking coat—of raw linseed oil.

Good Points Available.

If you want to change their color you can paint them a light shade to match the woodwork, using a good grade of cement paint, or a casein paint. If you want to have a smart, modern black fireplace, you can use a paint especially manufactured and recommended for this work. Or you can make them black by use of nigrosine dye, also available at stores that carry paints.

If all your brickwork needs is a good scrubbing, you can use a stiff brush and some mechanic's soap that contains sand. Then rinse the bricks well with clear water after you have scrubbed them. You can use steel wool instead of a brush if you still have any on hand.

Where a fireplace face or hearth has stains that ordinary strong soaps or powders plus elbow grease won't remove, there's always the carborundum block to fall back on. Hardware dealers carry these and using one on the brickwork will give you, in time, a clean, smooth surface.

Study Damper Use.

A good damper, and knowledge of how to control it, is one way to assure a good grate fire. You will want plenty of draft at first, to start it and take off the first smoke. Then, when wood and kindling has started to burn briskly you can experiment and close damper enough to keep too much heat from going up the chimney, and yet not enough to cause any smoke.

And of course it is an old rule, but more necessary to be remembered this year than ever before, to keep the dampers closed when there's no fire.

Three New Cafe Revues to Make Bows Friday Night

Miss De Marco and Joe Lewis Among Stars

By Will Davidson.

Comes again one of those nights when you feel that the Dionne Quints are missing their calling if they don't become cafe reviewers. The night in question is Friday, and all the boys and girls of the sally forth estate have to do is cover Renee De Marco's return engagement in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel, Joe E. Lewis' ditto at the Chez Paree, and the new show in the Marine dining room of the Edgewater Beach hotel. Radar might help.

Nick Brodeur. [Seymour Photo.]

Joe E. heads a new holiday revue that will feature singing Rose Marie [whom I presume is the one who not too long ago used to be Baby Rose Marie, the child prodigy], the dancing Barrys [Joey Jacobson hopes they are], Jane Slater, tap dancer, the Adorables, and Lou Breese's music.

Renee De Marco's troupe includes three singing and dancing lads, one of them husband Jody Hutchinson. Neil Bondshu will provide the music for this extremely beautiful act. Dorothy Dorben's new cast includes Maurice and Maryea, a smart dance team that has been a favorite around town for several years, and the six Willys, a flashy juggling group.

That's Friday's stint. Tomorrow night a rather spectacular pianosolovox star opens in the Bismarck Inn—Wilson John Fisher. Jumping over to next week we find Colosimo's offering Benny Meroff's "Funzafire" show, a fast moving unit revue, on Christmas eve; Lawrence Welk's 12th engagement at the Trianon ballroom starting Christmas night, and Eddy Howard's return to the Aragon Dec. 26. New Year's eve will find two great Negro bands in top spots—Duke Ellington in the Stevens hotel's Boulevard room, and Cab Calloway in the Panther room.

AT BLACKHAWK

The attractive young woman with Del Courtney is Mary Jane Dodd, a Chicagoan who now is singing with Del's band in the Blackhawk restaurant.

Right now the Panther room has one of the most likable kids in the band business, Johnny Long. Johnny has a strong band, with a collegiate air about it that is refreshing and entertaining. Brass and rhythm, of course, are solid and well ordered sections in this orchestra. But Johnny maintains a youthfulness in his instrumentation that is difficult to describe but very pleasant to hear. In fact, the whole band is best epitomized by its theme song, "White Star of Sigma Nu." All the best elements of campus music are here, plus a maturity that gives it a rightful place among the best in the swing field.

Johnny has some excellent vocal support. Pretty little Patti Dugan is a versatile singer with a cute and intriguing voice. Young Gene Williams is the balladeer, and a smart one, and Dave Lambert goes all the way with such hot numbers as "Riffin' Is Free for All."

There have been other recent openings, too. Nick Brodeur brought his new band into the Camellia house of the Drake hotel, and he looks like a winner there. Nick got his first big Chicago break as a boggie-woogie pianist with Eddy Duchin, but he's a sassiety rythmer now. The bands' beat is good, and versatile. I don't know how any one can find pleasure in dancing to his fast tempos, but they seem to in large numbers. The slower rhythms—rhumbas and such—are swell. Nick has a lively, friendly personality that Camellians approve, and his songs are nicely done.

Jack Fulton is the show here. A veteran of Paul Whiteman days, handsome Jack has an excellent lyric tenor voice which he wraps up in an engaging personality and delivers thru the medium of the better ballads.

The Blackhawk has improved its show considerably by offering the dancing Hartnells and the Kurtis marionettes. The Hartnells are a hard working team—sometimes too hard working for this small floor. By that I mean that what on a stage or a large floor might seem an amazingly dynamic and energetic talent, sometimes in the intimacy of the Blackhawk takes on a slightly laborious tinge. But the kids do a good job, and they certainly earn their applause. The Kurtis dolls are competent without being spectacularly amusing.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Griff Williams finally has done it—copped that long worked for all-time record for endurance. Last Thursday he began his 39th consecutive week in the Empire room of the Palmer House, and according to the record books nobody ever did that before. Only Veloz and Yolanda had ever finished the 38th week. When he leaves on Jan. 13, Griff will have played a total of 90 weeks in the Empire room since he made his debut there in September of 1941. Whether Griff will be back in the room after Hildegarde leaves in March is up to the army and navy. . . . Earle Smith, once of the Pliner and Earle piano duo, is the star of the Bamboo room of the Country Club hotel. . . . John Schlotterbeck has left the Seneca for the west coast. . . . Charlie Wright opens this week in the Versailles, Miami Beach. . . . Bob Walters is teaching rumba steps to Saturday matineers in the Pan-American cafe of the Hotel La Salle. . . . A Christmas card, the first one, from Romo Vincent the funny fat man who's all fool and a yard wide. . . . Don't miss the singing of Pat Willis and the piano playing [especially "Honeysuckle Rose"] of Jimmy Blade in the Blackstone's Balinese room. . . . I hear that Paul and Grace Hartman will compete with Hildegarde here in January, coming into the Mayfair room of the Blackstone. . . . The reason Henry Kaiser is hard to see these noons is that he's usually out to launch,

CLASSICAL RECORDINGS

Record buying in 1943 has been governed not so much by what you want to buy as what you can get, just as record releases have been increasingly dominated by prize albums drawn from the archives in the absence of something new. The best seller of the moment, which would soar to spectacular figures if the record shops could fill the orders, is Beethoven's "Archduke" Trio, played by Jascha Heifetz, Artur Rubinstein and the late Emanuel Feuermann. This is a recent Victor release and it shares the year's honors with a Beethoven triumph scored almost a year ago when the "Emperor" concerto followed the Fourth Concerto as a second triumph for Artur Schnabel, the Chicago Symphony orchestra and the late Frederick Stock.

Beethoven.

Other desirable albums, some new and some given a second blooming, follow:

Mahler: "The Song of the Earth," sung by Kerstin Thorborg and Charles Kullman with the Vienna Philharmonic orchestra under the direction of Bruno Walter [Columbia].

Delius: Volume 1. of the three album set recorded by the London Philharmonic orchestra under the direction of Sir Thomas Beecham [Columbia].

Schumann: Quintet in E flat major, played by the Busch quartet with Rudolph Serkin, pianist [Columbia].

Bach: Two albums of Brandenburg Concertos, played by the Busch Chamber Players, with Adolph Busch, violinist, and Rudolph Serkin, pianist [Columbia].

Caruso Memorial Album: Collection of operatic records by the famous tenor with other celebrated singers, including Sembrich, Tetrazzini, Farrar, Homer, Alda, Hempel, Scotti, Amato, Journet, De Segurola, and Rothier [Victor].

Prokofieff: Concerto for Violin, D major, played by Joseph Szigeti with the London Philharmonic orchestra under the direction of Sir Thomas Beecham [Columbia].

Debussy: Sonata for Violin and Piano, played by Mischa Elman and Leopola Mittman [Victor].

Ravel: Alborado del Gracioso, played by the Cleveland orchestra under the direction of Artur Rodzinski [Columbia].

D'Indy: Symphony No. 2, B flat major, played by the San Francisco orchestra under the direction of Pierre Monteux [Victor].

Sibelius: Symphony No. 7, a choice of the brilliant recording by Vladimir Golschmann and the St. Louis Symphony [Victor] or the more subtle performance by the New York Philharmonic under the direction of Sir Thomas Beecham [Columbia].

Drama Notes

Curious indeed are the ways of booking. For instance: John Golden tried vainly for weeks to find a Chicago theater for "3 Is a Family," which opens at the Civic theater Christmas night, displacing "Janie" as of next Saturday night. Now comes a note from the Golden office crediting Mayor Kelly and William F. Carey, commissioner of sanitation in New York, with the move. It seems that Mr. Golden asked Mr. Carey, who was making a business trip to Chicago, to ask the mayor to help him find a house. So the mayor and the commissioner brought the matter to the attention of James C. Thompson, who manages the 20 Wacker Drive building, and Brock Pemberton was persuaded to take "Janie" on the road.

Starting with the new year, "Kiss and Tell" will change its performance schedule at the Harris, dropping the midweek matinée on Wednesday in favor of Sunday afternoon. The last Wednesday matinée will be played Dec. 29, and the first of the Sunday afternoon shows on Jan. 2.

• • •

"Out of This World" will end its Forester theater engagement, now limited to week-end performances, next Sunday night. The theater will reopen Jan. 19 with a revival of Sidney Howard's prize winning play, "They Knew What They Wanted," with Joseph Mell in the rôle created by Richard Bennett. Cas[illegible] auditions will be held Tuesday [illegible]ning, starting at 7:30.

Several principals in the cast of "Oklahoma!" will spend tomorrow at the Great Lakes Naval hospital to entertain sick and wounded service men. Among those making the trip are Evelyn Wyckoff, Pamela Britton, David Burns, Lou Polan, Jack Kilty, Walter Donahue, Mary Marlo, Katharine Barrett, and Dave Mallon. In addition to songs from the Erlanger musical, there will be dances by Mr. Donahue and Mr. Mallon's impersonation of George M. Cohan.

• • •

Howard Lang, co-producer of "Good Night Ladies," is preparing two new plays for the west coast, birthplace of the Blackstone theater farce. The first is "Crescendo," scheduled for San Francisco opening in January, while the second, as yet without a name, will follow a month later.

Trailing a comet tail of 682 Broadway performances, "Blithe Spirit" heads for the Studebaker the night of Dec. 26, with Clifton Webb, Peggy Wood, Mildred Natwick, and Haila Stoddard in the leading rôles, with Philip Tonge, Valerie Cossart, and Doreen Lang in support. Miss Cossart was in our original company, which played the Selwyn in February, 1942. Noel Coward's protoplasmic farce ran for two years in London, and was the 1942 winner of the New York critics' prize for the best imported play.

• • •

"Dark Eyes" closed its tour in Detroit last night, and Tamara Geva hurries to New York to join her husband, John Emery, in rehearsals of "Peep Show." David Burton will direct the Ernst Pascal play, which hopes to reach a New York theater by the middle of January, after Baltimore tryout.

Paul Robeson's "Othello," which opened in New York Oct. 19, set what was believed to be a new American mark last Wednesday when it passed the previous record for the play's run, held by Walter Hampden since 1925.

• • •

"The Army Play By Play," the soldier show recently at the Studebaker, will end its tour in Boston Saturday night.

Several cast changes have been made in "Unexpected Honeymoon," at the Great Northern. Dick Shankland is now playing the leading male rôle, replacing Frank Lyon, while Tom Post is new as the hotel detective and Fred Sullivan as the Texas father with the gun.

• • •

Owen Davis is working on a new version of George Batson's "Ramshackle Inn," now trying out in Philadelphia. The four character play doubtless got a hopeful lift from the success of John Van Druten's "The Voice of the Turtle," which employs Margaret Sullavan, Elliott Nugent, and Audrey Christie without even a butler in support.

"Radio Rescue," a play by Charlotte Chorpenning, is the second of the Goodman's plays for children, scheduled to open Saturday afternoon at 2:30, with another performance listed for Wednesday, Dec. 29. Additional performances will be given in January. Paul Claudel's "The Tidings Brought to Mary," now playing at the Goodman, will close next Sunday night. The production omits Monday and Tuesday evening performances, but will give a matinée on Thursday.

• • •

When Eva Le Gallienne and Joseph Schildkraut revive "The Cherry Orchard," the supporting cast will hold Carl Benton Reid, Lois Hall, Stefan Schnabel and Katherine Emery. Settings and costumes are by Motley.

Music Club Federation Issues Book on U. S. Music

To assist in building club musical programs, the National Federation of Music Clubs has issued "Know Your American Music," a volume compiled by Martha Galt, chairman of the federation's department of American music. Miss Galt lists approximately 1,800 compositions by more than 800 American composers, but makes no attempt at complete cataloguing. The 15 chapters of the work cover such fields as patriotic and historical music, folk songs of all varieties, American operas, compositions of women and Negro composers, noms de plume and other helpful subjects.

"In a BLAZE of GLORY"

You drove the car and waited for Fressl while he robbed the store and killed the proprietor."

This bludgeon of an accusation beat the fight out of Julie. Here was a living man repeating the horrible charge that Art Fressl had put in the letter. Julie sank into a chair and an ague of terror shook her till her teeth chattered. Ives watched her with a little pity, but with a much needed confirmation of his belief in her guilt. He had to believe her guilty to make a good case of it. He waited for her to confess. At last she said:

"Mr. Ives. I hate to accuse a dead man of a lie, but if Art Fressl told you that, he lied. I was lonely and neglected and he asked me to go to a night club with him. I had never been to one, so I went. It was my first sight of a crowd of drunken and disorderly men and women. He said he had left his wallet somewhere, but he knew a man who owed him money and he could get it back. He told me to wait for him.

"He was gone a long while, and I was frightened by the attentions of several drunken men. At last he came back. He began to drink. He danced with me and danced the way other couples were dancing. I hated him and was afraid of him. I told him I had to mend my make-up. I left him and was about to walk home, for I had no money. My father never let me have any. There was a taxi driver that I'd gone to school with. He took me home, and he told me about passing a drug store where the poor old proprietor had been killed by a robber. I had gone to school with his daughter. He was a sweet old man. Imagine my helping to rob and kill him! I never dreamed of connecting Art Fressl with the horrible crime until—until—"

Falling under the spell of her candor, Ives was afraid he was going to believe her, but when she faltered he recovered his poise.

"Until what?" he demanded, and surprised her into a confession.

"Until I got a letter from Art Fressl accusing me of driving the car and waiting for him while he killed poor Mr. Crawford."

"Where is that letter?"

"It frightened me so that I was fool enough to tear it up and throw it away. I wish I had it back."

Whipping the photostat of the letter from his pocket, Ives thrust it under her eyes.

If her dead father had stood suddenly before her, she could not have been thrown into a greater fright than she was by this sudden apparition of the letter she had destroyed and flung into the winds of the desert.

She gave it a look and slumping forward, rolled out of her chair and lay on the floor in a heap.

This struck Ives as a bit too old a trick for a modern girl to play. Pocketing the letter, he nudged her elbow with his toe and said:

"None of that gay nineties stuff, sister. Girls haven't fainted since Nero was a pup. The revival doesn't go with me. Get up."

He had no answer. He knelt by her and saw that she had really fainted. He did not begin to chafe her hands or run for water to sprinkle or dash on her. He simply caught up her feet and put her heels in the chair where she had sat.

And so by a brutal realism he ended the flight of her soul from her body—and a pretty little body it was. Her legs were very nice, very shapely little legs. Too bad they were wasted on a crook. The legs ought to have been crooked, too.

The blood rushing back into Julie's head swept her soul along with it and she returned to a world of unendurable terror and persecution. She stared at her feet, brought them back to the floor, rose on elbows and knees, and by a complex series of adjustments got herself back into her chair. She stared at Ives in adject submission and asked feebly:

"Where did you get that letter?"

"That would be telling," he answered, knowing the commercial value of a mystery. "The point is, I have it. I really ought to turn it over to the district attorney back there and have you tried. But justice hasn't been any too just to me, and I'm willing to return the letter to you."

This was unbelieveably good news. She cried:

"That's wonderful of you. How can I ever thank you?"

"The best form of thanks is dollars."

Her heart sank. "Dollars? How many?"

"Well, I'm like a lawyer or a doctor. I set my fee according to the ability of my client or my patient to pay, and the importance of the case. This letter is about the most important thing on earth to you. If I gave it to the district attorney or to the papers, it would put an end to your beautiful career in this man's town or any other. Your money would be only a useless burden. So let's say that you can have the original letter and all the photographed copies of it for—for a mere half of one of your millions."

"Half a million dollars?" Julie gasped. "You're asking me to give you five hundred thousand dollars for a letter?"

She was so overwrought that she proceeded to take refuge in a grand display of those old fashioned feminine fireworks called hysterics.

"Half a million—he asks! All he asks me to give him is a measly ha—ha—half mill—mill—million dollaralas. Me! Half a half a—oh, oh, oh!"

Ives wanted to wring her neck. Having fainted she was now reviving hysterics.

He had known a good deal about a good many women — too much about too many—and he had learned that the way to deal with an hysterical woman is to let her alone. He had been advised, and had found it good advice, never to attempt to quiet hysterical women with kind words. That was like throwing water on a magnesium bomb. The thing was to let the attack burn itself out.

He decided to try it. Besides, he did not want to be found there if Julie's shrieks should bring to the scence people from the other apartments, or a house detective. His business was of the sort that would not bear publicity. Publicity was a threat to hold over Julie; but once released it would ruin him as well as her.

He stepped out into the hall. The door closed with a snap of the spring lock. Perhaps he had made a mistake in leaving so soon. He tried to get back in. He knocked. He rang the bell. Her wild laughter was his only answer.

He went to the elevator, decided not to take it on that floor; hurried down three flights of stairs and rang the bell there. If he had waited a moment longer above, he would have met Donna Avery coming from the elevator on a visit to Julie.

Out on the street he walked rapidly away, cursing himself and Julie. She had told him many things that did not fit his picture of her. Other things did. But he had to believe her a criminal, or his whole scheme was gone; he would have to face Earl Toley with empty hands. Repaying the five hundred dollars was out of the question. He had spent part of it and the rest would be needed to carry him far from the reach of Toley's long arms and Knuckles' cruel fists. His situation would take a bit of thinking. He went to a restaurant—needless to say, not Toley's—and ordered himself a cocktail, a thick soup, a thick steak, a bottle of good wine. They gave him no ideas, but they did give him a sense of well filled lethargy.

He had lost the first battle. But he decided that he had been a fool to be fooled by a clever little woman. He still had the letter. But it was from a dead man. Julie still had the money.

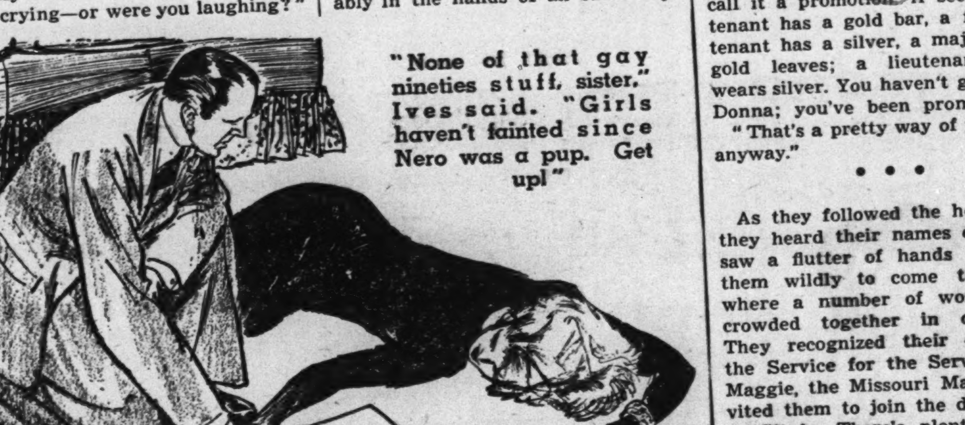
It was Donna Avery's custom to go to Julie's apartment without the formality of sending up her name. Today she had news that she thought Julie would want to hear. She reached the door just as Julie's hysterics were subsiding into vague noises that might be either sobs or laughter.

Julie was in a state of helpless wonderment at herself and at finding herself alone. She had never let herself go completely before. She had never exploded like that. The relief of tension was heavenly—like waking from a nightmare and finding it gone with her sleep and herself safe at home again. For one thing it had driven her tormentor away. That was good.

Or was it? He still had that letter. He wanted an impossible price for it. She had not the faintest idea where he lived, or how to find him again. What if he sold the letter to somebody else? To Eric Devoe or to Snoopy Brent?

The nightmare began to come back. She felt horribly afraid and alone. She needed the help of a strong man, somebody to advise her how to fight with a man, to fight for her and protect her. There was a tapping on the floor. It was probably Ives coming back. She must see him, and get the letter at any price. She ran to the door, swung it open, disclosed Donna Avery, smiling, worried:

"My dear, what goes on? I heard you crying—or were you laughing?"



"None of that gay nineties stuff, sister," Ives said. "Girls haven't fainted since Nero was a pup. Get up!"

"Both," she lied. It would never do to let Donna in on her secret. Donna was a darling, but a newspaper for news, a radiant radio for broadcasting things. Julie explained: "I suddenly remembered something so funny that it made me laugh till I cried."

"What was it? Tell me."

"It's too long a story. It might not strike you as funny at all."

Donna did not insist. She had a story of her own to tell.

"Do your remember a man named Cole Kavanaugh?" Julie's face lighted up. Donna went on. "I met him on the street. He spoke of you. His face was glum. Said he'd seen and heard Snoopy Brent's statement that you were going to marry Eric Devoe. 'Sickening,' he said. But I said 'Nonsense! Julie's done everything she could to get it denied.' His face lighted up, just as yours did when I mentioned his name to you. Too bad he's going away to the war. He'd be such a nice man for you. Being a lawyer, he could help manage your millions for you."

Julie was pretty sick of those millions. They had brought her friendships that she could not afford to keep up, a love that she could not accept, and all the cruelty of Art Fressl's claim, which he never would have made if she had remained a poor girl in Clinton.

Cole Kavanaugh was a lawyer and might save her if he were not a soldier. If she made him her lawyer and told him everything she might lose him as a lover. But whatever happened she must see him. There would be so few chances to look into his eyes and hear his voice. The war—the war was carrying him away. She must not miss any precious moment of communion with him. She would tell him nothing; let him go away believing in her. The important thing was to be with him, so she said to Donna:

"I've got to see him. Where can I find him?—accidentally."

"He said he was lunching at the Beverly Brown Derby with his chief. We might drop in accidentally."

A woman can be ready as soon as a man when she has to; and Julie delayed only to dash cold water on her eyes and take away the stains of her tears. Her dress was a bit rumpled from her swoon, but she smoothed it in the taxicab, where she repaired her makeup.

It was well that she did not delay, for Sgt. Kavanaugh and his chief were just leaving the restaurant. It was not customary, even in the army of the democracy for a lieutenant-colonel to dine publicly with a sergeant. A judge advocate was the only one who would dare risk it. Cole and his chief were like law partners. Cole's father was an eminent and venerated jurist and Cole as brilliant a lawyer as his chief, and his chief knew it.

It was wonderful to Julie to see Kavanaugh's eyes flood with welcome as he caught sight of her. He had seized both her hands in his before he realized how he was betraying his delight at the sight of her. He dropped her guiltily, nodded to Donna, then presented the portly Lt. Col. Martin Fenton. The silver leaves on his shoulders matched his silver hair. He had for a man that same frost-preserved youth that made Donna Avery noteworthy.

Col. Fenton gave "Miss Patten" a pleasant smile, but at sight of "Miss Avery" he cried:

"Not Donna Avery! At last! You were the first—the only screen star I ever wrote a fan letter to. I raved over you and begged for your autographed photograph."

"Did you get it?" Donna asked, all in a girlish flutter.

"Yes, but your autograph was put on with a rubber stamp, probably in the hands of an office boy. I suppose there were so many requests."

"There were a good many then," she sighed. There was an elegy in her emphasis on the "then." He stressed the same word in his reply.

"You're more beautiful now than then."

"Why, Colonel Fenton!" she whimpered.

Noting that his chief was completely oblivious to his existence, Sgt. Kavanaugh drew Julie aside to say hurriedly:

"I can't tell you how glad I am to learn that there's no truth in Snoopy Brent's broadcast about the Patten millions marrying the Devoe millions. Since he was my client and wanted to marry you, I couldn't very well warn you that there aren't any Devoe millions."

"I'm sorry—for his sake," she said. "He spends his money so gracefully. But there aren't any Patten millions either."

She gasped. One of her secrets had popped out without warning. In wide eyed fright she stared at Cole, and waited for his outburst of indignation at her fraud. He gasped:

"No Patten millions! You haven't spent them already?"

"There never were any," she confessed dismally.

"Not even one measly million?"

"Not one."

Then he astounded her by expressing neither wrath at her deception nor sorrow for her poverty.

"God, but I'm glad to hear that!" he said.

She was stupefied, but since that was what he seemed to like, she let him have more of the appetizing facts.

"Do you remember my telling you at the ranch about my wanting to have a Vixi? Well, I had a little money then—not much—I wanted to spend it in one grand splurge. It's almost gone. And I haven't had my splurge yet."

This confession, made so meekly, exerted the strangest effect on Cole. He seized her hand and stared at her and called her "Darling!" It was Eric's word, but at least half of the meaning of a word depends on who says it.

"Darling," he pleaded, "will you dine with my father and mother tonight? The Colonel will be there, but I want you to meet my people. I want them to meet you. Damn it, here he comes. Quick, say yes! I'll call for you at 7."

She nodded and the Colonel drew close with Donna Avery just long enough to say good-by. Then he and the sergeant marched to the car waiting for them and were driven away. The sergeant took pains to move to the left of his senior officer, but he was so happy that he was on the right of the world.

Both Julie and Donna were in such a dream world that they went like sleep walkers into the restaurant. Donna checked Julie to murmur, like a young girl confessing her first beau:

"Col. Fenton asked me to dine with him."

Julie hated to spoil that smile; still she had to say:

"But he's dining with Cole's father and mother."

The smile grew more beatific.

"So he told me; but he's going to telephone them later and say that important military matters have arisen that deny him the pleasure."

"You're the important military matters?" Julie said. Donna nodded, and sighed. "It's sweet when the hair is white to find some one who remembers when the silver was gold."

Julie smothered her with the kind of praise that youth can afford to lavish on age: "I notice that when soldiers go from gold to silver they call it a promotion. A second lieutenant has a gold bar, a first lieutenant has a silver, a major wears gold leaves; a lieutenant-colonel wears silver. You haven't grown old, Donna; you've been promoted."

"That's a pretty way of putting it anyway."

As they followed the headwaiter, they heard their names called and saw a flutter of hands beckoning them wildly to come to a table where a number of women were crowded together in conference. They recognized their cronies of the Service for the Services Shop, Maggie, the Missouri Marchesa, invited them to join the debate.

"Sit in. There's plenty of room for two. Lilith Yule has just taken her fat posterior away."

"If her heart were as big and soft as the rest of her," Agatha Gilbert sniffed, "she'd be grand; but it's all gristle."

As Donna and Julie squeezed in, Maggi di Muri explained:

"Do you remember, Julie, the night we all went deep into the Mojave desert to that anti-aircraft training camp marooned out there and gave them a show?"

Julie nodded. She would never forget the long necked cannon among the Joshua trees, the big ears of the sound detectors among the big eared cactus plants, the sky filled with stars like glowing shrapnel standing fast in place; the lonely soldiers on the glowing sand dunes; the wild delight in the presence of the comedians, the singers, the famous stars in their sketches.

The Marchesa went on:

"Well, they've completed their training. They're coming into town for a day or two before they're scattered along the coast. We want to give them a great night. There'll be about 2,500 of them—with girls and guests, say 4,000. We can get the Shrine auditorium donated. We can get the big dance bands to play for nothing. We can get screen and radio stars. We can get girls from the colleges and everywhere to dance with the boys. But there's a lot of money for incidental expenses and food and drinks at wholesale prices. We're all broke, and we offered Lilith the chance to pay the bills, take the credit and let us do the work. She's rotten rich, but she said she couldn't afford it. She just ducked out."

"Lilith," said Agatha, "is one of those women who accept all invitations and give none, go to all the parties and never give one."

Julie winced and blushed, and sighed:

"She's as bad as I am. You're hitting at me."

There was a chorus of protests against this self-slander.

"You, the sister of charity of all time! 'J. J. they call you—Jenerous Julie. You're the 'soft snap of the world.' 'The pushover.' 'The all day sucker.'"

"But I've never given a party since I came to town," Julie insisted. "I've always been meaning to, and never seemed to get around to it. Let me give this one."

"We'll all chip in, but we're feeling pretty poor," Agatha said.

"I must pay for it all," said Julie.

Godlessness of the Nazis Disclosed by 10 Authors

the havoc, have not learned that there is a greater right than might. Because Americans are free men by the very fact of being Americans—they were either born free or voluntarily sought freedom in escape from European tyranny—they find it almost impossible to believe that any men or any race on earth can really want to enslave the world. A book like this should open such dozing eyes.

end of Mr. Mann's tale, as he gives them the tablets "with the 10 words," there is a stirring prophecy of the disgust with which time will speak of the man who says: "They are no longer valid. Arise and get rid of them! Lie, murder, rob, whore, rape, and deliver your father and mother to the knife. For this is the natural behavior of human beings and you shall praise my name because I proclaim natural license." The name of that man is not mentioned by Thomas Mann. It is often mentioned in the nine other tales which take as their text the nine other commandments.

Rebecca West paints a factual picture of the Nazis' occupation of Denmark in her tale of a great actress and two great playwrights who believe that "man must never pretend to have accomplished that task which will be unfinished so long as he himself exists. He was set upon earth in order that he may acquaint himself with reality."

Franz Werfel tells a factual story of an Austrian Catholic priest who watched the anschluss, and in protest against the Brown Shirts' persecution of the Jews, went with them when they were driven from their village—a journey of peril and horror ending, oddly, in St. Louis, Mo. dramatic deaths as a result of the Nazi ideology.

Bruno Frank's tale of the daughter of a high Nazi official who was forced to dedicate her body to the propagation of the master race likewise ends in tragic melodrama. As does also Jules Romains' story of a cowardly young Leipzig professor who had a dear friend in a young French professor before the war and became, ironically, his friend's murderer. Andre Maurois tells a subtle tale of an opera singer in Paris who forced upon her parents incredible ignominy of the spirit because she felt she had to sing or die, and who did not recognize spiritual death until it was too late. Sigrid Undset writes an almost factual account of the occupation of Norway by the Nazis and of the dauntless spirit of her countrywomen. Hendrik Willem van Loon might have been writing about an actual boy when he tells of little German Johann's half year in Holland as the adopted child of old Samuel just after the first World war, when the hospitable people of Holland took the starving children of Germany to their ample bosoms in pity, and Johann's ironic return 18 years later to repay that kindness.

And Louis Bromfield is actually writing about some one he knew in the last of the stories, for he is writing about himself and his feeling about the Germans.

"There are people in the world," he says, "whom we might call 'the elect'—people who are decent and dignified, warm and human, who have a sense of values which never permits them to be rude or avaricious, or vulgar, whose greatest characteristics are generosity and the simplicity born of experience." The Germans about whom he writes—recognizable even when their names are slightly changed—are not of that elect, and Mr. Bromfield makes it plain why they are not.

He says at the end of his story—which includes the story of the daughter of a Lutheran minister who cold bloodedly became a great Nazi financier's wife—a few words which might serve as a description of all of the parts of this unique book: "There swept over me the sense of living in a bad melodrama in which there was no sense of reality whatever"—but the bad melodrama is a bitter fact. It is echt nazizism.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

A Novel by Rupert Hughes—

(Copyright: 1943: By Rupert Hughes.)

INSTALMENT X.

IVES might have regretted his brutality if Julie's panic had not destroyed his last belief in the possibility of her innocence. He was convinced now that she was guilty, guilty as hell, guilty as those other pretty little women who had committed every crime, including the final crime of fascinating fool jurors into acquitting them.

Here was Julie Patten with her millions, living as she did, beloved as she was, pretending to be a saint when she was really the cheap doxy of a cheap gangster who had been scared into a killing.

He began to hate her because she was rich while he was here on borrowed money in clothes that had been bought for him and on an errand that was distasteful to him till now. Now he felt like an avenging angel of justice. And he felt no less like an angel because his mission was to collect a heavy fine from this black hearted criminal with the pink, baby faced mask.

He let Julie writhe for a moment till he could decide what to do next. He had not expected such a sudden and complete confession. He did not suspect that her utter confusion was due to her utter innocence, her innocence even of ways to evade the false charge.

She was at bay now in her chair. Like any other trapped animal she began to defend herself. Something told her that she was in the presence of a blackmailer and that a plea of not guilty would only excite his ridicule. She sparred for time, a little, remembering suddenly that he did not seem to know the name of the town she came from. She must find out what he knew of Art Fressl. Perhaps he had never heard of Fressl's charge against her. Perhaps he had. He might be that cellmate. She said:

"Art Fressl! So you're a friend of Art Fressl's?"

"O, yes, indeed. Art and I are like that." He crossed two fingers. Now she knew he was lying. She tried a little trick of her own.

"How was he when you saw him last?"

"O, fine, fine!"

"Where did you see him?"

"As a matter of fact, he was in jail."

"With you?"

"O, no." He laughed that off, but uneasily, as he saw that she was taking the play away from him. Before he could get it back, she had asked:

"In jail? Too bad. Where was all this? What town?"

"O, back in—in—in your home town."

"What's the name of it?"

"You're asking me! You who were born there."

"Were you there lately?"

"I've just come from there."

"Really. And Art Fressl was in good health?"

"Well, he had a little prison pallor, but otherwise he was fine."

"Fine. And he told you that I was a friend of his?"

"A very intimate friend."

She startled him by her convincing way of drawing herself away from the very thought:

"That was not true. I met him a few times. The last time I met him he behaved horribly, got drunk, and grew so—so—well, I ran away from him, and never saw him again. What was he in jail for?"

"Don't you know?" he demanded.

"Yes. Do you?"

"Of course."

"It was for murder, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"But you said he was feeling fine when you left him the other day."

"Well, as fine as a fellow could feel who had that hanging over him. But he had hopes of getting a good lawyer and beating the rap. It would cost a lot of money."

"Did he ask you to see me and get the money from me—his intimate friend?"

"Well, not exactly, but—"

She let him simmer a moment before she said:

"It's funny he didn't tell you one very important thing."

"What's that?"

"The most important thing that could have happened to him."

"What's that?"

"That he's dead."

Now he acted as if she had shot him, and with a bullet that jolted him back into his chair. His face went into a bloodless white and then a sudden crimson.

While he was struggling to regain his shattered self-control, Julie was out of her chair and moving briskly to her desk. From a drawer she took the Clinton paper that carried the story of Fressl's attack on the guard.

She laid it before Terry Ives. His eyes were now almost as pathetic with dismay and inner turmoil as hers had been. He read the story and felt his whole campaign crumble like a crushed puffball, leaving only a little foul dust. He wondered what he could tell Earl Toely. He wondered where he could pick up any money hereafter, honestly or otherwise.

Julie was tempted to twit him with a sarcastic comment:

"I wonder why my intimate friend Art didn't tell his intimate friend, Mr. Ives, that he had been shot dead."

But Julie was no twitter. She could not gloat. She had no gifts for triumph. In fact, she felt no triumph. Her worst fears had revived. Art Fressl was dead, but she was not quit of him. He must have told this visitor about her in spite of the promise in his letter. This strange man Ives believed that she had been Fressl's very intimate friend. Yet he did not know of Fressl's death. She had caught him in a lie. But there was no comfort in that. Why had he lied? Why was he here? What did he want? Money, of course. Everybody wanted money. And hers was giving out under the drain. The golden sands in her hourglass were running low. Her time in Eden was short. It was too bad that she could not be allowed to steal away and leave behind her a pleasant little memory followed soon by a peaceful oblivion. It was too bad that she had to be smirched with a loathsome scandal and driven out in a shame to be remembered longer than her charities.

Her self-possession began to ebb just as Terry Ives began to recover from his panic and make a desperate effort to redeem his shattered plans. She had made a fool of him and his pretense of having seen Art Fressl lately. But she was rich and he was poor. She was the vested interests and he belonged to the vestless, and the pantsless, poor. She was rich, therefore dishonest; he was poor, therefore honest. He was poor for the only reason that makes people poor; he had been robbed by the rich. She was rich by the only way any one ever got rich; by robbing the poor. It was his right and his duty to get back the money she and her plutocratic father had stolen from him.

"Miss Patten," he began, "let's get down to business. Your father used to keep a store, didn't he?"

"He did. I used to clerk in it. That's how I came to know Art Fressl. He came there as a customer and I waited on him."

"Well, I don't come to you as a customer. I'm a traveling salesman. I've got something to sell."

"That's what Art Fressl said. He pretended he wanted to sell my father a safe. I was too blind and young to realize that he was just a common thief using me to find out how to rob my father. In my ignorance I saved my father's life perhaps—at least for a while—by telling this strange man that my father never carried more than a little money on his person. I saved the store by telling him that my father never left any money in the store. My father was very close, Mr. Ives. He had many fine traits, but he didn't throw his money away. That was left for me to do."

"I'm glad to hear that," said Ives, convinced in spite of himself by her picture of Art Fressl's scouting methods. "I could use a bit of your money."

The look of an angel came over Julie's face.

"Why didn't you say so?" she said. "If you're in need, I'd be glad to give you what I can to tide you over. You don't look poor. But clothes prove nothing. How much do you need? Ten—fifteen—dollars."

"I want quite a bit more than that."

"Well, I'm afraid—you see there are so many demands on what funds I have. I'm happy to do my bit to relieve suffering, but there's so much suffering that my money is only a drop in a bucket."

Ives broke in impatiently: "Nothing makes the rich talk poor like an appeal from the poor."

"Well, the rich will soon be poorer than the poor if they give everything the poor ask. Besides, I'm not rich. I never was."

"Don't you call millions rich?" Ives snapped.

"I certainly do."

"According to Snoopy Brent, the Patten millions are going to marry the Devoe millions."

She laughed impatiently: "I saw that idiotic nonsense. I don't know whether Mr. Devoe has millions or not. I do know that I'm not going to marry him. I tried to get the story denied, but it didn't do any good."

"Well, whether Devoe has millions or only mills, the Patten millions are notorious. And you'd be more notorious if it were known that you are the girl friend and the accomplice of Art Fressl in the murder he was about to be tried for when he died."

"That is a black lie, Mr. Ives, and you know it."

"I have it on the authority of Art Fressl himself. And even tho he's dead, the district attorney back in your old home town would like to get somebody to pay the price for the murder of that old druggist.

What Has Gone Before

Julie Patten, made at least temporarily wealthy by her miserly, cruel father's death, goes to Hollywood to seek a brief spell of glorious life. Her generosity creates an illusion of tremendous wealth, and she is welcomed by the movie crowd, made love to by Eric Devoe, an alimony-grabbing playboy. His lawyer, Sgt. Cole Kavanaugh, thinks Julie is a crook, but loves her. On a house party she receives a letter from Art Fressl, a beau of home-town days, now in prison for murdering a druggist, threatening to accuse her as his accomplice unless she sends him money. She tears the letter to bits, but it is pieced together by a tramp, Terry Ives, who decides to use it for blackmail. Eventually Cole decides Julie is O.K. and takes her side, altho she has rejected his offer of marriage because of her trouble. Then Julie learns Art Fressl has been killed, but still fears he may have an accomplice. She gives $500 to an impoverished waiter. Snoopy Brent, columnist, announces her engagement to Devoe, which she denies. Ives gets financing from Gambler Earl Toley and then meets Julie, shocking her with the name of a "mutual friend," Art Fressl.

'Hansel and Gretel' Will Be Presented Saturday

Many Veterans Make Up Cast; Kopp Director

Elizabeth Brown.
[Seymour Photo.]

Just as it appeared that Chicago's younger generation was to be deprived of that inalienable right of children at Christmas time, a performance of "Hansel and Gretel," Harry Zelzer waved a managerial wand in the proverbial nick of time and the Humperdinck opera will come to hearing at the Civic Opera house on Saturday afternoon at 2:30. Oldsters who may want to prime the youngsters—or themselves—on the story and background of the opera are advised to turn to page 5 of the Graphic section of today's TRIBUNE. Tho hastily assembled, the cast is one of "Hansel and Gretel" veterans and the musical direction will be under the authoritative baton of Leo Kopp, who will preside over an orchestra of Chicago Opera musicians. Eunice Steen Lamont will be the Gretel, Elizabeth Brown the Hansel, Mark Love the father, Ilma Bayle the mother, Dorothee Manski the witch, Mary Kampo the Sandman, and Jackie Lynn the Dew Fairy.

Hazel Scott, one of the foremost of the pianists who inhabit the lavender borderland between classic and swing, will make her first Chicago appearance at Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30. She is now, and has been for some time, the rage at New York's Cafe Society, is visible in the current movie, "I Dood It," and will soon be heard in the impending "Broadway Melody." Her program is divided into three parts, wending its way from preludes by Bach, Shostakovich, Delius, and Rachmaninoff, thru an interlude of swinging the classics [Bach Inventions, Chopin's Minute Waltz, Brahm's Fifth Hungarian dance, Chopin's C sharp minor waltz, and Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody] to a frank and unashamed session of swing—Miss Scott's Blues in B flat, Boogie Woogie and Improvisation on "Blues in the Night," "Tea for Two," Johnny Green's "Body and Soul," and a medley of Richard Rodgers' melodies from "Babes in Arms," "A Connecticut Yankee," and "Oklahoma!"

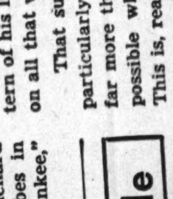
Tschaikowsky Biography Painstakingly Accurate

IF AT last Sunday's opera rally—which rather got the cart of asking for money ahead of the horse of what the management intends to provide for that money—a composer of opera had stood up to speak his piece [none did] he might have stated his modest operatic requirements in something like these terms: "1. Singers of average ability, but well trained and thoro. 2. Singers who can act simply and well. 3. Not too sumptuous a setting, but one thoroly in keeping with the period of the story, the costumes to correspond faithfully to the dress of the period during which the action occurs. 4. A chorus that is not a flock of sheep but real people participating in the plot of the opera. 5. A conductor who is not a machine or even a musician concerned only with the fact that a C sharp must not be played as a C, but a real leader of the orchestra."

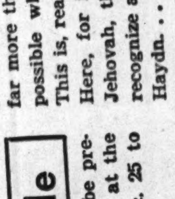
But, as I say, no composer spoke Sunday, nor did any of the management, except by proxy. Those words were set down more than half a century ago by Peter Ilyich Tschaikowsky as his hope for "Eugen Onegin," which, with "Pique Dame," constituted his only success in the opera house at whose doors he battered a disappointed lifetime. Perhaps it would comfort him today to know they are the favorites of Josef Stalin, who sits inscrutable in council, wrapped in mystery and priceless camel's hair. Tschaikowsky was less reticent, at least in the written word and music. The world cherishes his music, and many of the words are newly captured in Herbert Weinstock's painstaking, scholarly, and fascinating biography, "Tschaikowsky," just published by Alfred A. Knopf and worth the $5 it costs.

Access to Fresh Material.

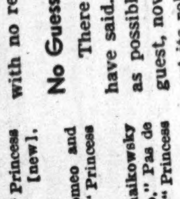
Because Tschaikowsky's music has universal appeal, its composer is greatly honored in Russia today. Mr. Weinstock had access to much fresh material made available by the soviet government, which recently rehabilitated and reopened the Tschaikowsky museum at Klin, so savagely



Peter Tschaikowsky.



Leopold Auer.



Anton Rubinstein.

wrecked during the Nazi invasion. Investigating these invaluable sources, he arrives at the conviction that Modest Tschaikowsky's life of his brother is unreliable and that Catherine Drinker Bowen's "Beloved Friend" is a fictionized and luridly colored story of 14 of the composer's 53 years. Apparently having read the three huge volumes of Tschaikowsky's correspondence with that beloved friend, the fabulous Nadezhda von Meck he never met, Weinstock disposes of it competently as a fantastic episode in a life that needed no novelist's imagination to give it the color of mourning and the sound of lamentation.

In the composer's own words, shorn of bowdlerization, Mr. Weinstock establishes the validity of Tschaikowsky's personal tragedy and the fear of its exposure which drove him into a disastrous marriage and stripped his purse with what his biographer believes to have been blackmail. But these things, like the story of Mme. von Meck, who was the composer's queenly patron for years and who withdrew largess with a lie when it suited her, hold no more than a reasonable place in the rich Russian pattern of his life, which impinges on all that was music, sometimes, it seems, on all that was, in his era.

That such a book is a desirable reference work goes without saying, particularly as it is carefully indexed and handsomely printed. But it is far more than that, being the kind of stimulating, even startling reading possible when an acute observer writes voluminously what he thinks. This is, really, Tschaikowsky's book with Weinstock as sympathetic editor. Here, for instance, is Tschaikowsky saying, "If Beethoven is the God Jehovah, then I love Mozart as the musical Christ. . . . Bach I do not recognize as great. . . . Handel was fourth rate. . . . I like some things of Haydn. . . . Gluck was attractive. . . . Brahms is cold, dark, pretentious, with no real profundity. . . . Wagner is a symphonist by nature."

No Guesswork.

There is no need in any case to guess at what Tschaikowsky might have said. Invariably, he said it. He wrote Mme. von Meck, as precisely as possible, how he worked, describing inspiration as a once uncertain guest, now inseparable. "No melody ever comes to me," he added, "without its related harmony. Generally speaking, these two elements of music, plus rhythm, are impossible to conceive separately . . . if one is composing for orchestra, the musical idea includes the proper instrument for its projection."

But these are fragments, however persuasive, from a book that deserves to be known as a whole. Out of it comes a strong pulse of the complex rhythm of the unhappy, marvelously gifted man. Recluse tho he preferred to be, he knew every one, and you see them thru his penetrating, often jaundiced eyes, from Tolstoy, whose books he loved and who bored him in person, to Anton Rubinstein and Leopold Auer, lion and lamb in turn to his piano and violin concertos as they strode from ignominy to triumph, undeterred even by Hanslick's boomerang, "music that stinks in the ear." You see him detesting "The Mikado," fidgeting at Bayreuth, squirming at New York's interminable dinners in his honor, but remembering his promise to Damrosch about the first American performance of the "Pathétique," so that the score arrived after his death, bitter, abrupt, and preventable, of cholera.

It is an absorbing story of a strange man, his time and his music, the revealing portrait of one who could say, "Regretting the past and hoping for the future, without being satisfied with the present, that is how my entire life is spent." Perhaps, when you think of it, that is one formula for genius.

Notes of Music and Musicians

By Albert Goldberg

Three compositions by American composers will feature the first half of the Chicago Symphony program which Hans Lange will conduct on Thursday night and Friday afternoon. One first performance will be in the group, that of Alan Shulman's Theme and Variations for solo viola and orchestra, which will be played by Milton Preves, the young Chicago trained man who rose from the ranks to become first violist of the organization. The composer is now a member of the United States maritime service and is on leave to attend the premiere of his work. Before entering the service he was a member of the arranging staff of the New York studios of NBC and has functioned as chief arranger for most of the major musical shows broadcast from there. A cellist, he also has been a member of the Kreiner and Stuyvesant string quartets and the NBC Symphony orchestra.

Both the other American compositions have had previous Chicago performances. Walter Helfer's overture, "In Modo Giocoso," was played by Mr. Lange at a "Pop" concert in January, 1942. The composer is a graduate of Harvard, an early winner of the American Prix de Rome, and now heads the music department of Hunter college. Max Wald's Pagan Epitaph, "The Dancer Dead," was first played here by the Illinois Symphony orchestra in October, 1936, under Rudolph Ganz's direction. The work won a second prize of $2,500 in an NBC competition in 1932. The final half of the program will be devoted to a revival of Berlioz' symphony, "Harold in Italy," a curious work which is in effect a concerto for viola. Mr. Preves again will be heard in the solo part. "Harold in Italy" has not been heard on these programs since the 29th season, 1921-'22, when the solo part was played by Franz Esser.

Jesus Maria Sanroma again will substitute for the indisposed Vladimir Horowitz when he plays the C minor piano concerto of Rachmaninoff at the Tuesday concert. Mr. Lange will conduct and the orchestral numbers will be Harty's arrangement of the suite from Handel's "Music for the Royal Fireworks," Haydn's symphony in C major, "Le Midi," and Debussy's "Clouds" and "Festivals."

The Young People's concert on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 will be directed by Mr. Lange, the program consisting of two movements from Tschaikowsky's Fifth smyphony, Berlioz's "Rakoczy March," and "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

The Saturday night "Pop" concert lists the overture to Weber's "Die Freischütz," Sibelius' Second symphony, Debussy's "The Afternoon of a Faun," Four Polish Dances by Tansman, and the Bacchanale from Wagner's "Tannhäuser."

New York Has Another Theater Hit: 'Carmen Jones'

Negro Version of Opera Is Well Executed

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK [Special].—"Carmen Jones," Negro version of "Carmen," is this town's newest excuse for whoopin', hollerin' and hat tossing. Following on the heels of "Winged Victory," it adds immeasurably to the excitement of a theatrical season which is already getting proud of itself. Still lacking on the playbill, however, are a first rate drama and a first rate comedy.

Billy Rose.
[Acme Photo.]

"Carmen Jones" forces one to bring out the old adjective, triumphant, and then hunt around for some more. In every single department—writing, casting, setting, costuming, direction, and over-all production—it is admirable and thrilling. When the morning paper reviews came out, Impresario Billy Rose—known as the mighty midget of the pint size Barnum—said to his wife, Eleanor Holm, "Now maybe I can get a little respect around this house." "Why should you?" teased Eleanor. "It took you 10 months, and anybody should be able to do something in 10 months."

"Carmen Jones" is the product of imagination, good taste, and good judgment. The good judgment was Rose's. In planning his production he decided he would hire the best he could get. For librettist he had Oscar Hammerstein II., whose lyrics from "Show Boat" to "Oklahoma" have marked him the top man in his trade. For directors he chose Hassard Short and Charles Friedman. For sets he engaged Howard Bay, and for costumes Raoul Pene Dubois. For orchestral arrangement he took Robert Russell Bennett, and as an inspired recruiting agent he engaged John Henry Hammond, who hunted the country for Negro talent and found some amazing people in the oddest places.

This production is no hopped-up version of an opera; it's no "Hot Mikado" or "Swing Mikado." It is straight "Carmen." Bennett's arrangement of the score has been mainly to lighten it for a smaller orchestra and for smaller voices than one would find at the Metropolitan opera.

In "Carmen Jones" Carmen is a wench who works in a parachute factory. Don Jose becomes Joe, an M. P. guarding the plant. Micaela is Cindy Lou, Joe's sweet, simple girl friend from back home. Escamillo becomes Husky Miller, a prize fighter. The plot of the opera is unchanged. The glowingly beautiful sets may range from parachute factories to night clubs to country clubs to fight stadiums, but the story is the same—and it's a good, sound story. Carmen takes Joe from Cindy Lou, then drops Joe to go to Chicago with Husky Miller. Joe deserts from the army, follows her and kills her outside the ball park where Husky is fighting with one Poncho, the South American panther.

Librettist Hammerstein, a man of infinite resource, splendid imagination, and faultless taste, has done amazing things with the arias, duets, quintets, and choruses of the opera. The toreador's song starts off with Husky Miller singing, "Stan' up an' fight until you hear de bell." When the anguished Joe stabs Carmen and falls across her body he sings:

String me high on a tree
So dat I soon will be
Wid my darlin', my baby—
My Carmen!

The next-to-opening number is a chorus of street urchins singing "Lift 'em up and put 'em down." Carmen's first song is titled "Dat's Love." Carmen tempts Joe with a number, "Dere's a Cafe on de Corner"—which would be the seguidilla in which, in the original, a rendezvous is suggested at Lillas Pastia's tavern. In the new version it's Billy Pastor's barbecue road house. The smugglers' retreat becomes a high society [colored] country club on Chicago's south side, and here Carmen reads the cards and they always turn up the nine of spades—death. Her song is "Dat Old Boy."

In lesser hands than those Billy Rose has managed this sort of thing could have been, at best, an interesting freak. As it turns out, "Carmen Jones" has drama and dignity, and, despite the lack of heroic voices, it is a splendid opera production. And it has something that almost all grand opera lacks—comedy. The ballets are humorous and inventive and were staged by Eugene Loring. The libretto is full of earthy Negro talk, and there is a swell musical comedy quintet, "Whizzin' Away Along de Track," sung by Carmen and some characters named Rum, Dink, Myrt, and Frankie.

The casting is astonishing. There are two Joes, two Carmens, two Cindy Lous, who will sing alternate performances. I have not yet caught the second act, but the first night Carmen Jones, Muriel Smith, gives the best acted Carmen I ever saw. She seems inherently sexy and a born tramp, rather than a prima donna pretending to have these characteristics. Mr. Hammond found Miss Smith clerking in a Philadelphia camera store and this is her first public stage appearance. The first night Joe, Luther Saxon, was gentle and appealing; he'd been a checker at a navy yard. Husky Miller is Glenn Bryant, a huge, handsome man with a good baritone voice who is on leave as a pavement pounder in the New York police department.

It is likely that the professional music critics will admire "Carmen Jones" with reservations, for there are no really great solo voices in it. The voices are all good, but not big, and not, I suppose, thoroly schooled in the rigors of grand opera. But the whole production has been built around this very fact, and the result is a "Carmen" without heroics in which everybody seems like a living, normal person. Of how many operas you have seen can you say that?

20 Movies Not Meant for Morons

"TWENTY BEST FILM PLAYS," edited by John Gassner and Dudley Nichols. [Crown Publishers, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Frederic Babcock.

This book gives, in something like 1,100 pages, the complete texts of the scenarios of some of the finest entertainment given the American people in the last few years. Included are such sparkling and worthwhile motion pictures as "Mrs. Miniver," "The Grapes of Wrath," "My Man Godfrey," "The Life of Emile Zola," "How Green Was My Valley," "All That Money Can Buy," "It Happened One Night," and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

As Mr. Gassner points out in the foreword: "There is now a literature of the screen—the screenplay. If this fact has not been widely recognized, it is only because screenplays have not been properly accorded the dignity of print, a situation that is being corrected to some degree by this book."

Obviously, the volume is intended for persons interested in motion pictures both as entertainment and as a means of depicting present-day conditions and ambitions. As such, it is, in my opinion, the best ever compiled.

It will absorb the attention of those who have seen the screenplays included, and those who are concerned with the movies' role in the affairs of today.

Mr. Gassner is head of the play department of the Theater Guild; Mr. Nichols is a former newspaper man turned scenarist and producer. They have assembled a collection that can well stand beside Mr. Gassner's earlier compilation: "Twenty Best Plays of the Modern American Theater."

To those of us who believe the motion picture has earned a highly important place in American life, the book is a mine of real treasure. And even those who still think of the movies as products of and for morons will find in this volume how amazingly writing for the films has established its claim to literary recognition. It will reveal that some of the ablest writing nowadays is being done in Hollywood.

Just one instance: The transformation of "Mrs. Miniver" from a series of sketches to a living, vital performance.

I was one of the few who didn't rave over the original book. I didn't care two hoots whether or not Mrs. Miniver rang for tea. Having had some experience with the English people, I was strangely unmoved by their efforts to tell us Americans how we should react to the war.

But the film version of that book was something else. It was a thrilling record of how the people of England were taking it on the chin.

Now it develops that the text of that play reads just as excitingly as it did when it was transferred to the screen.

All the other plays are like that. They are full of eloquence, humor, action, and scintillating dialog. They are sparsely but beautifully written; ergo, they are models of good English.

I recommend this book without reservation.

And what moral does it teach? I wouldn't know about that.

A Youngster Writes of African Victory

"DESERT CONQUEST," by Russell Hill. [Knopf, $3.]

"Desert Conquest" is the author's second book dealing with the 2½ year war waged for North Africa. It begins at the time the British had driven Gen. Erwin Rommel halfway across, where the "Desert Fox" struck back and almost reached Cairo, and ends with the removal of the axis from Africa and the capture of Tunisia.

The author is young [just 25 years old] and displays a burning enthusiasm for action. This eagerness has kept him close in front and has given him a closeup slant at the battle zone which many war books lack.

A Traveler from Britain Tells How the U. S. Looks to Her

"GIVE US THIS DAY," by Claire Leighton. [Reynal and Hitchcock, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell.

"Give Us This Day" is a welcome item in the literary lend-lease which has been operating for a century and a half between this country and Great Britain.

When Washington Irving published his charming essays on England, English readers were amazed to discover that an American could use a feather not only as an ornament in his scalplock but as a pen, and also that he delighted in their ways of living. Today Americans are similarly impressed by the versatility of the Englishwoman, Claire Leighton, both in the graphic arts and in prose, as well as by her delight in our rural life.

It is no longer a novelty to see travelers from Europe who lack the condescension toward American which blinded their predecessors in the last century. But it is indeed unexpected to hear a cultivated guest from England grow lyrical over American corn and wheat, meat, vegetables and fruits, milk and eggs, on very much the same grounds that move Americans. True, Claire Leighton's eye is caught, as was Irving's, by familiar details which too rarely impress native observers. And yet in reality she merely restates in her own distinctive way what Grant Wood and John Steuart Curry have painted and millions of inarticulate Americans have felt.

It is no disparagement of Claire Leighton to say that the inarticulate for whom she speaks will not always recognize her transcript of their unspoken feelings. Many a middle western farmer, for example, would shy like a colt if he met her account of his love for the soil. Likewise, the farmer's boy and the cow he milks are "kin" only when the flies aren't bad.

There is, very properly, sentiment in "Give Us This Day," but very little sentimentalism—this joy in the simplest aspects of the American present has nothing of the mawkishness which marred Irving's escape into the English past.

Magellan's Voyage in Thrilling Story

"HE WENT WITH MAGELLAN," by Louise Andrews Kent. [Houghton, Mifflin, $2.]

The author of "Mrs. Appleyard's Year" and "Mrs. Appleyard's Kitchen" has turned again to youthful readers. Continuing her series of stories of famous explorers she has written another entertaining sea story with a historical background.

"Old Tiger's" Biography Is Strong Picture of War Role

"CLEMENCEAU," by Geoffrey Bruun. [Harvard University Press, $3.]

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi.

"In 1917, when the bloody repulse of Nivelle's spring offensive had reduced whole French divisions to mutiny; when the weakening of Russia assured Germany a numerical superiority on the western front; when the disaster at Caporetto had made Italy a liability instead of an asset; and the submarine campaign threatened to break British mastery of the seas, all the most determined, most patriotic, and most heroic elements of the French population rallied behind the 76 year old veteran, who demanded an end to defeatism and a prosecution of the war to the last franc and the last man and the last ditch."

The essential merit of this biography is to have drawn a most impressive picture of the "Tiger's" role in keeping France at war and leading her to victory thru all trials and tribulations of an exhausted and strife torn nation, and to steer the country thru the diplomatic chaos of interallied relations. Indeed, that was the one period in which Clemenceau showed himself a truly great man, the one page in his life most fit for dramatization.

Prof. Bruun has not uncovered much that would throw new light on the Clemenceau regime of 1917-'18, but he has used thoro scholarship and excellent judgment in bringing into proper relief the almost fantastic problems of the French crisis in the midst of World War I.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

TWO years ago last week we were all so confused by Pearl Harbor that the reading of books seemed almost like taking twilight sleep. . . . During that week deeds seemed the only possible reaction to the grim stimulus. . . . But it took only a few days for us to realize again that action is not enough; that it is the direction of action by thought that counts—for us to remember what experience had taught us, that the words which record the lessons of history are remembered long after the deeds which were their ABC's were forgotten. . . . And then we found in books a strong iron tonic for the days which were ahead.

More Vital Than Ever.

In the two years which have passed since Pearl Harbor, books have become almost amazingly more vital in the life of America. . . . At no time in their history have publishers done a better business, and that despite all of the curtailments which the war has made necessary. . . . Booksellers everywhere this year say their business is at least 40 per cent better than it was last year, which was the most prosperous year in American publishing history. . . . Sales are leaping into astronomical figures. . . . Fifty million Pocket Books [both fiction and fact] were sold in the last four years. . . . This year the World Publishing company expects to sell 4,000,000 Tower books [nonfiction]. . . . The Book of the Month Club has stabilized its membership at 575,000; won't let any more into the fold. . . . The Literary Guild has 340,000 members, the $1 Book club 385,000. . . . And there are, among others, large Scientific, Religious, Catholic, Classics, and People's, book clubs.

The People's is the new Sears-Roebuck Readers' club, the mail order house acting as distributor, and Simon & Schuster, publishers, as editors, with the books selected by a Gallup poll. . . . It already has 65,000 members. . . . Its first selection was Lloyd Douglas' "The Robe"; Marcia Davenport's "The Valley of Decision" second.

It looks as if books were here not for the duration but for the smaller and better world we hope is on its way. . . . It is a historical fact that wars not only stir men's hearts to deeper religious faiths, but that they stir them to wider reading — probably groping for guidance from the past, solace for the present, hope for the future. . . . There is a strangely comforting sense of deathlessness in a fine book. . . . Its author's body may die, but his spirit in the book lives on.

Her Books Still Live.

Elizabeth Delafield has just died in England, but her "Provincial Lady" and other characters will live in the hearts of her fellow countrymen and her devoted American readers. . . . She would have been the last to wish that her friends, unknown or known, weep for her. . . . She would wish them to think of her as alive in her books which had given them pleasure. . . . But one cannot forget the vivid strength of that thin, very feminine body, the sharp, darting eagerness not to miss anything that belied the first impression which her heavy-lidded eyes gave, her delight in pretty clothes, her zest for all life, even tho she felt it only as an onlooker.

Once when she was visiting in Chicago she had been taken to every conceivable spot of interest, historically and socially, and she and Arthur Meeker Jr. were dining with us as a quiet farewell evening. . . . It was the last night of the months' long walkathon, and my husband, with a layman's sure instinct for what would be excitement for an almost supersophisticated writer, suggested our all going to the walkathon. I thought it was a terrible idea, but Elizabeth Delafield was fascinated by the idea and, after we got there, the spectacle itself. . . . And altho the rest of us almost swooned at the grim and barbarous spectacle of human beings torturing their bodies, already tired out, by "spurts" of fantastic gyrations, sometimes collapsing from sheer exhaustion, she apparently had much the same feeling about it that the great Spanish ladies are said to have had at the bullfights — a feeling of its being grim, sometimes horrible, but terrifically vital.

A Political Exile.

There was a great Spanish lady here last week, Senora Isabel de Palencia. . . . She was the first Spanish woman to represent her country at a foreign court, as minister to Sweden in 1936. . . . She is now a political exile from the Franco regime and is living in Mexico, but only, obviously, for the duration. . . . Her autobiography, "I Must Have Liberty," published in 1940, is a comprehensive picture of the tragedy of Spain as well as a fascinating life story. . . . She also has written books for children — charming ones, with the same witty humor that characterizes her conversation.

Old Home Day for Her.

And speaking of wit, put Emily Kimbrough in any room and the walls will burst with the laughter. . . . You know her as half of the youthful Pilgrim's Progress in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" and as the all-in-one author of the season's laugh record, "We followed Our Hearts to Hollywood." . . . It tells of her explorations of what was to her, until she got there, the dark continent. . . . She was the guest of Rose Oller Harbaugh for luncheon the other day at Field's. . . . It was old home day for Emily Kimbrough, because when she lived in Chicago she used to work on Fashions of the Hour, and some of her old associates were there to greet her, as well as some of her fellow authors. . . . Among them was Margaret Ayer Barnes, who had been watching over Emily's health and happiness so successfully that they were almost late for luncheon.

They Talk About Hollywood.

But, while Emily looked a little svelter than when I last saw her, she obviously needed no coddling as an invalid. She has more apparent energy than a Flying Fortress, altho her design is more on the fireside model type. . . . She looked very chic and very good old home town Indiana at the same time, and that requires a genius for being one's self mid pleasures and palaces.

She said that at one of the Hollywood palaces where she roamed there was a huge cocktail party the day that Mussolini fell. When she went in she made a bet that Mussolini's name would not be mentioned. . . . It seems that they talk about Hollywood or else. . . . Well, the party gayed its way into the late hours, and Mr. M.'s name wasn't mentioned, and Emily was mentally tucking away the bonus on her perspicacity, when a pretty little starlet came up to her and said, "Isn't it terrible about Mussolini's being kicked out today of all days? He just pushed Lana Turner and her new baby right off the front page!"

Engaging Biography Tells Life of George M. Cohan

"3 IS A FAMILY" OPENS HERE CHRISTMAS NIGHT

Saga of Stage Prince Written by Morehouse

By Claudia Cassidy.

Among the theater's more provocative expectations of late have been Gene Fowler's as yet unpublished biography of John Barrymore, which invokes Horatio's farewell to Hamlet for the "Good Night, Sweet Prince" of its title, and the just released "George M. Cohan: Prince of the American Theater," by Ward Morehouse [Lippincott, $3]. Both Mr. Fowler and Mr. Morehouse interrupted busy careers for the grueling work of writing about men already so legendary that miracles are expected of their biographers, and yet so alive in contemporary memories that many a reader will play an inadvertent game of cat and mouse to pounce upon a luckless error. Perhaps they were impelled by, and perhaps they now fully appreciate, Hamlet's dying trust to that same Horatio:

"If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
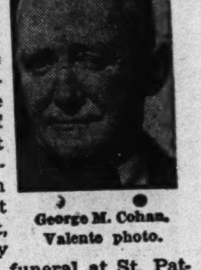
To tell my story."



George M. Cohan. Valente photo.

Mr. Morehouse tells Cohan's story as a devoted friend, to be sure, but most of all as an objective reporter who states the facts and lets you draw your own conclusions. He takes off in fiction just once from the day of Cohan's birth at Corkie Hill, Providence, R. I., on July 3, 1878 [that July 4 was apt, but a publicity myth], until his funeral at St. Patrick's barely a year ago when the late Pietro Yon played "Over There" on a whispering organ. This one lapse is a curious bit of vaudeville dialect in which two Irish women gossip over the arrival of George Michael Cohan to impecunious troupers already burdened with one child—the beautiful Josephine who was to steal the Four Cohans' press notices until her young brother grew up to steal the show. Mr. Morehouse leaps back into the realm of fact to underscore the Irish background with a reminder that the family name was Keohane, pronounced Ca-han, later changed to Cohan, pronounced Co-HAN.

The red, white, and blue format of this war time volume covers, with less irony than the Cohan saga might evoke, the strange trail blazed by the picturesque little man with the twinkling eyes, the waggling finger and the unforgettable dance steps who for so many years was a theater in himself, often snubbed by the mighty, then suddenly, on the verge of oblivion, hailed as America's first actor.

They say, and Mr. Morehouse gives it ballast, that Cohan always loved the vaudeville days of the Four Cohans best. I don't doubt it. I remember the night he spoke from the stage of the theater, now a movie house, that so briefly was called the Four Cohans. That was no curtain speech nostalgia. But I never saw Cohan until the latter days of his musical comedy career, the period of "The Merry Malones," then in a revival of his beloved vagabond in "The Tavern," in the failure of his near monolog play, "Pigeons and People," and finally, in triumphant success as an actor in other people's plays, notably his performance in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness" and his gala impersonation of F. D. R. in "I'd Rather Be Right."

Mr. Morehouse adds a Chicago footnote on the O'Neill play that will touch off more than one reminiscent chuckle. It seems that when Theresa Helburn saw the play here she discovered to her horror that it had been stretched 30 minutes by Cohan's leisurely playing, notably his growing affection for the pause. Tactfully, she spoke to him about it. But Cohan said audiences here weren't as fidgety as in New York and they didn't mind if he kept them all night. Sometimes he almost did.

Perhaps there will be, later, a biography of Cohan that delves deeper into the man himself. But the "Broadway After Dark" columnist has done a careful reporting job in which he refuses to take sides. Even Cohan's stand with the managers in the actors' winning strike is treated impersonally and objectively. Mr. Morehouse tries to tell everything, from the partnership and split with the late Sam H. Harris to the time Cohan almost bet against the Black Sox, to be dissuaded in the nick of time by Comiskey. Sometimes he falls back on quotations, inevitable in a life so richly reported in the daily press.

And, like all biographers, he has gone to Ashton Stevens for an early and vividly revealing interview with Cohan, published in 1904. I sometimes wonder what Mr. Stevens gets, one half so precious as the stuff he gives. In this case, he is credited to the wrong newspaper.

Ready for Musical.

Ella Raines, leading lady of "Hail the Conquering Hero," is prepared for a musical role in case one ever comes. She studied piano for eight years, singing for four.

'Water-Soaked Woollcott' Is Off to the Wars Again

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

LT. JOHN MASON BROWN is off to the wars again. Everything clicked beautifully for Lt. Brown; he had his furlough just when his book, "To All Hands," was published; he was in great demand as a speaker and made several excellent addresses, and he won much praise for the way he spoke to the men of the Sicilian expedition when he was "a water-soaked Woollcott, a sea-swept Pepys, a wet Swing, a moist Baedeker, a damp Greek messenger, and a damper Polonius."

By the way, the question has been asked: Did these talks go to the entire fleet? The answer is no; they were addressed to the men of the flagship, over its loudspeaker system. Obviously it would have been excellent if all hands of that great fleet could have had a running talk of what was going on, but the air had to be kept open for naval messages between ships.

Aunt Vittie's Windfall.

Several careful readers have written to say they don't see how Aunt Vittie, in Jesse Stuart's story, "Taps for Private Tussie," can get $10,000 worth of life insurance in one lump when her soldier husband is reported dead. They say the government pays in instalments now. That isn't going to stop the Tussies from having their shindigs and buying new furniture. A little money goes a long way in the Kentucky hills. Of course it is too late for the author to modify his story to suit actual conditions, but I should think all he would have to do would be to indicate that the Tussies, instead of paying for everything at once, bought their goods on time payments.

Henry J. Kaiser, hero of Paul de Kruif's crusading book, "Kaiser Wakes the Doctors," was recently welcomed at a luncheon by a woman who announced that she was delighted to meet "the face that launched a thousand ships." Kaiser replied: "Madame, as of today, your figures are correct." . . . Lewis Gannett, the critic, was recommending books recently at a Book and Author luncheon, which is usually orchidaceous and well supplied with mink. He said he'd like to recommend "McSorley's Wonderful Saloon," which he found highly entertaining, but that he had given it to his mother-in-law, and that she didn't like the book nearly as well as he did. "McSorley's Wonderful Saloon" contains the finest sketches of New York life and characters that I have read in a decade.

Upton Sinclair Biography.

Helen Woodward, who has lately been interesting herself in murder mysteries, and her husband, W. E. Woodward, are leaving for Pasadena, where they will stay six months while Mrs. Woodward gets material for a life of Upton Sinclair. It will be published by Henry Holt & Co.

This ought to be gravy for Mrs. Woodward, for it is generally believed that Sinclair has kept the most voluminous records of any author of our time, not excepting even the orderly files of H. L. Mencken. Sinclair's correspondence is global; his books have been translated into any number of foreign languages; they have packed the shelves of Russian libraries, and when Sinclair-Lewis got the Nobel prize professors in Moscow, Bombay, Cairo, and Colon staged a protest on behalf of their hero.

W. E. Woodward is busy again. He has completed an American history in terms of everyday life, "The Way Our People Lived," which will be published by Dutton, and is writing a new biography of Thomas Paine. He became internationally famous as the author of "Bunk" and his word, de-bunking, passed into general use.

Phelps Memorial Planned.

When William Lyon Phelps died, he willed his books to the library of Yale university. They will constitute the nucleus for the memorial that his friends and associates are creating. All money obtained for this purpose will be invested in important new books, which will have his bookplate bearing the words, "Here are God's conduits."

Since Dr. Phelps was greatly interested in new books, the library will reflect current publications. Many of his books were inscribed by their authors. On one occasion he and Mrs. Phelps attended a dinner given in London by James M. Barrie, at which Bernard Shaw inscribed one of his books to Mrs. Phelps, dating it "Rufus' birthday," Rufus being the red setter owned by the Phelps.

The committee that is collecting funds for the memorial is composed of Edna Ferber, Wilbur L. Cross, John Kieran, W. Somerset Maugham, and Chauncey Brewster Tinker.

THE MURDER CHART

By Drexel Drake.

ENTRY.	PERFORMANCE.	PAY-OFF.
"MURDER RUNS A FEVER," by Ruth Fenisong. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]	Woman FBI operative is spectacular figure in hectic spy melodrama that gives Sgt. Gridley Nelson tough job to protect old friends and crack murder simultaneously.	Characters are interesting and story is full of action and baffling cross currents. This author has done better with simpler plots.
"THE MYSTERY COMPANION," edited by A. L. Furman. [Gold Label, $2.75.]	Nineteen selected short tales of recent vintage affording 430 pages of escape reading that may be taken in small portions.	Volume represents thoughtful and meritorious selection to appease variety of appetites among readers of detective and mystery fiction.
"THE TRIPLE CROSS MURDERS," by Amelia Reynolds Long. [Ziff-Davis, $2.]	Theft of body from medical school, tragic deaths, and disappearing doctor provide baffler for Trelawney of the D. A.'s office.	Well planned murder conspiracy, with puzzle capably kept alive, but otherwise smart detective work a bit too much accommodated by chance circumstances.

Blunt, Virile Smuts Is Seen as a Paradox

"JAN SMUTS," a biography by F. S. Crafford. [Doubleday, Doran, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Russell MacFall.

Forty odd years ago, a Boer general, fighting against England, sent a too belligerent newspaper man to a concentration camp. Now both are prime ministers allied in a World war; the general is Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, premier of the Union of South Africa; the correspondent Winston Churchill, British premier. Such have been the fortunes of two of Britain's—and of the world's—most versatile men, both adept politicians, both known for other talents. Churchill, of course, is gifted as orator and writer; Smuts has had an uninterrupted career of success as a military leader and as a philosopher.

The political philosopher would find much to fascinate him in the personality of Smuts; for the African statesman is singularly lacking in the usual political virtues of affability, toleration, and patience. He has made his greatest successes by steering the ship of state behind the captaincy of some more conventional figure. His political weapons have been foresight, intellectual power, masterful will, self confidence, genius at compromise [his enemies call him "slippery Jannie"], amazing health and vigor, and an unshaken faith in the destiny of the empire, which was a heritage from Cecil Rhodes that effaced his Boer prejudices.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

TO CELEBRATE the centennial of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," this heretical column will rise to remark that the cream of his testimony to the Yuletide is found elsewhere: in passages in his novels, especially in the Dingley Dell chapter of "Pickwick Papers," and also in two essays which have faded out of memory in this non-Dickensian generation. The latter are "A Christmas Tree," first printed in Household Words in 1850, and "What Christmas Is as We Grow Older," first printed in All the Year Round in 1851.

The Christmas book that we most highly prize is an admirable reprint of these two essays, issued in 1927, by Rimington & Hooper, who were young men then making their debuts in the New York publishing business. Their later performances, if any, are unknown to us, but they made a pretty start. The item is rare, for only 250 numbered copies were printed. The book carried an introduction by William Lyon Phelps, and prefaces to the essays by Jesse Lee Bennett and the writer, who now cherishes copy No. 39.

"What Christmas Is as We Grow Older" is pertinent to the mood of the contemporary season. We will explain why by quoting from the preface, to which we hold prior rights:

"His message now deals with Christmas as a season for reconciliation with bereavements, and he evokes the Christmas spirit as a philosopher preaching the consolation of immortality. This year he burns his Yule log without merriment, and in its serene, spiritual glow he conjures up dear, departed faces, calling them back to the fireside to partake once more of the sacrament of family love.

"In the preceding spring his father had died. 'Prim Victorian voices had spoken of a lack of filial respect when the unlucky John Dickens became immortalized in his son's masterpiece under the guise of Wilkins Micawber, but nevertheless Dickens loved his father long and well. Family affection was a dominant note in his temperament, and John Dickens enjoyed a full paternal share of this tenderness. . . . Years later Dickens, referring to one of his own Micawberisms in a letter to John Forster, wrote: 'I find this looks like my poor father, whom I regard as a better man the longer I live.'

"Two weeks after his father's death, the Dark Angel again visited Dickens' home. His third daughter, Dora, named after the girl wife in 'David Copperfield,' died suddenly in infancy. She had been his Christmas child of 1850, but she soon slipped away to join the imaginary Dora. The news came to Dickens at a banquet for the General Theatrical fund, where he was the principal speaker, and was a severe shock.

"The Christmas message of 1851 does not refer directly to these sorrows. In one passage, however, it explicitly recalls a grief which seems to have colored most of the author's life. The wound was 14 years old when he wrote this paper, but its poignancy remained with him. . . 'There was a dear girl—almost a woman—never to be one—who made a mourning Christmas in a house of joy.'"

"This is clearly a reference to his wife's sister, Mary Hogarth, who lived with the Dickenses in the first year of their marriage and who, according to Forster's biography, 'had made herself the ideal of his life.' Upon her grave in Kensal Green he placed this epitaph: 'Young, beautiful, and good, God numbered her among His angels at the early age of 17.' This grief persisted in spite of the distractions of his career; strangely enough, he planned to be buried beside her."

Cecil B. Williams of the faculty of De Paul university has put the moods of the last two troubled years into 76 sonnets, which are now available in book form. His title for the collection is "In Time of War: Sonnets for America." The excellent typography of the Torch Press, Cedar Rapids, Ia., enhances the volume. Pearl Harbor, Wake Island, Corregidor, Bataan, Leningrad, Malta, and other war scenes have inspired Mr. Williams while their news was hot. The result is one of the most vivid books of poetry the year has offered. Many of these sonnets first appeared in the Line o' Type column of THE TRIBUNE.

2 Views of Society; Take Your Choice

"SNOOT IF YOU MUST," by Lucius Beebe. [Appleton-Century, $2.50.]

"OSCAR OF THE WALDORF," by Karl Schriftgiesser. [Dutton, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

If there are two men more representative of two widely divergent eras in New York's social history than Oscar Tschirky and Lucius Beebe, they have not come to light so far. It is singularly appropriate that these two should record almost simultaneously the carryings on that have been such an important factor in their lives.

Master Beebe delights in being known as a "connoisseur of the preposterous," the Beau Brummell of the bistros, the unreconstructed old reveler of his day. He looks upon the chrome and satin innards of cafe society's favorite saloons as his domain. He reports with condescending gusto to the country bumpkins—quite often inaccurately—what goes on behind the glitter of the Stork club and Morocco. He savors the rare viands of hoity-toity hash houses over the country and promptly goes to press with a sometimes amusing, sometimes indigestible stew of exotic verbiage about them. His book is typical of the man he seems to want to be—and of the group with which he travels. There are quite a few laughs in "Snoot If You Must," a bar full of mad characters, and a perhaps unconscious commentary on the sad state of one element of our moneyed class.

There are those who point with scorn at the Beebe bunch but with nostalgic pride at the famous of Oscar's day. Whether a binge at Morocco is any less aristocratic or inexcusably extravagant than a circus ball at the Waldorf is a matter of opinion. It is undeniably true, however, that between the two reports under consideration, Oscar's leaves by far the pleasanter taste in the reader's mouth.

Oscar opened the doors of the first Waldorf, and he still is Oscar of the Waldorf to thousands of patrons of the new hotel. He has been friend of a fabulous list of notables. He turned down the position of manager of the hotel because he wanted to remain just Oscar, and a thousand hearts were thankful. He is a living tradition, and his personal contribution to the fine art of living is his best monument.

The biography of Oscar is not too well written, but it is filled with anecdote, rich in names.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

SOME of them are dead now, some are married, and some—God help them!—are on the copy desk, but they will live for a long time, I hope, in Robert J. Casey's book, "Such Interesting People," which Bobbs-Merrill has published for your Christmas happiness. It is one of the best of all the many books by newspapermen about newspapermen, and should become a minor classic.

The old newspaper gang! I have known most of the reporters Bob Casey celebrates in his magnum opus, and I have relived some of the wildest, happiest days of my life reading his reckless accounts of their exploits. A fabulous crew—romantic, irreverent, intemperate, cynical, sentimental, loyal—collecting the things called news for the dear public to guzzle with its breakfast coffee. Do their counterparts exist today? I am told they do: newspapermen of the hour assure me that we of an earlier day were not unique, whatever we may have thought ourselves.

Readers a Little Dazed.

Reading Casey's hilarious memoirs will be a hair raising experience for readers not of the profession; they may emerge from his pages a little dazed, and wondering no end. But in spite of all the incredible Carls and Larrys, all the fantastic Joes and Milts, of these and similar reminiscences, a great deal of news that is indubitably true gets into the papers. It is an astonishing thought.

I have only one complaint to make about this book: it badly needs an index. It took an hour of furious reading and research before I found myself satisfactorily revealed among the "friends of Jesse James."

Return of the Pawnbroker.

The pawnbroker, a picturesque citizen, has been absent from literature—except perhaps in the whodunits—for nearly a quarter of a century, if this department's memory is to be trusted. Now, 24 years after James Branch Cabell's "Jurgen" comes Kenneth Fearing's "Afternoon of a Pawnbroker and Other Poems" [Harcourt].

I'm not sure who preceded Cabell—but wasn't it a moneylender who was murdered in "Crime and Punishment"? Before Dostoyevski there was probably Dickens. And before Dickens there was certainly a dramatist named Shakespeare—who gave us a character named Shylock. This may be a good subject for a doctoral thesis, so I will leave it at that before I take Mr. Fearing—a fine modern poet and an old friend of mine—too far out on a limb.

But what first struck me in reading his poem about the pawnbroker was the way its allegorical quality, as well as its central figure, made one think back to "Jurgen." It isn't possible, of course, for a moralist to think of pawnbrokers without musing on the mysteries of life—and then of religion—and Fearing's title-poem is as ironic a parable as Cabell's novel.

Some strange customers obviously came to Mr. Fearing's pawnbroker; there was that fellow Gabriel, who left only an old trumpet, and a mysterious stranger with a pointed beard and ears like arrows, who talked fast and went away leaving an apple with one bite out of it. On the books were such queer securities as Aladdin's Lamp, Pandora's Box, a carpet alleged to be magic, a Fountain of Youth in fair condition, and a vessel described as the Holy Grail.

All these were redeemed, by the way. The only thing never called for was an Invisible Man, and if he's yours you'd better do something about it, because the pawnbroker can't find him.

Banner Year for Sherlockians.

Sherlockians who look to this department for tidings of their hero are advised that the year 1944, coming up, will be a banner year for studies in the psychology and philosophy of Sherlockismus. At least three important volumes are tenatively scheduled for spring publication. Most eagerly anticipated perhaps is Christopher Morley's "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson" [Harcourt], a new edition of five of the best known Holmes stories, selected to support Mr. Morley's thesis that the inhabitants of the house at 221B were actual people. The tales will be copiously annotated, the annotations providing a running commentary on London at the century's end.

Rivaling the Morley opus in interest will be Edgar W. Smith's symposium, "Profile by Gaslight" [Simon & Schuster], which will collect in one set of covers recent "papers" of the Baker Street Irregulars and other relevant material. The third volume will be Ellery Queen's "Misadventures of Sherlock Holmes" [Little, Brown], an inspired anthology bringing together the best of the parodies and pastiches since 1887, the year that the great fathomer first became a book.

It is also announced that the Limited Editions club will publish some time during the year a definitive edition of the complete Sherlock saga, possibly in five volumes, with illustrations by Frederic Dorr Steele, a desideratum that has Sherlockians a bit feverish in anticipation. To your faintly delirious commentator has fallen the honor of writing the introduction to this distinguished publishing venture.

Watson's Medical Ability.

Already published in England, but not yet available in this country, except by importation, is Hesketh Pearson's biography, "Conan Doyle: His Life and Art." It is a fascinating book, but Holmesians will agree that one chapter is hardly enough about the detective and the doctor for whom Doyle acted as amanuensis. Perhaps this work, too, will appear in America in the remarkable year 1944. Incidentally, if you have ever wondered just how good a doctor Watson really was, this book will supply the answer: he was about as good as Conan Doyle and, conversely, Doyle was about as good as Watson.

It would be interesting to know, by the way—and Mr. Pearson doesn't say—whether Dr. Conan Doyle happened to be reading Robert Browning while he was describing the Baker street ménage. In a little known poem called "A Likeness," the poet gives an intimate description of a bachelor's apartment, and reports "a satin shoe used for a cigar case." Just possibly this was the original of the Persian slippers in which Holmes kept his tobacco.

Featuring Harold Peary and Billie Burke.
Presented at neighborhood theaters.

DIRECTION: Sufficient unto the story.

SETS, PHOTOGRAPHY and the LIKES: Okey.

STORY: The newly engaged Gildersleeve goes to New York with a group of druggists whose mission is to keep in business a certain house upon which they have been dependent for their produce. . . The firm's president [Miss Burke] falls in love with Gildersleeve and the druggists persuade him to play along with her in order to further their interests. . . Enter fiancee and various other bewildered persons, including that funny Leonid Kinsky, as a window washer whose fascinating foreign-ness proves what was needed to pry Billie loose from her hold on the great Gildersleeve. . . Hee haw. With, of course, manifold complications.

AUDIENCE APPEAL: The world is full of folks who like Gildersleeve.

See you tomorrow.

Favor Pays Off.

This Town Called Hollywood - - - - - By Philip Scheuer

HOLLYWOOD [Special].—Altho "Madame Curie" is lightened by moments of whimsical humor, it is essentially a serious drama. Greer Garson, who plays Maria Sklodowska, later the wife of Pierre Curie, gave more to the part than she has to any yet—reading, thinking, living Marie Curie for months on end—but she wishes her studio, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, would let her be gay for a change.

"The instant they find a story about an intelligent, suffering woman," she says, "they come straight to me." And usually—as in "Blossoms in the Dust," "Mrs. Miniver," and now "Curie"—she has Walter Pidgeon plodding faithfully at her side thruout.

"I would like to do one light modern character most of all," she added. "I really envy Ginger Rogers, such assignments as 'Tom, Dick, and Harry' and 'Lady in the Dark.' Or, going back further, what a joy it would be to play in some delightful costume piece like 'Carnival in Flanders.'

"It's a pity Hollywood never approaches the past in the spirit of Boccaccio or of Henry VIII. Both writers and actors have a tendency to get 'heavy' in treating of anything that happened before the 'gay '90s.' One exception, of course, was 'Pride and Prejudice'—and how I loved doing it!"

Miss Garson laughed that rich, throaty laugh of hers at a new thought. "I wonder," she said, "if Walt Disney could find a place for me in one of his pictures! I adore fantasy. I certainly believe we should have light hearted movies while the war lasts."

I gathered she would even return to the stage if a light hearted play were offered her. Greer Garson was a stage actress in England, and briefly, in Hollywood in a benefit series of Noel Coward one-actors—notably "Ways and Means." Moss Hart did, indeed, threaten to write a comedy for her when they met back east recently—"If," he added sardonically, "you can tear yourself away from your servants and swimming pools."

With very few servants and only one swimming pool [small] Miss Garson thought she could. "It would be nice to do a play and a picture of it afterward," she said.

All this academic discussion took place on a recent Sunday afternoon, when I horned in on the delayed honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ney. We had met at the Radio theater on Vine street, where Greer was giving a dress rehearsal of "Mrs. Miniver" for service men. Ney, altho present, didn't take his original part of the older Miniver son. I suppose both the Neys would like to help the public forget that Miss Garson was cast by what she calls "an unfortunate accident" as his mother in the film, and besides, Ney is an ensign now.

To be sure they are indebted for "Mrs. Miniver" for bringing them together. Married July 24 last and separated July 26 when Ney received a call to duty, they were reunited a month ago in Boston, where Miss Garson had wound up a bond selling tour to Canada, and have been together much of the time since. Ney's ship was unexpectedly decommissioned there, and he began a frantic search of the city's hotels for his bride.

"I finally found her," he said, chuckling a bit grimly, "but only after some kindly secretary had informed me that 'Miss Garson is traveling incognito—as Mrs. Richard Ney!'"

"Never mind, dear," his wife consoled him. "Some day Richard Ney will be the star and I will be just Mrs. Ney."

Both the Neys were married before. Unlike his Irish born wife, Ney is an American; his name is pronounced "Nay"—like the Marshal's, as Greer explained. They were attracted by a mutual interest in, among other things, poetry, the theater, dancing and writing, and he wooed her with Ravel. For the benefit of future aspiring Lotharios, the Ravel was the long sounding but fragile and lovely "introduction and allegro for harp, flute, clarinet, and strings."

One reason Miss Garson seeks the comparative relaxation of comedy is "the tension and hysteria, the stop—go—stop—go concentration necessary to acting in emotional scenes before the camera." "She would come home night after night from 'Curie' utterly fatigued," Richard interposed feelingly. Too, she has worked with unflagging will and determination in the war effort, traveling for whole interims between pictures.

Now up for Louis Bromfield's "Mrs. Parkington," Miss Garson is endeavoring to make the studio reconsider. She dreads playing another old lady whose life is viewed in retrospect. "The Valley of Decision" which is about a forthright servant girl from the wrong side of the Pittsburgh tracks, is much more to her liking.

Meanwhile, there is this "Madame Curie" from whose selfless devotion she hopes audiences will take inspiration. Less philanthropically inclined, her studio will be satisfied if she fetches home a fistful of money and maybe an Academy award or two.

Sound Films May Revolutionize Classroom Work

Notes of Music

Norman Klekamp. [Nelidoff Photo.]

Norman Klekamp, a Chicago born and trained pianist, now on the faculty of the Shiell School of Social Studies, will give his first Chicago recital at the Civic theater this afternoon at 3:30. His program lists Franck's "Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue," Beethoven's Sonata in A major, opus 101, pieces by Villa-Lobos, De Falla, Ravel, and Prokofieff, and a group of Chopin: the F minor Fantasie, three preludes, and the A flat Polonaise.

• • •

The original Don Cossack chorus and dancers, directed by Serge Jaroff, will give their second and last concert of the season at the Civic Opera house this afternoon at 3:30. The program will be the customary selection of Russian ecclesiastical music, arrangements of Russian folk songs, songs of New Russia, and the conductor's arrangement of three Cossack songs.

• • •

Giovanni Polifronio will give his annual violin recital in Kimball hall this afternoon at 3:30, playing Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," Saint-Saëns' "Rondo Capriccioso," Mozart's Fifth Concerto, and a group of shorter compositions.

• • •

A new nonprofessional orchestra called the Chicago Symphonique orchestra will make its debut at Curtis hall, tonight at 8:15. The orchestra will be heard in Beethoven's "Egmont" overture and First symphony, and Heniot Levy, Chicago pianist, will play Chopin's Concerto in F minor. Sarah Louise Bates is the conductor.

• • •

The Central Y. M. C. A. college of music will present a concert by the school symphony orchestra under the direction of Nicolai Malko, at Kimball hall on Wednesday at 8:15. The program lists the Polonaise for Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Christmas Night," Handel's Concerto Grosso in B minor, the first movement of Beethoven's C minor piano concerto, played by Marion Hall, Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf" with Frank Burke as narrator, and Strauss' "Tales from the Vienna Woods."

Erpi Company Purchased by U. of Chicago

By the Rev. John Thomas.

William Benton, chairman of the board of Encyclopaedia Britannica and vice president of the University of Chicago, has made public the prediction that the use of sound motion pictures in the classroom may bring about as great a revolution in educational methods as the invention of printing. He quoted Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth university, on this prediction.

Mr. Benton has just returned from New York where he completed details of the purchase by the Britannica company of Erpi Classroom Films, Inc., from Western Electric company. The final step in the acquisition, Mr. Benton said, was the formation by Britannica of Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, Inc., to act as owner of Erpi.

Purchase of Erpi by Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc., will bring the University of Chicago into close coöperation with the production of educational films, for Britannica was given to the university in January by its owner, Sears Roebuck and company, Mr. Benton explained.

Association of the University of Chicago with Erpi may result not only in expansion of production of films for classroom use, but also expansion in other types of educational films used outside the classroom, Mr. Benton intimated. The university's relationship to the enterprise will be confined to making its educational knowledge and staff available to the Erpi organization.

"There will be a tremendous expansion in the use of educational films in the post-war period, when war time restrictions on production of films and projectors for civilian use are removed," Mr. Benton said.

"The vast scale on which the army and navy have used sound films for educating their forces is an indication of what is to come. The navy bureau of aeronautics alone is said to have produced 1,400 films, and such a government agency as the coördinator of inter-American affairs has produced 200 films.

"The use of sound films in a mass educational effort involving millions of people has proved the effectiveness of films. This wide scale use, incidentally, has trained thousands in production and use of such films. The services and government agencies also have greatly increased the number of projectors in use for war purposes. After the war, the logical place for these projectors will be in the nation's schools, many of which have been unable to use films due to lack of equipment.

"There is every evidence that the post-war period will see the realization of the dream for educational use of motion pictures that many educators and the pioneers in the educational motion picture field have had for 30 years."

10 WRITERS LAY BARE NAZI GODLESSNESS

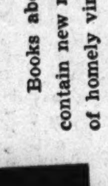
How Germans Destroy All Human Good

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS," 10 short novels by Thomas Mann, Rebecca West, Franz Werfel, John Erskine, Bruno Frank, Jules Romains, André Maurois, Sigrid Undset, Hendrik Willem van Loon, and Louis Bromfield; edited by Armin L. Robinson, with a preface by Herman Rauschning. [Simon & Schuster, $3.50.]

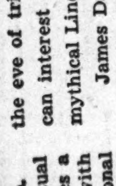
Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

Appearing simultaneously in English, Swedish, French, Spanish, Portuguese, and German is one of the most literary-star-studded books of our day. Leading writers of Germany in exile vie with French, Norwegian, English, and Dutch writers whose people have felt the immediate cruel contact with Germany's madness, and with Americans in portraying that madness. Sometimes with direct description of the German way of thought and action, sometimes by indirection, but none the less poignantly, nine great writers have told nine tales of Nazi godlessness, after the greatest of anti-Nazi German novelists has recounted the story of the 10 commandments.

First the reader must know the fundamental concept of this unusual book. Herman Rauschning quotes a conversation which he had with Hitler "shortly after the National Socialists' rise to power." The conversation ended with the words: "Against the so-called 10 commandments, against them we are fighting." Taking one of the 10 commandments as a text, 10 distinguished novelists were each asked to write a short story showing how nazism had fulfilled that declaration.

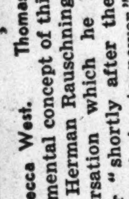


Rebecca West.



Thomas Mann.

Franz Werfel.



John Erskine.

As is inevitable in creative work done to order, the result was uneven, both artistically and emotionally. Some of the stories are written at white heat, some in philosophic calm. Some are emotionally more memorable than they are artistically. Some are masterpieces, some are not. But all have one flaming quality. They picture Germans in opposition to our standards of decency, of civilization, of Christianity. In some cases that opposition is active, conscious, violent. In others almost passive and unconscious, but always it is fundamental.

This book doesn't make pleasant reading, but it makes good reading, reading that is good for our souls, especially now at a time it is most vital that we understand nazism.

Illustrated Lincoln Book Done in Poetic Fashion

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN," by James Daugherty; illustrated by the author. [Viking Press, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Avery Craven.

Books about Abraham Lincoln are always welcome. They need not contain new material or present a new point of view. They need only tell of homely virtues, of the rise from obscurity to fame, of tragic death on the eve of triumph. These are the things which never fail to stir American interest and to strengthen the hold which the real Lincoln and the mythical Lincoln have on American minds.

James Daugherty's book contains nothing new, but much that is old. Its value lies in the method of presentation. A series of brief, almost poetic sketches of the important episodes in Lincoln's life are combined with a group of two color lithograph illustrations. They vary in quality. Some word pictures are exceedingly well done and most of the illustrations are both strong and beautiful. Others are weak and trivial.

But together they retell the story of the simple frontier lad who reached the highest office in the land because he was honest, because his sense of humor was high, and because he could forget himself in the sorrows of a people at civil war. They retell it, however, with emphasis on the heroic. Even where the facts are correct, the episode method tends to emphasize the unusual, the dramatic. The total effect is another contribution to that Olympian figure, the mythical Abraham Lincoln.

The story begins "when Daniel Boone, all shaggy and lean, came out of the wilderness" to report the riches of the lands beyond the Cumberland mountains. It follows the Lincoln family in its wanderings to Kentucky, to Indiana, to Illinois. Then follows the familiar story of young Lincoln as store keeper, as champion story teller and wrestler, as rising lawyer and politician. The impression always given is that of inherent greatness pushing forward against the greatest of odds. Those who opposed, or those who are needed for background, are deftly darkened in order to heighten the lights on the hero. Stephen A. Douglas again takes up the rôle of villain and inferior; slavery becomes all that the most ardent abolitionist imagined it to be; McClellan appears to be little more than a stuffed shirt general always on parade.

Now this is fine if the reader understands that it is intended as poetry and not as sober history. A nation needs its heroes and a certain amount of hero worship has its value. There is some doubt, however, whether a hero gains by moving among pigmies instead of strong men like himself. Both we as a people and Lincoln as a hero might profit by a better balanced picture of those who chanced to occupy the same stage with the leading man.

The Viking Press has done an excellent job of book making. It would not be wrong to call this "a beautiful book." It should attract attention, at this season, from more than the usual group who support the steady stream of books about the most interesting and most picturesque figure that America has yet produced.

Poet of Dreamers: His Vagabond Song

"PILOT BAILS OUT," by Don Blanding. [Dodd, Mead, $1.50.]

The author of "Vagabond's House" has done it again. Ever the romanticist, Blanding turns his facile word magic on the subject of the war, and gives singing expression to the thoughts and the feelings of those whom it affects so deeply.

City to See Rare Exhibits in Book Celebration This Week

By Frederic Babcock.

A REMARKABLE cultural display—one that should attract the attention of persons of all races and religions—will get under way today in Chicago. . . . It is to include great Jewish books, from biblical times to the present; rabbinic literature, rare manuscripts, and ceremonial objects. . . . The occasion is the observance of Jewish Book week, a celebration designed to call attention to all works pertaining to all phases of Jewish life, ethics, and religion, regardless of whether those works were written by Jews or Gentiles.

The observance will be city-wide, with the exhibits divided among such places as the Chicago Public library and its branches, the Jewish People's institute, the University of Chicago, the Garrett Bible institute, the Newberry library, the College of Jewish Studies, and Anshe Emet temple. . . . Such institutions as the Newberry library have made an all-out effort to give the celebration the prominence it deserves. . . . Among its forty or fifty rarities is a Bible in five languages. . . . The universities and libraries have coöperated in a measure heartening in these days of racial intolerance in other parts of the world.

It will be noted that a number of non-Jewish authors are thus listed.

Louis Zara, the distinguished author whose works include "This Land Is Ours" and "Give Us This Day," is chairman of the committee sponsoring the observance. . . . That committee is officially known as the Chicago Area chapter of the Jewish Book Council of America. . . . Mrs. M. L. Purvin is vice chairman; Mrs. A. B. Counselbaum, secretary; H. L. Meites, treasurer, and Charles Ansell, assistant secretary. . . . Both Jews and gentiles make up the membership. . . . Among them are: David Appel, Fritz Bamberger, Emanuel Berlatsky, Mrs. Max Biesenthal, H. Birnbaum, Miss Mildred Bruder, Mrs. Kathryn Collins, Max Dolnick, Miss Pearl L. Field, Mrs. Evelyn Hattis Fox, Miss Fanchon I. Henderson, Bernard Horwich, Leo Honor, Nathan D. Kaplan, Mordecai Katz, Miss Lida F. Karcher, A. B. Korman, A. Kroch, Mrs. Milton J. Krensky, Nathan R. • • •

As a gentile, far too ignorant of the importance of Jewish literature in our lives, it has been my privilege to become a member of the committee and take part in its deliberations. . . . In that way, I trust, I have learned a lot of things I should have known all the time. . . . I hope to learn much more this week. . . . And I have an idea that thousands of other Chicagoans are going to do likewise.

City's Child Carolers Will Carry On as Usual This Year

By Irene Steyskal.

By contrast with the shining seraphs, who, as the world's loveliest story goes, sang a hymn of peace above the Judean hills one star bright night long ago, the Civic Music association's Christmas bands of ear muffed and bunny mitted cherubs may be unmystically earthy. The association's carolers, with their pigtails and tumbled ringlets, and in their plaid mackinaws, snow suits, and sloppy joe sweaters, are angels seen, sometimes, with dirty faces.

But whatever the visual disparity, there is no denying the seraphic quality of the sweet harmonies Chicago youngsters from the parks and playgrounds in the city's least privileged sections can produce. With the air full of the glad tidings of the holiday season, one of the most cheerful bits of news is brought by a Civic Music bulletin. There is to be no war interruption in the Christmas sings of the children's choruses.

Beginning this week, groups of the youngsters will give a series of programs that will continue to Christmas eve. Marx E. Oberndorfer, who for 10 years has served as musical director of the association, himself will direct the chorus of 80 boys and girls from the Chicago Nursery and Half Orphanage that will sing next Sunday night for the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall, and Mrs. Russell Hendrickson, who has taught the children, will play for them.

On Christmas eve the children from Grand Crossing park will sing at the service men's center at 176 West Washington street, and the Palmer park carolers will fill the center which was the old Auditorium theater with their music.

At the noon hour Saturday one group will give a program at Lyon and Healy's music store, and later will sing at the Piccadilly tea room in the Fine Arts building, where they will be feted at a holiday luncheon.

The Chicago College club will entertain, and will be entertained, by another group of the boys and girls Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 21. Other concerts will be given at the Church Home for the Aged, the Juvenile Detention home, the Webster hotel, and the Little Traveler tearoom at Geneva.

For more than 30 years the Civic Music association has been carrying on its work for Chicago children who have no other opportunity for learning about music or participating in musical events. Six instructors hold weekly classes in nine parks and homes after school hours, and the association does not calculate the benefits entirely in musical terms. The Americanizing value is emphasized by Mr. Oberndorfer. "The effect on democratic understanding is amazing," he says. "We try to include music of the nations these children represent. And the Americanizing that is done thru song is unbounded. The children go home singing the favorite songs of their parents' homeland—but in English. Many a foreign born father or mother has been stimulated to learn English from this beginning."

Tho carrying "civic" in its title, the association receives no civic revenues. Its work is made possible thru the generosity of a number of public spirited citizens. General contributions to a Christmas dollar fund make possible the holiday programs.

For many years Frederick Stock, Chicago children's friend in music, served as a director of the association. Henry B. Vanzwoll is the president. Other distinguished citizens on the official committee are G. T. Hellmuth, Mrs. Frederick W. Upham, Miss Priscilla Fetcher, and Miss Werra Schuette.

DEBUTANTE LOOKS FORWARD TO BUSY HOLIDAY SEASON

[Malcolm Balfour Photo.]

Miss Betty Peabody, a debutante of the season, is looking forward to a busy Christmas holiday season, altho there will not be the usual number of dancing parties of past years, due to the shortage of young men. There will be many small luncheons, teas, and dinners to make up for the dances, however. Miss Peabody is the younger daughter of Lt. and Mrs. Howard B. Peabody of Lake Forest, who now are living in Philadelphia, where Lt. Peabody is stationed with the navy. Miss Peabody was introduced to Chicago society earlier this year, but will probably spend the holidays in Philadelphia, as the Peabodys' Lake Forest house has been leased until April.

U. S. Minister to Egypt Has Odd Hobby, He Collects Houses

By Cousin Eve.

Alexander Kirk, American minister to Egypt, has an amiable and unique fad. He is a collector, which is not unusual, but he collects houses, which is. The last time we saw him, which was in Rome some years ago, he admitted owning 18 domiciles, having lately sold No. 19 at Cuernavaca, Mexico. We don't know how many houses he owns today. These Kirk houses are scattered over the world, wherever the diplomat's career has taken him. He had a lovely summer temple in the western hills 30 miles from Peking and a 14th century castello on the Tyrrhenian sea not far from Rome, both of which we have seen with our own eyes.

Mr. Kirk is from Chicago, which accounts partly for our interest in his activities, and we hear occasionally from him. Our last news was that he is enjoying his stay in Cairo and has acquired four houses in and out of the Egyptian capital. It was in one of these, "The Green Villa", near the Gizeh pyramid, that President Roosevelt was a sojourner during his recent trip to the near east, and doubtless he found it a bit of perfection, as all the Kirk villas are. Mr. Kirk is extremely tall, lean, and good looking. A great individualist, he nevertheless is absorbed in the exigencies of a diplomatic career, which, as everybody knows, is more or less cut and dried. The American minister, they say, has made a success of his mission in Cairo and is very popular. As councelor in Rome he flourished about with the high flying Roman aristocracy, and acquired his own private night club or boite de nuit. This was a sort of two room wing of the Grand hotel. One room was gold with black furniture and decor. The other was black walled, with decorations of yellow and gold. Evelyn Walsh McLean is the present owner of the huge Kirk house in Washington.

Apropos of Rome, we hear that Adlai Stevenson, special assistant to the navy department, has given up his political ambitions at home in favor of a job in Italy. Adlai is the grandson of a former Vice President of the United States, Adlai S. Stevenson of Bloomington, Ill., and politics run in his blood. He is by profession a lawyer, in politics a New Dealer, and married to a most charming wife, formerly Ellen Borden, elder daughter of Mrs. John A. Carpenter.

Adlai, they say, will be active in Italy instead of running for the United States senate. There was a thought, too, of grooming the lad for governor of Illinois. Senator and governor are nice jobs if one can land them.

News of another branch of the Stevenson family comes from England. Mildred Bromwell, Lady Bailey, Mr. Stevenson's first cousin, continues in London since the death last winter of her husband, Adm. Sir Sidney Bailey. She has a boy in school and her only daughter, Patricia, came out last March. So Lady Bailey keeps a small flat in London and does whatever war work she is most needed for—she took courses in Washington last year in everything from cooking, nursing, and tire mending to plumbing.

Milly's most recent news is that her jewels have been stolen—she had lovely ones—and also her one fur coat. And in the bitter damp of a London winter!

Bowman Lingle had so many acceptances to his party for the American Friends of China on Wednesday that he couldn't have it in his own pent house on top of the Ambassador. It has a charming terrace and is one of the most attractive and sightly places in Chicago.

The party was held, instead, on a lower floor,

Fresh from the Hills . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . Uncle Bert Goes Fishing

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

UNCLE BERT came slowly thru the lane gate and slumped down on the bench in the yard.

"Git me a drink o' water afore I choke!" he commanded.

The Jedge jumped to obey the request. I contented myself with scolding.

"You shouldn't walk all the way from the Forks in this hot weather. Why didn't you stay down at the creek until the cool of the evening? Aunt Blanche was by and said you'd be fishing all day."

Uncle Bert hitched up his suspenders, which had outlined themselves in perspiration on his blue denim shirt. He sat without speaking until the Jedge brought him a quart cupful of water. He drank long and deeply. Then wiping his mouth on his shirt sleeve, he leaned back on the white bench and spoke contemptuously.

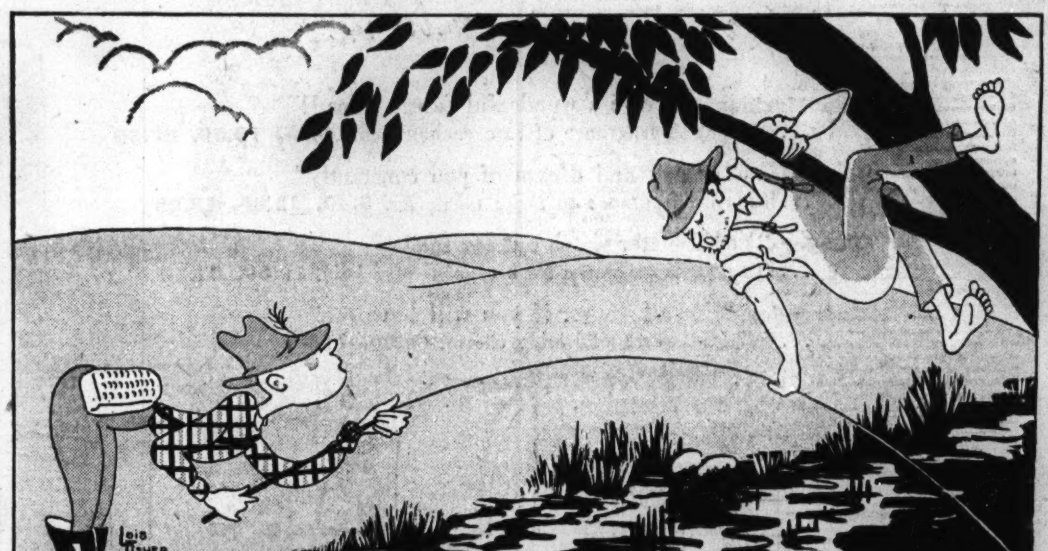
"Danged city dude!"

"Why, Uncle Bert!" I chided. "Are you talking about your new neighbor!'

"I shore am!" he said, taking a twist of tobacco from one overall pocket and his knife from another. Holding the tobacco carefully, he opened the knife and cut off a large chunk. He put the chunk in his mouth, closed the knife, and returned the knife and tobacco to separate pockets before he spoke again

"A-makin' me think he was jis' a-takin' me along f'r company!"

"Well, wasn't he?"



"I went down the bank and clim' out on the tree and turned the line loose."

"Not the way I see it! Danged stuck-up galoot! I was jis' hitchin' up that new mule to plow the weeds out'n that patch a' taters that I got down in the holler, when low and beholdst this big car comes a-careenin' into the barnyard. I knowed it was that new neighbor! And shore 'nuff, there he was all triggered-up in fancy clothes with a lot o' pockets and a basket a hangin' onto one shoulder. I jis' stood there and looked at him, a-hopin' he wouldn't scare my mule . . . she's skittish like. 'N' he said to come 'n' go fishin'."

"And you refused, because you had to plow those potatoes!"

"Well, I did say somethin' about 'em, but he said it wa'r't no fun to fish alone! He wanted me to come along f'r company! Dang pup, that's what he said! So I figgered them taters could wait another day, with them fish down there to the purlin' brook jis' a-itchin' to get onto a hook! I told him I'd have Mom fix me a bite to eat while I got my fishin' tackle. But he said he had enough lunch f'r a bunch o' fellers like us. 'A half dozen chaps,' he said." Uncle Bert spat vigorously at the whitewashed trunk of the sycamore.

"I p'inted to that little bitty basket on his hips, and told him they ain't no basket that little can hold enough vittles f'r me 'n' anybody else, lessen they's dang near quit eatin'! 'N' he jis' laughed and said that basket was f'r the fish he was a-goin' to ketch. Said he had a market basket full of grub in the back end o' the car.

"Well, that was more like it. So I went up behind the barn and got my fishin' pole and I had that new fish line that I got in town last Saturday in my pocket. Then I hollered to the kids to tell Mom I'd gone a-fishin', and I clim' into that big car, and we wuz off like a frog a-barkin'.

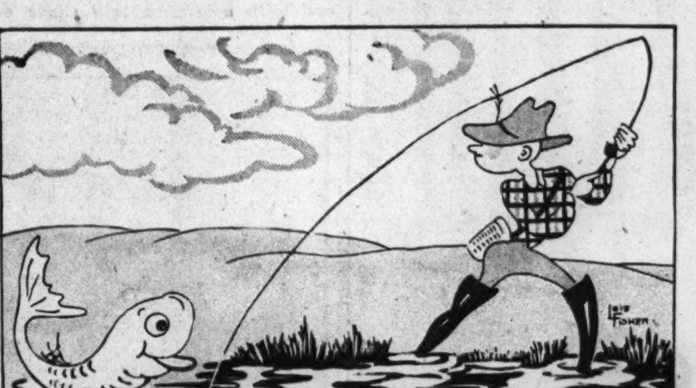
"Well, when we got down to the crick, I got out and begun fixin' my fish line, and tyin' on that big cork that's my lucky bobber. He began stringin' up a little bitty rod all bright and shiny, with a big long line, and one o' them thingumajig that you wind up the line on."

"A reel!" said the Jedge.

"And he pulled on big rubber boots that come clean up to his middle. And 'fore I knowed it, there he went, a-wadin' out into the crick!

"'Hey, yuh derned fool,' I said,



". . . laugh at his fancy pants 'til they ain't got 'nuff strength to bite at a hook."

says I, 'yuh'll scare all them fish to hell and gone!' I told him."

"'O, I'm going to cast'," says he to me.

"'Cast, hell,' I says to him.

"But there he went down the stream, a-castin' this way and that way, and a-reelin' in the line. Then fust thing y'know, he'd snagged it over on a log. He hollers, 'O, Bert, climb out on that tree, will yuh, and turn my line loose.'

"Thinks I, that's a hell of a note. Whyn't he turn his own line loose. But I laid down my fishpole and I went down the bank and clim' out on the tree and turned the line loose. Then he went on down the crick a ways but when I got back to my line the bait had been et offen my hook. Makes me madder'n the dickens to have that happen. I fixed it up again, and I was jis' a-gettin' a nibble when there he was, a-hollerin' at me again.

"That time he wanted me to get some ceegarets he'd left in his dang car. Then in another minute he wanted me to get him another one of them little bobbin' feathers out'n his bait box. An' no sooner do I git me set down than he wants me to get his sun glasses out o' the car. That time I jis' blowed up.

"'Git y'r own sunglasses,' says I to him. 'Effen yuh cain't go fishin' without takin' up a feller's whole time a-fetchin', 'n' a-carryin' f'r you, yuh'd orta bring along a danged flunkey!' 'N' with that, I jis' picked up my pole and wound up my line around it and took out!"

"Poor Uncle Bert!" I said soothingly. "All that trouble and no fish!"

"Hell," he said, bridling. "I got fish! Shore did. I jis' parked 'em longside o' my pole down yander at y'r lane gate."

"Why, where did you get fish?"

"O, I jis' moseyed down the crick to that big hole nobody knows 'bout, cept me 'n Johnny Tamsett. I dug some worms out'n the bank, f'r bait, 'n' throwed in my line a few times! Pulled out a mess o' black bass that'd make that city feller's mouth water, effen he'd see 'em."

He began the knife-tobacco-pocket routine.

"Reckon that dude's still a-trampin' up an' down the crick! But let him tramp till he wears out them fancy boots o' his, him and his castin'! He won't ketch nothin'! Way I figure it, fish in these cricks is too smart f'r dudes like him. Them big old wise 'uns jis' lay up 'longside a log and laugh at his fancy pants 'til they ain't got 'nuff strength to bite at a hook!

"Well, got t' be a-goin'! An' say, Jedge, effen you're a-goin' down to the purlin' brook tomorrow, come by and git me. Them taters is took by the weeds nohow!"

U. S. Minister to Egypt Has Unique Hobby

in the Polo room and prefaced by a superb and lavish tea in the lounge. Such a buffet, piled high with sandwishes, cakes, and hot refreshments! At one end where towered two samovars, one for tea, the other for coffee, Mrs. Paul Welling and Mrs. Silas Strawn officiated, smilingly, side by each.

The speaker of the day, Agnes Smedley, war correspondent and author, came dashing in and, taking one look at the handsome buffet, remarked that she hadn't seen so much food in all China. Miss Smedley was most picturesquely arrayed in a sort of Russian tunic, black cloth frogged in yellow, Cossack style. The black cap covering her hair was of military model, too.

Miss Frances Whedon, president of the American Friends of China, introduced Miss Smedley with a few words as to her background. She is from Missouri, was self-educated, even to taking a college decree, and has spent the last 15 years in Russia, India, and China.

In the past two years Miss Smedley has been over all China as a war correspondent, following the various armies to which she was attached, afoot. Her talk was the simplest form of narrative, given in the softest and most feminine voice. With all her warlike Cossack dress, her nearness to war and wholesale destruction, she still retains her womanliness. We thought at first she was the weariest, most exhausted woman we had ever seen. But presently she smiled brightly, showing beautiful teeth. She was telling of a little Chinese guerrilla boy of 10 who had joined the army. He was an orphan and had the hope of learning to read and write from the soldiers. Miss Smedley wanted to adopt the little boy and send him to a boarding school in western China. But the child refused. He said: "We men must stay and fight on and win."

The speaker made another picture. This time it was about a Chinese general who was a great philosopher, and whom she interviewed at various times. One day she questioned him for hours. Later in the afternoon he questioned her long and closely about contradictions that he had noted in occidental philosophy. Soon afterward there was a violent Japanese assault on this general's division and he and all his command were annihilated.

Miss Smedley walked 30 miles daily, very seldom being able to hitchhike. A bed she described as consisting of two boards laid across two sawhorses with only an army blanket for covering is not the ideal couch, we would say.

By and large it was the most moving speech we have ever heard about the inside of China.

Among Mr. Lingle's guests were many men who came with their wives: William and Mrs. Greenlee, Lewis and Mrs. Taylor, Paul and Harriet Welling, Mrs. William J. Calhoun, Mrs. Robert Gregory, Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., Mrs. A. H. Patterson, Miss Gwethalyn Jones, Mrs. Howard Fenton, Mrs. Donald McPherson, Mrs. Edward Hasler, Mrs. W. B. Hale, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Col. and Mrs. George T. Langhorne, Mrs. E. C. Waller, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. William Hibbard, William Darrow, Mr. and Mrs. Josepn Valentine, and Mrs. George Thorne.

Mrs. Richard Crane was just back from the wedding festivities of her only daughter, Florence Crane Robinson, to Prince Sergei Belosselsky, a white Russan resident of Manhattan. The prince and his bride have known each other for half a dozen years and the rites that united them were performed in an Orthodox Greek church before a large assembly of relatives and friends. The Russian Greek churches have no pews or seats, and the wedding party stood for 45 minutes in the bright light of scores of wax candles.

The bride, who is a lovely, slim blonde, wore a French blue velvet costume trimmed with sable, with a sable toque and muff, and her only attendant, Eleanor McCormick Collier of Boston, wore cyclamen silk with orchids. During part of the service George Voevodsky of Chicago, married to the bride's first cousin, Pussy Russell, held the marriage crown over the bride's head, an important part of the Russian ritual. Among the 12 ushers, mostly white Russians, were two exceptions, Cornelius Crane and Harlow N. Higinbotham, the bride's uncle, both of Chicago.. Col. George Philippoff, formerly of the Russian army, was Belosselsky's best man, and nobody seeing the calm demeanor of the bridegroom could have possibly imagined how near the wedding ceremony came to being unavoidably postponed. Prince Belosselsky was staying with Philippoff in an apartment house next door to the St. Regis. The colonel had the ring and all the other items, as the bridegroom is supposed to be too agitated to think about such matters, and the two men got into the elevator. The elevator was an automatic lift, the kind they have in Paris that are nearly always out of order, and took this time to go haywire and stop between floors. And there it stuck.

The two Russians shouted and pushed buttons, but nobody heard them. Minutes passed—the prince was distracted—he could imagine the beautiful waiting bride, the growing crowd. It was a terrible nightmare.

Finally something did happen—the elevator worked, but it went the wrong way and shot up to the roof. And there it hung!

But at long last somebody heard them, help arrived, the bridegroom and best man reached 121st street on time, and Prince and Princess Belosselsky were married and went to Canada on a wedding trip.

Last Sunday looked, outwardly, very much like any other Sunday, but it was really the extra special Sunday when Eugene Pike gave his "widow luncheon." He has such a luncheon every year in a most attractive apartment at 2430 Lake View avenue, and the widows look forward from one year to the next to his party. In the good old days Gene Pike used to get hold of fabulous quantities of Russian caviar for his guests, but nowadays ladies with caviar tastes are out of luck. The guests as I remember them were Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Albert B. Dick, Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine, Mrs. Harold A. Howard, Mrs. H. J. McBirney, Mrs. Warren Salisbury, Mrs. Morse Ely, Mrs. George McLaughlin, Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, and Mr. Pike's sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Pike. One man, 11 widows, 12 in all, make a bridge game after lunch as desired.

On Tuesday afternoon in the same tall apartment building facing the park was Mrs. Charles Goodspeed's charming small tea, a launching as it were. The Passavant board ladies met here on the eve of sending forth their annual plea for the free bed fund. There will be no Passavant benefit this season, only a clever pink sheet made in the likeness of a Passavant hospital bill. You are supposed to be that grateful at not being a Passavant patient that you sit down quick and make out a check instanter. Items and sums are carefully tabulated on the bill. Mrs. W. R. Kirk, president of the woman's board, was there in high feather; also Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Mrs. Don McPherson, who, with Bobsey Goodspeed, thought up the newest charity gadget. Mrs. Harold Fenton, Mrs. Orville Taylor, Mrs. Frank Wilhelm and a dozen others were also there. The tea table had white flowers, white candles, and two alluring lady pourers of tea and coffee, Mrs. Adolf Hartmann and Mrs. George Rasmussen. Both women wore chic and marvellously attractive hats. Mrs. Rasmussen's was a scrap of Chinese red felt anchored to a whole bush of goura feathers. Mrs. Hartmann's was more sedate, a black small hat and a twist of clipped black feathers, with a strange new shade of vivid blue.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd, of New York.

Chicago, December 10, 1895.

Dear Julia: I thought of you today when I attended a meeting held at Central Music Hall on the subject of child labor. You are so interested in social service that I am sure you would have been in the audience if you had been in Chicago. I probably should not have gone, if I hadn't seen the name of Florence Kelley listed as a speaker. She has been an associate of Jane Addams at Hull House and I felt she would be worth hearing.

Mrs. Florence Kelley.

Dr. Probst was the first speaker. I know nothing of him, but I liked what he said. He was very plain spoken and spared no feelings. I was horrified to learn from his address that little girls by the thousands are deprived of schooling and compelled to work early and late in factories and department stores. He was rather dramatic, but really brought vividly before us the frightful wrongs done to these little ones.

"Gaze on the little girl toilers of Chicago," he said. "Note the pallor of their cheeks, the weariness of their bodies." He told how, in our great department stores, these little cash girls are hurried hither and thither all day long. Such a thing as a seat, even if provided, is not to be thought of, from 8 in the morning till 6 at night. Their ceaseless toil sows the seeds of disease before they reach womanhood. Their minds are stunted, their morals injured. In close contact with rough adults, they learn the coarse ways of their "bosses." He called us to observe them as they pour out of the stores at 6 in the evening, hurrying along dark streets to the tenements they call home, temptation lurking at every corner. If they arrive home safely, what do they find? Often a cross and nervous mother, with little ones crying and fretting. "Life in the south as a slave was hardly worse than this," he added.

Mrs. Florence Kelley dealt not so much in dreadful examples as in how we might improve conditions. She is the first woman factory inspector in Illinois. It is a comparatively new thing to find children doing so much work, she said, but there are now 80,000 children working in factories in Illinois. We have compulsory education laws, but they are not worth the paper they are written on, according to Mrs. Kelley. She told of putting on the witness stand four children who were to testify to the conditions under which they were working. To her embarrassment, she found that not one of them, tho they were all born in Chicago, could understand the simplest sentence in English. They had reached the ages of 11, 12, and 13 years.

Then she horrified us by saying that out at the stock yards there are two or three hundred little butchers helping to kill sheep and swine, handling entrails and standing in blood from three to five inches deep all day long. I could hardly endure to hear this.

She referred to the glass factories of Streator and Alton, where hundreds of children are working all day. From their appearance, they are 10 or 11 years old, said Mrs. Kelley, and they are being ruined, body and soul.

Will feels as concerned as I do over these disclosures. He is going to try to get some of his lawyer friends to take up the matter. I hope to write a pleasanter letter next time. Lovingly yours,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Florence Kelley, honored for her work in behalf of better working conditions and particularly for her attempts to prevent the exploitation of children, was well known in Chicago where she practiced law, with social service as a sideline. Later, she devoted herself entirely to social work. While a resident of Hull House, she became an agent for the United States department of labor, inspecting the slums of great cities. For 30 years she was a resident of Henry Street settlement, New York. She died in 1932.

This reader adds: "I enjoyed 'Port of Chicago' at the Uptown Players. So would several hundred thousand Chicagoans who haven't yet seen it."

Palm Beach Season Off to an Early Start

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

A man wearing a canary yellow sports coat and bright blue trousers walked down Worth avenue the other day, and suddenly it dawned on all and sundry that the season had really started. The appearance on the landscape of this blithe spirit was as reassuring to the general populace as when the nightingale sang in Berkeley square.

A distinct undercurrent of seriousness is evident in Palm Beach. Practically every one is engaged in some branch of volunteer service. Mrs. Orville Elias Babcock Jr., in addition to serving in a canteen, is also a Gray Lady, serving at the Ream General hospital. Mrs. Ambrogio Cassinerio and Mrs. Paul Rowan also are on the brink of taking training here for the Gray Ladies corps.

Mrs. Frank Malcolm Gordon considers herself practically a Florida cracker, having been down since early October. Mr. Gordon returned to Chicago but will soon be back among our sheltering palms. With Mrs. Gordon for the season are her daughter, Mrs. Harmar Ker and infant son, and Mrs. Gordon's sister, Miss Cecille Carboy of Chicago. Lt. Ker is in foreign service.

Miss Joanna Fortune has taken an apartment at the Villas. Mr. and Mrs. Georgia Dobyne are also there. These parents-in-law of John Charles Thomas are beloved by all Palm Beach. Mr. and Mrs. O. Nelson Tevander are arriving at their home on Barton avenue Dec. 15. Nelson Tevander Jr. gets in a day later from Choate.

The Society of Four Arts will officially open with a preview and tea on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 8. Arthur Bradley-Campbell will be chairman of this exhibition of American water colors, which will include a group assembled by the Museum of Modern Art and other groups loaned by various galleries and individuals.

The Le Ray Berdeaus are leaving New York for Palm Beach today. The former undersecretary of state and Mrs. Welles have already arrived and are occupying the home on Via Bellaria which they acquired last summer. This will make them neighbors of the Berdeaus. Mr. Welles bought the home once owned by the late Arthur Somers Roche.

In days gone by, Mr. Roche spent a lot of time sitting around in the anteroom of an employment agency, talking with those who were applying for jobs as butlers, housemaids, and gardeners. It is said that he obtained some of the best plots for his stories in this manner. The novelist wore old clothes and pretended to be looking for a job. Today, however, there are so few applicants sitting around in employment office anterooms that he wouldn't have much luck.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hughitt are well known Chicagoans who have been down for several weeks.

The Sailfish club has opened its winter season and plans a succession of chowder suppers and backgammon tournaments. The Bath and Tennis club already is a popular rendezvous. Shops on Worth avenue are beginning to blossom and those two cocktail bars, Taboo and the Alibi, are doing a land office business. The resort is alive with WACs, WAVES, soldiers, sailors, and marines, and SPARs, who celebrated their first birthday recently with oratory, water sports, and dancing.

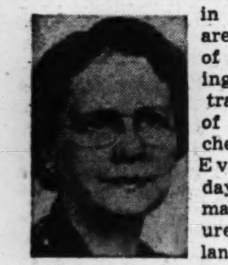
Catholic Club Plans Annual Yule Parties



Miss Mary Mutterer.

This week will see one of St. Nick's largest and most effective corps of helpers in the Chicago area, the Ladies of Isabella, starting out on its traditional round of Christmas cheer parties. Even in these days of high magnitude figures, the Isabellans' holiday giving looms on a grand scale. No less than 40 parties are planned, three to be given by the Supreme council, the others by individual or combinations of member councils. Orphanages and nurseries, homes for the crippled and destitute, asylums for the aged and infirm, settlement houses and shelters—apparently the women of the Catholic society have not overlooked one charitable institution in the archdiocese, and their itinerary includes a half-dozen public institutions as well.

But wasn't it virtually impossible this year to procure the thousands of gifts, the hundreds of pounds of candy, nuts, and fruit, the myriad packets of cigarets? "Maybe more difficult, and certainly much more expensive," Miss Mary Mutterer, energetic captain of the project, admits, "but every one brought her ingenuity into play, worked a little harder, planned a little more carefully. Merchants and shop keepers have helped and advised us, and many good friends have come to our aid."

The very spirit of the Christmas cheer parties precludes any haphazard gift buying. Each present is carefully selected for the individual for whom it is intended after the women have consulted with the nuns and priests at the various homes and the supervisors of the public institutions. For the most part, the women try to give the toys and luxuries which institutional budgeting cannot provide.

At one home, however, Father Edward J. Kelly's famous Our Lady of Mercy mission for working boys at 1140 West Jackson boulevard, the gifts, at the request of the boys themselves, will be an item of clothing. The lads, many of whom have come to Father Kelly from St. Mary's Training school at Des Plaines, approve the ladies' taste in shirts and ties, so shirts and ties it will be. The mission party is one of the three to be given by the Supreme council. It will be held Friday night, and Miss Anna M. Pontius, supreme grand lady, is taking an active part in the planning.

On the following night a Supreme council party will be given at the Cordi Marian settlement, and a third party, concluding the entire series, will be a day-long fete at the Oak Forest infirmary on Jan. 23.

Mrs. Fred W. Waterman.

Moved by the same intent, to assure a happy day for the less fortunate, members of the Protestant Woman's Protectorate, whose president is Mrs. Fred W. Waterman, will bring wrapped Christmas packages to a meeting at 11 o'clock tomorrow at 127 North Dearborn street. The gifts are to be distributed to the elderly women whom the protectorate has befriended. The executive board will have a preliminary conference at 10 o'clock.

Several other women's organizations are meeting this week for Christmas celebrations. Women of the Rotary Club of Chicago will gather at noon Wednesday in the Hotel Sherman for a luncheon and carol sing, and Miss Ruth Lyon, with Miss Mabel Rarick as her accompanist, will sing a solo group.

The Krausel trio will give a Christmas musical for the Chicago Woman's club Wednesday afternoon in Curtiss hall, after which a tea will be held in the club's 4th floor lounge. An ensemble of Chicago musicians, the trio isco mposed of Lois Behrle, violinist with the Women's Symphony orchestra; Alice Lawrence, cellist with both the Chicago and Women's symphonies, and Hattie Krause, pianist. Enrico Clausi, tenor, will be heard with the group as soloist.

Other meetings at the Chicago Woman's club this week include an 11 o'clock session Friday morning at which Dr. Arturo Fallico, appearing under auspices of Mrs. Albert E. Beath, philosophy division chairman of the education and philosophy department, will talk on "Post-war Horizons," and a national and international affairs committee meeting at 11 o'clock tomorrow, at which Mrs. Victor Mennecke will preside and Mrs. Henry Byron Newsen will give an "Evaluation of the Pan-American Idea." Thruout the week and until Dec. 21, members will bring wrapped Christmas gifts to the clubrooms for distribution at the service men's centers.

Tomorrow night the American Daughters of Sweden will gather in the auditorium at 122 South Michigan avenue for a Christmas play, "The Crib," a program of holiday music by Sweden Cecilia chorus and community singing of traditional carols. Mrs. George E. Q. Johnson, past president of the club, is directing the play. The chorus is conducted by Ida Linn Cooley. Miss Margaret Dahlstrom will have charge of the community singing. The meeting will be presided over by Miss Nellie Fredeen.

The Chicago Woman's Ideal club will hold its candlelight tea and Christmas program Thursday afternoon in the Blackstone hotel and on the following Saturday will give a Santa Claus party for boy and girl guests in the same hotel. At the Thursday program, Olive O'Neil will give her program from the Coward operetta, "Bitter Sweet." Mrs. Ernest W. Seip has charge of the children's party.

With Mrs. Rudolph Baumel presiding, members of the Lake City Woman's club will hold their annual Christmas luncheon at noon Wednesday in the Illinois Athletic club, 112 South Michigan avenue. Mrs. Sam McIntyre heads the social committee managing the party. A Christmas grab bag party is planned by the Half Century Civic club for 1:30 o'clock Wednesday in the Morrison hotel.

Sheil Classes Are to Hear Chaplain and Philosopher

Special interest is centered this week at the Sheil School of Social Studies upon two guest speakers, Lt. J. J. That story is amplified and subsequent experiences recorded in the new book. The clinic meets at 8 o'clock and is presided over by Rousseau Van Voorhies.

Before he came to the United States, Dr. Simon, author of many philosophical works, taught at the Catholic university of Lille and the Catholic institute of Paris. Women in War Work

The 1,200 members of the Navy Mothers' club are deep in arrangements for two parties to cheer navy men at Christmas time.

The Elmhurst unit will sponsor a party from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. next Sunday at headquarters, 335 North Michigan avenue, for navy men in Chicago. Refreshments which especially appeal to service men will be served.

Mrs. Henry Fecht and Mrs. Gordon Fox are co-chairmen of the club's annual Christmas party for ambulatory cases at the hospital at Great Lakes Naval Training station. The event will take place Dec. 21 from 1:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. in the large Red Cross recreation room at the station. Hors d'oeuvres, of which "the boys" are fond, will be the principal refreshment, and gifts will be given to each of the men around the large Christmas tree which will decorate the hall.

The staff of radio station WLS is giving a party Saturday to obtain funds with which the gifts for the Great Lakes party will be purchased.

About 20 navy mothers will be hostesses at the party. Three of them are Gold Star mothers of this war.

Race Meeting Really Begins Miami Season

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

Winter's tempo at the sister sunny cities of Miami and Miami Beach is fast increasing, with more holiday visitors and regular winter residents arriving every day, and when they cry "They're off!" at Tropical Park on Wednesday, the season really will have started. Over 700 thorobreds are poised for opening day, which bids to be particularly brilliant, due to the absence of racing here last winter.

The week will bring other sure signs of the season. The Surf club, gay again in civilian dress after a year in Uncle Sam's uniform, will give its first dinner-dance next Saturday. The club will be closed on Mondays to help solve the problem of staff. The popular Thursday night informal parties will be resumed Jan. 6.

Three golf courses already are open to the public, with the new city operated $100,000 Normandy Isle Golf club, which remained open all summer, reconditioned for winter play. The private Lagorce Golf and Country club and the exclusive Indian Creek club also are open for the season. Chicago's David J. Molloy, president of the Indian Creek, and Mrs. Molloy returned to their Pine Tree drive residence some time ago, after the summer in Chicago and Harbor Springs, Mich., and a fall visit in Washington with their daughter, Mrs. James D. Henry, whose husband, a major in the army air force, is stationed in England. A formal dinner last night at the Indian Creek was the first of a series. Tennis and the swimming pool are close competitors with golf at the club, and some special winter tournaments are being planned by the tennis committee. Sunday luncheons will continue thru the winter, as will the Wednesday night buffet dinners.

Tennis is a favorite at the Bath club, too, and tournaments have been arranged. George C. Gordon of Rochester, N. Y., continues as acting president of the club, no one yet having succeeded to the title of president, held so many years by Fred A. Poor of Chicago. Mr. Poor is expected in Miami Beach in January and will be welcomed by club members and other friends after his absence last season. The club will have its annual reunion New Year's day, celebrating with an eggnog party.

Special war activities will be continued at the three clubs—the Surf, Bath, and Indian Creek, as has been the custom the last two winters.

All restrictions on day time bathing have been lifted at Miami Beach, and already the vanguard of winter visitors are enjoying the surf along the city's eight miles of golden beaches. Enjoying the climate's benefits with civilians are the thousands of army air force personnel still stationed in the city.

Mrs. E. Battelle Offutt and her mother, Mrs. Albert C. Battelle, arrived in October to open their home in Collins avenue, after spending the summer in Chicago at the Ambassador. Mrs. Offutt, who was active as a nurse's aid at the County hospital [Chicago] four days a week, is devoting the same amount of time to the work at Miami Beach at St. Francis hospital, relaxing between "shifts" at the Bath club, just a stone's throw from the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gould Hutchins arrived recently and are getting settled in their home on De Lido Island. They were accompanied by their daughter, Helen, and arrived here in time to attend the [illegible] birthday party of Sandra Balfe, daughter of their daughter, Mrs. [illegible] Merrill Balfe, and Mr. Balfe.

Mrs. Stevenson Clark of Northbrook also was among early arrivals. She and her daughter, Pamela, are residing in their Collins avenue residence. Her younger son, Steven, enlisted in the marine corps on his 17th birthday and is now taking his boot training. Her son Harold A. Clark Jr. is a reserve captain with Pan-American Airways and makes frequent flights from Miami to various points in South America. Mrs. Clark is looking forward to a visit soon from Capt. George Montgomery, U. S. N., commanding officer of Glenview naval air base, Ill., and Mrs. Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleaveland Putnam not only arrived early for the winter, they spent the entire summer here at their home on Lagorce Island, with the exception of one week in New York. They gave a party for their daughter, Lucy Lynn, last Tuesday to celebrate her second birthday anniversary and recently gave a supper party at their home for a few intimate friends to celebrate their wedding anniversary.

Resort Frocks Foretell New Spring Styles

By Bettina Bedwell.

It used to be one of the minor irritations of a fashion reporting job to find suddenly, when you were knee deep in Christmas shopping, that summery southern styles had taken over in the shops.

So it's nice to repor that this December, when the same thing happens, it is a comfort to see these southern clothes with their promise of spring. They are so normal an event, and so much a tradition they make you feel good. Besides, more girls are heading south this year. More girls and women will visit camps. These southern styles are not earmarked solely for the play girls of the southern resorts; camp visitors will need them, too.

The styles definitely will influence the fashions that bloom in the north in spring. Consequently, we should know what they are and be prepared. I wrote recently about the bare-backed look of many of the play clothes. Buyers, here to take these fashions back to the whole nation, report that they are excited by them. The low-cut play dress, bathing suit, sports dress, and play suit will get around in the spring, they say.

Very important in sport suits ready to bloom in the south are those without collars to the jackets. Some are cardigan jacket suits, others have dress necklines, U-shaped, sweetheart, square, and such. They will show up sparkling blouses of striped, dotted, and other printed materials. For such suits it's going to be a pastel springtime. Most come in light pastel colors.

Another kind of suit that's as important is the one with the short, short jacket, which may be a boxy type, a bolero, or a waistcoat. The general effect of the suit is soft and not so severe or masculine, even when it is a sports suit.

The dress that is going to be a headliner in the southern style parade is the one that is soft and pretty. While such dresses are practical, they are softened by their drawstring necklines, capelets, ruffled fullness set into the skirts, and by loose panel backs to the waists. You'll find dresses with plaited skirts, too. They've found a way to keep inside L-85 regulations and still give you plaits. You also will find Mexican influences all over the dress map. You'll find jumper dresses better than ever, and lots of new apron and pinafore combinations.

Play suits which are composed of dress and shorts, jumper, waist and shorts, bras, shorts and skirt, or such combinations are much in the picture. There weren't enough of them to go around last summer, but this year there is the promise of a real bumper crop.

Business Club Women Plan Yule Parties

It's off with the serious forum and on with holiday merry making this week at meetings of professional and business women's clubs. Wednesday night the Women's Bar Association of Illinois, leaving behind all knotty legal problems and lengthy reports on its manifold war activities, will gather at 6:30 o'clock in the Chicago Bar association's rooms at 30 North La Salle street for dinner, music, a wit-testing quiz and theatricals.

Mrs. Elaine Eckerling Russ. [Seymour Photo]

Mrs. Elaine Eckerling Russ, heading the hospitality committee, has planned the evening strictly on lines of sociability and fun. Judge Jacob M. Braude, association justice of the Municipal court, has been invited to pinch hit for Clifton Fadiman at an "Information, Please" quiz of the ladies of the law. A sister voice and violin duo, Edna and Frances Brown, both members, will be heard in duets, and Miss Eva R. Pollack, president of the association, and Mrs. Jessie Slatis will lead community singing of holiday songs.

Another group of members, Miss Toni Rago, Miss Celeste Crist, and Miss Grace Mathison, will give a pantomine, with Miss Helen M. Cirese as narrator. There will be souvenirs for all, and Mrs. Elizabeth Buchhalter will have special prizes for the winners of games and the quiz. Each member is to bring a package of cigarets for the Service Men's center.

An old fashioned yuletide party, its 59th Christmas celebration, will be given Friday night in the Cordon by the Illinois Woman's Press association. The evening will be set to a pattern of caroling by candlelight, wassail bowl, and Christmas grab bag. There also will be a Red Cross talk by Miss Genevieve Tuton. Arranging the party are Miss Bernadine Bailey, Miss Eunice Thompson, and Miss Fannie Michaels.

Another group of writers, the Matrix club, will hold a Christmas party at 6:30 o'clock that evening at the Normandie House in Tower court. Mrs. William Donahey heads the social committee in charge on arrangements.

The annual Christmas bazar and luncheon of the Woman's club of the Chicago and North Western Railway system, originally planned for Dec. 1 but postponed, will be held Wednesday at 506 West Washington boulevard, it is announced by Mrs. William F. White, the president.

The Credit Women's Club of Chicago will have its Christmas party—dinner at 6:15 o'clock followed by entertainment—Tuesday evening in the Chicago Engineers club, 314 South Federal street.

Santa Claus, complete with grab bag of gifts, is to make a personal appearance at the Social Economics club's Christmas luncheon party at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday in the Republic building assembly room, 209 South State street.

After a 6 o'clock dinner Tuesday, the Business Women's club of the Fourth Presbyterian church will sing carols, and a group of the members will be presented at 7:30 o'clock in the large chapel in a Christmas play, "A King Shall Reign." The players have been coached by Mrs. Elaine Nortz Petersen.

The Chicago Office Supervisors' club will meet for a Christmas party Thursday evening in the Central Y.M.C.A.

There will be a meeting of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women tomorrow evening in Huyler's restaurant, 310 South Michigan, with Miss Mary H. Burris presiding. Clyde C. Bedell, advertising manager of the Fair store, will attend as the special guest and speaker. He will base his talk on P. A. Sorokin's "The Crisis of Our Age." Mr. Bedell, who, as an advertising specialist, has been associated with other large Chicago companies, also is an author. Mrs. Hazel R. Ferguson has arranged the evening.

Dr. James Blainey, head of the dental department at the University of Chicago, will speak at 8 o'clock Wednesday meeting before the Chicago Dietetics association at a meeting in the Republic hotel. His lecture will be on "Nutrition and Dentistry."

Art Work by Convalescent Yanks Shown

By Eleanor Jewett.

Last Thursday the war was brought home to the many persons who visited the Art institute to see the new exhibition in the "Art in War" gallery. The exhibit is an arts and skills show by convalescent service men from Gardiner General United States Army hospital and the United States Naval hospital at Great Lakes. Everything in the exhibit is the work of young convalescent service men from this war. It is hardly possible to walk thru the gallery without a tear hiding behind the interested smile that greets the leather work and weaving, the dolls and toys, the drawings and paintings, the little imaginative items made of wood or clay or plaster, the hundred odd little pieces each of which testifies to the ability of your son or mine to take it.

So far we have not had much of the returning soldier, our thoughts are chiefly outward bound; this exhibit makes us stop and realize that for many of our young men the going and the fighting are finished, and theirs is that harder fight without rolling drums and stirring trumpets, the fight to recover from what the war has done to them personally and to become as good civilians again as they were fighting Yanks.

A new exhibition opened last Thursday in the room of Chicago art at the Art institute. Four artists are represented—two of them well known and two not as well known. Those with whose work most of us are familiar are Alice Mason and Fritzi Brod. The other two artists are Joshua Kaganove and Dan Palumbo.

Alice Mason is represented by five flower compositions, two water colors and three oils. Her work is always decorative and she has a flair for dashing, rich floods of color that startle, amaze and delight. Some of her nicest work, too, is done in portraiture—the Arts club and the Cordon club have both shown a charming portrait by her of a little girl—but the present exhibit disregards this side of her painting and places emphasis on her work in still life.

Fritzi Brod, Kaganove, and Palumbo may perhaps be most easily classified as modernists; their work is diversified and colorful.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 North Michigan avenue, opened a stunning exhibit last Wednesday, the 23d exhibition of work by artist associates. The exhibition will continue to December 31 and is well worth seeing. The Chicago galleries invariably hang exhibits which rank among the finest offered in Chicago; great pictures by artists who are great craftsmen.

One exhibit which no one should miss and which, unless we miss our guess, will be sold out in short order, is the perfectly entrancing group of recent water colors of the country side of Illinois by Charles O. Longabaugh at the club woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers. That gallery, by the way, is one of THE holiday galleries this year. The Longabaugh water colors are colorful, gay, and infinitely appealing. The prices are appallingly low—$15 framed is all that many of them are going for. They make the most beautiful of Christmas gifts, for who is there among us who does not like a November tree with the little leaves scurrying from its sheltering boughs; a brook slipping over brown stones in a summer meadow; a row of corn shocks against a clear blue sky? These little landscapes by Mr. Longabaugh have vitality and strength as well as beauty. One wishes there were a word better than "best" to call them; tops, perhaps, will do.

Mae Alshuler has a large group of effective little landscapes in oil. These strike a decorative note and are worth more than a casual glance. James H. Eccles, too, has a series of attractive little pictures which are very pleasant. Hazel Hannell is showing ceramics that are piquant and provocative and Florence Forster has several pleasing pieces of etched silver.

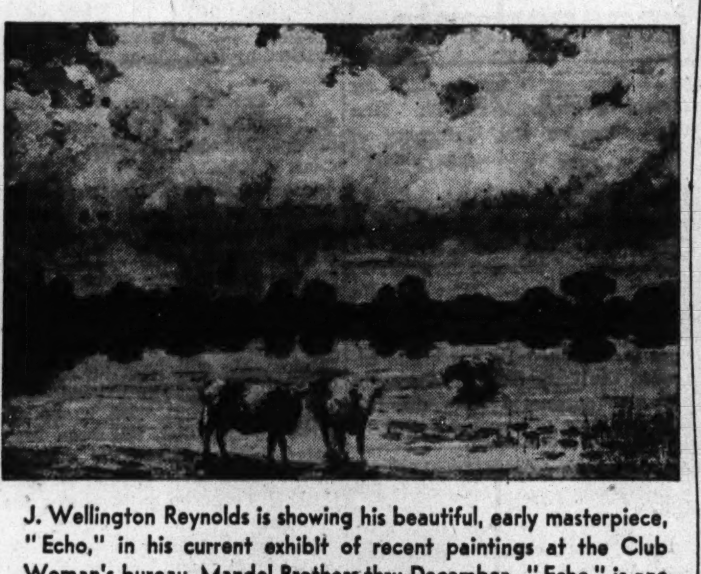
Interracial Group to Sponsor Tea at Hull House Today

A benefit tea and Russian program will be given today at Hull House, 800 South Halsted street, by the Chicago chapter auxiliary of the National Medical association for the near west side interracial committee. The committee works in the interest of neighborhood groups, stimulating community betterment projects and coördinating activities, and the party is in support of its welfare and educational program.

The program, to be presented in the Hull House theater at 4 o'clock, is under the direction of Maria Astrova-Lazareff. It will include dances by Etta Buro and the one act Checkoff play, "Marriage Proposal," with Edward Rubin, Emanuel Abrams, and Shirley Buro in the cast. The tea will be from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Mrs. W. J. Waters, president of the sponsor group, is taking an active part in preparation for the benefit. The arrangements committee is headed by Mrs. C. L. Morton, and assisting members are Dr. Wilhelmina Bowles, Mrs. L. B. Baker, Mrs. N. H. Cress, Mrs. Clifford Doyle, Mrs. T. C. Henderson, Mrs. J. H. Howard, Mrs. G. T. Kersey, Mrs. George Lewis, Mrs. R. G. Martin, Mrs. Samuel Peyton, Mrs. Edward Robinson, Mrs. S. W. Smith, Mrs. Frederick G. Trapp, Mrs. Floyd Willis, and Mrs. C. H. Wren. Leaders of the interracial committee are Lobengula Mosley, James G. Brown, Mrs. Lillian Summers, Mrs. Arlington A. Smith, and John K. Medders.

"BY QUIET WATERS"



J. Wellington Reynolds is showing his beautiful, early masterpiece, "Echo," in his current exhibit of recent paintings at the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, thru December. "Echo" is one of the loveliest paintings ever to have come from a Chicago studio. The more recent pictures are landscapes and water scenes done in a tranquil, pleasant manner that is proving popular with many visitors to the gallery.

Child Labor to Be Theme of Club Session

The knotty problem of child labor law enforcement under war conditions of man power shortage will be given further assiduous study Friday by the Woman's City club of Chicago. Appearing under auspices of the child welfare and public education committees, Mrs. Edwin Eells, chairman of the Illinois child labor committee, will speak in the clubrooms in the Fine Arts building at 1:30 o'clock on "Part Time Employment of Children." The meeting has been arranged by Mrs. Ida Laws, the club's delegate to the citizens' committee on the juvenile court and alternate to the Illinois child labor committee.

Friday's discussion meeting is a follow thru on recommendations made in a four point program by a special committee composed of Mrs. John Gutknecht, chairman of the child welfare committee; Mrs. Henry C. Dormitzer, chairman of the public education committee, and Mrs. John Sharpless Fox, immediate past president of the club. Underscoring the program is the emphatic opinion of the women that "Today's problems—winning the war, manning the stores and industries, as well as the war plants—must be solved by adults, and a definite public opinion is needed against depending upon children to solve them."

Several other women's organizations and child welfare groups, notably the parent-teacher organization, have been doing parallel work in investigating the problem of the employment of minors. The Woman's City club board of managers has announced the program recommended by its special committee to groups that have indicated interest, and also has placed its findings with the state labor department.

Prefacing the recommendations with the assertion that, "While we do not want to discourage young people from helping in the war effort, neither do we want them to endanger their health and future from a distorted sense of patriotism," the committee expressed grave concern over "the many 13 to 17 year old children in school who are now working from 18 to 48 hours a week." Pointing out that present estimates call for 300,000 additional workers in this area within the next six months, the committee warned, "Unless firm action is taken, many thousands of high school students will sacrifice their education."

At the Friday meeting Mrs. Eells will give a report on work being done by young children of elementary school age and will explain existing laws and regulations governing the employment of minors.

Recommendations of the Woman's City club special committee are, in brief, that child labor laws be enforced and violations prosecuted and publicized; that compulsory education laws be enforced; that all children who have dropped out of school and their parents be interviewed by principals and teachers to persuade the boys and girls to return to their classes, and that members of minority groups and women without children be employed in preference to high school students and mothers of young children.

According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1943: By Ely Culbertson.]

"There is only one thing that saves many players from paying the full penalty for their bidding crimes, and that is the fantastic kindness and blindness of an opponent. It is nothing short of ironic that the best "rescue bids" come, not from the partner, who is supposed to offer aid and comfort, but from the enemy.

The most important factor behind this peculiar sort of rescuing is the average player's habit of ignoring his position in any bidding sequence. He is so intent on his own thirteen cards, trying to evaluate them in connection with partner's bids or raises, that as a general rule he has no time to think about tactical or strategic considerations. Thus, he is apt to make exactly the same bid or the same pass that he would make if he were to change seats with his partner. That this is a highly lamentable error is attested by the following typical case.

South dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
North-South, 30 part-score.

NORTH
♠ Q J 10 2
♥ J 9 7 6
♦ Q
♣ A K 10 2

♦ 9 8 6 4 3 2
♣ Q J 7 5 3

EAST
♠ 8 7 5 4
♥ A Q 10 5 3 2
♦ K 10

SOUTH
♠ A K 9 6
♥ K 8
♦ A J 7 5
♣ 9 6 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	4 hearts
4 spades [!]	Pass	Pass	Pass

South made his four spade contract with ease, even tho West opened his singleton heart and ruffed the heart return. This, however, was not nearly so impressive a victory as South could have earned by uttering a simple pass on the second round, thereby letting North "get at" East's suicidal four heart call. Good defense against that contract would have held East to precisely four heart tricks and given North-South the luscious penalty of 1,700 points. This would have been excellent compensation even if the worst happened and East-West went game on the next deal.

During the inevitable post mortem, and in answer to North's bitter complaint that he had been "robbed," South attempted to justify his four spade bid along two different lines. First, he said that he could not be sure about the meaning of North's double raise. the part-score situation, he said, had led him to think that North had merely been trying to shut out the opponents; that he might have considerably less high card strength than he would guarantee by the same bid on a love score.

South's second reason for bidding four spades, he said, was the very fact that he held the K-8 of hearts, which convinced him that North probably had nothing in hearts and consequently would not be able to double.

North was not visibly impressed by either of these reasons, and no one can blame him! The simple fact was that there was an easy and direct method by which South could resolve the doubts he held concerning North's holding and North's intentions. That method, of course, was to PASS. Presumably, since North had been willing to contract for nine tricks at spades, he could "handle" a four heart bid from the enemy without too great embarrassment.

So much for the discussion of this specific deal. There are even more important implications to be taken from it, namely: When you are not the last man to speak for your side, and when your partner, by his previous bidding, has tacitly announced that he can, if necessary, carry on without your help, get out of his way by passing.

Guests at Spa Visit Famous Missouri Farm

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, MO.

A number of Chicagoans here recently paid a visit to the famous Longview farm near Excelsior Springs, as guests of Dwight Dalby, a friend of the late R. A. Long, owner of the farm.

A sea of velvet white blossoms topping glossy green leaves greeted the party upon their arrival at Longview . . . three acres of gardenias to be exact . . . all under glass and at the height of their season. An average of 1,000 gardenias a day are going to market from the Longview greenhouses. There were other acres, too: one of roses and one of carnations, unbelievably huge as to size.

The magnificent old estate of Longview spreads itself over several thousand acres, and has long been famous for its horses. One whole room in the show barn is devoted to the hundreds of trophies won at horse shows all over the nation. There also is a tanbark room of tremendous proportions, where horse shows are staged. Another room in the stable is devoted to a collection of carriages, gigs, buggies, tally-hos—vehicles of all kinds, both modern and antique.

Since Mr. Long's death, the Longview horses have been shown by his daughter, Lulu Long Combs [Mrs. Robert Pryor Combs], whose niece, Lucia Long Ellis, was married at the farm some years ago to Edgar J. Uihlein Jr., of Chicago, now a lieutenant in the navy.

The John M. Maxwells had a pleasant surprise the other day. When out for a horseback ride they overtook Mrs. Harold Ray, their close neighbor from Highland Park. Mrs. Ray, an ardent horsewoman, rides regularly each day. She is accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Jesse L. Matteson. While here the Maxwells visited Mrs. Maxwell's brother, Lt. Reding Putman, who is stationed at Olathe, Kas.

Fashions and Fancy

Mrs. Charles T. Clagett. [Hurrell Photo.]

Hunting circles have been quiet this year because of gasoline rationing and the absence of many hunt members in service, but Washington still is buzzing over the Potomac Hunt's meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Thomas Clagett [Nancy Leiter] near Rockville, Md. The hunt was at her 101 acre farm, "Duration," on a recent Saturday that marked also the hostess' birthday. A number of Mrs. Clagett's Washington friends came down for the occasion. On Mrs. Clagett's birthday cake were many decorations, including a bevy of angels and a stork, which presumably was intended to herald an expected event of New Year's day. The high point of the week-end was the arrival by air mail from Honolulu of a giant purple orchid, the gift of Lt. Clagett of the navy. Another birthday gift from Lt. Clagett was a much-admired ring of his own design, a huge heart-shaped fire opal surrounded by diamonds and rubies, and set in blue enamel. It is a companion piece for her engagement ring, which is of rubies and diamonds, set also in blue enamel. Mrs. Clagett's brother, Pvt. Thomas Leiter of the army, is stationed in Cheyenne, Wyo., where his wife joined him for Thanksgiving. Mrs. Clagett and Mr. Leiter are grandchildren of Levi Z. Leiter, pioneer Chicago merchant.

The new fashion in dogs will be pugs, it seems, and one of the newest pug owners is Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr. Three of her friends, among them Mrs. Jones Jarratt and Miss Helen Gurley, chipped in to buy the bow-wow while in New York, and the animal arrived a few days ago to take up residence with his new family. Miss Gurley, who often is seen walking her own pair of terriers in State parkway, sometimes wears a natural opossum coat that is the envy of her friends. "It's so light in weight," Mrs. John Stuart exclaimed when she first examined the coat. Mrs. Stuart, a stunning white haired woman, who bears a close resemblance to her sister, Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams, was a fashion plate herself that day in distinguished black.

Mrs. William M. Collins Jr. [Tribune Photo.]

The first sight of an old friend in a sailor suit is somewhat of a shock, and it took a second look for some of "Pauly" Fentress' old friends to recognize the debonair young man now clothed in Uncle Sam's navy blue and white. His companions at a recent meeting of the Council on Foreign Relations were Cyrus Adams III., Mrs. Frank Woods Jr., and Mrs. William M. Collins Jr. Mrs. Collins was beautifully gowned as always, this time in a sage green dress with matching coat of wool and a hat of green and red grapes, held to her rolled up black hair with a band of small green felt leaves. Mrs. Woods, who finally screwed up courage to wear the rat that she purchased many months ago, wore a gray suit and a little black hat that fitted neatly between the rat-augmented rolls of brown hair that swept smoothly back from her face. Members of the Woman's Athletic club turned out in force to hear a lecture by Bruce Thomas, war correspondent, who strayed from his subject, "The Commandos Strike," to plead for a more united effort on the part of civilians to maintain their share of the fighting. "If you work two hours a day for the Red Cross, work four," he urged. "If you write one letter a week to a man in service, write two. O heck!," he said, after taking a closer look at the row upon row of befurred and bejeweled dowagers present, "Go on out and buy a war bond. They need the money, too." Mr. Thomas' urging as regards the Red Cross was not necessary, for the club has one of the most active Red Cross workshops in the city right up on its seventh floor, just outside the ballroom where Mr. Thomas spoke, where sewing machines hum three days a week, and most of the women listening to him spend plenty of time there. Sitting in the back center were two young women who keep the home front fires burning by their devotion to the Infant Welfare society, Mrs. W. Dennison Dunning and Mrs. E. Franklin Motch. They made an attractive picture together, too, brunet Mrs. Dunning in navy blue with a crimson and green hat, and blonde Mrs. Motch in palest blue.

Planning the party this year are Mrs. J. William Young, Mrs. Jack Sachs, and Mrs. Victoria Jirka.

Resorts, Spas Available for a Winter Rest

By Bob Becker.

Altho the northerner seeking a rest and a vacation away from arduous war work faces a rather confused picture when he looks at the travel and recreation situation, he finds encouragement in the fact that many hotels in the southern vacation zone are being turned back to civilian use after being requisitioned by the army. Judging from reports from both coasts of Florida there will be more room for civilians this winter than there was last season. Health spas like Hot Springs in Arkansas and Excelsior Springs in Missouri will continue to offer their varied programs of golf, horseback riding, and baths. In North Carolina and Virginia vacationists who want to get away from the chilblain zone for some rest will find accommodations.

One outdoor sports feature of the coming winter season that apparently will undergo a definite boom is skiing. Many a city dweller who can't take a long vacation in the south is finding a lot of fun in skiing and other winter sports with the result that snow blown areas in the east, middle west, and west which have winter sports programs confidently look forward to a big season.

The over-all picture of recreation and reasonable vacations this winter indicates that there are a number of spots even fairly close to Chicago where the prescription of a "change, rest, and relaxation" can be filled. For example, St. Joe, Mich., which is only a few hours' ride from Chicago, has such a program for tired war workers. Farther north, sports fans can find outdoor fun including skiing in Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan. Ephraim, Heafford Junction, Wausau, La Crosse, and Land o' Lakes, Wis., and Blaney Park, Mich., are a few of the places overnight or less from Chicago where the winter sports may be enjoyed.

Miami, Miami Beach, Daytona Beach, Orlando, Sebring, St. Petersburg, and other Florida cities are better equipped this winter to accommodate fugitives from the cold winter weather who need and deserve a winter vacation. George and the gulf coast also can take care of vacationists.

One of the interesting sidelights on the hotel situation in Florida, indicating how Florida is slowly "opening up," is the transfer of an entire hotel management staff from one famous hostelry in southern Florida, taken over by the military, to a new hotel on the northeast coast of Florida. On the west coast a hotel which has been closed for two seasons opened in a modest way early in the month, with a real opening scheduled for early January.

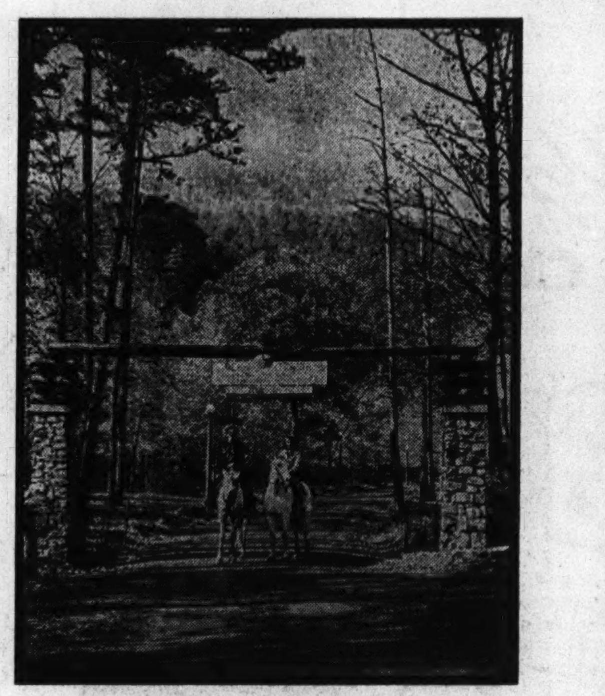
Both Hot Springs, Ark., and Excelsior Springs, Mo., are due to get a big play from northerners because they are quite close to Chicago and combine milder climate with a varied program of recreation. At the Arkansas spa the visitor can do most anything outdoors from just plain loafing to fishing, hiking, or golf. There are splendid trails in the national park for both hiking and riding. Lakes and streams nearby will intrigue the fisherman. As we learned earlier in the year some of the best fishing down there comes during the cooler months.

Meantime the prospective vacationist who is both smart and patriotic is going to stay put for a few weeks because Santa Claus sort of has priority on the transportation business. The request is that civilians please stay off trains during the Christmas holidays and on thru the early part of January.



A LURE FOR EQUESTRIANS
Horseback riding along miles of bridle paths is a lure for equestrians at Hot Springs National Park, Ark.

Ft. Harrison Hotel in Clearwater Is Opened

CLEARWATER, Fla. [Special].—The Fort Harrison hotel, Clearwater's largest, formally opened this month and from advance reservations an auspicious season is anticipated. Many civilians and service men and their families on vacation will enjoy the diversified sports and entertainment program at the hotel, which overlooks Clearwater bay and the Gulf of Mexico. Golf, always the favorite pastime of resorters, may be played on several near-by courses, including the Clearwater Country club and the Dunedin Golf club. Other sports at this resort are tennis, swimming, fishing, horseback riding, sailing, skeet shooting and shuffleboard.

Speedy Helicopter.

Successful experimental flights at a claimed speed of 100 miles per hour have been made with a new type of helicopter.

Visit Us Between Trains, Theme of Silver Springs

SILVER SPRINGS, Fla. [Special].—"See it between trains or buses from Ocala" is the new theme song being sung these war days at this world renowned attraction as an answer to the visitors' question, "How can I get there without my car?"

Essentially a one day stopover on any tour of Florida, Silver Springs enjoys direct bus and taxi service from Ocala, five miles to the west, on schedules to fit into any planned trip. City buses operate five times daily—at 9, 11, 2, 4, and 6 o'clock, with an extra 3 o'clock bus on Saturday and 30 minute service every Sunday from 8 a. m. thru 6 p. m.

The 60 minute glass bottomed boat ride is Silver Springs' prime attraction, with 50 additional minutes needed for the jungle cruise speed boat ride down beautiful Silver river, 30 minutes for a visit with Ross Allen at his world famed reptile institute, 30 minutes for a meal in the coffee shop, and perhaps 30 more minutes for a dip in the springs or a visit in the gift and antique shops that surround the springs.

Thus "See it between trains or buses from Ocala" is sound advice.

Early Snows Invite Skiers to Lake Placid

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. [Special].—An abundance of early snow has set the stage for the opening of another winter sports season at this Adirondack center, and, at the same time, laid a good base on surrounding slopes and trails for ski enthusiasts.

Hot Springs Spa Expects a Big Season

HOT SPRINGS NATIONAL PARK, Ark. [Special].—The third winter of war finds this national park and spa doing a tip-top job giving hot health baths, a business specialized in here under government ownership since 1832. In fact, the war has not affected this resort's program of health at all.

None of the 47 hot springs which supply the water for these baths that relieve the strain of war and work has lost one mite of its original heat. Each flows out of the ground at an average temperature of 143 degrees Fahrenheit. While the demand on the water is greater this year than last, it is not rationed. The aggregate flow of the springs is 1 million gallons of water daily.

The same opportunities for rest, relaxation, and recuperation which made Hot Springs one of the nation's leading vacation centers still are available here.

Hot Springs, located as it is in the pine-clad Ouachitas and surrounded by Lakes Catherine and Hamilton, also beckons the outdoor lover. Here you can golf on one of the sportiest championship courses or fish for bass, pike, crappy, and bream, ride horseback, hike over well marked and interesting trails or simply just bathe and rest.

Hot Springs' traditional hospitality invites you to an interlude of peace and relaxation. Here as nowhere else you will find the baths which give the lift to fit you for the heightened tempo of the tasks ahead.

While there are many hotels, apartments, motor courts, cottages, rooms, and hospitals, the Hot Springs Chamber of Commerce suggests to all inquirers that accommodation reservations be made early, as that organization anticipates a larger winter patronage than last season.

Talpam Becoming Tourist Mecca for Mexican Visitors

MEXICO CITY [Special].—Mexico's pre-Hispanic town of Tlalpam, 10 miles from this city, is becoming both a sightseeing attraction for visitors and a week-end holiday mecca for Mexico City's dwellers. Tlalpam was the first town in pre-Hispanic times to be established on the immense lake which formerly surrounded the island capitol of Tenochtitan, now Mexico City. Rich in history with beautiful old buildings and luxuriant gardens, the town preserves the vestiges of outmoded elegance and the charm of long ago.

Tlalpam's re-created interest and popularity is attributed to three things: The recent publicity given the Parish church, the new discoveries of the pyramid of Cuicuilco on the outskirts of the town exhibiting the oldest known work of men in Mexico, and the outdoor recreational haunts of near-by Fuentes Brotantes of sylvan charm and springs.

Among other points of tourist interest is the villa associated with the Count of Regla, founder of the institution now known as the national pawnshop.

PROLOGUE TO MEXICO'S VICTORY FIESTA

• There's a serenade to Victory in the staccato notes of Mexico's modern symphony. The strum of the guitar has changed to the hum of machinery ... the click of the castanets to the click of train wheels hauling the materiel, personnel and equipment of a fighting nation. The blasting explosions at the mines, the reverberating boom of falling trees, the mighty tread of marching men—these are the sounds of Mexico's modern serenade—the prologue to the Victory Fiesta.

If you are not actively engaged in the war effort, or if you are but have earned a furlough for rest and relaxation, then—it's a good-neighbor policy to visit Mexico this winter.

If you plan to visit your boy in camp in the Southwest, or if business takes you to Central or South America, include a stay in "sunny" Mexico.

No passport is necessary, and there are no new travel restrictions for American born citizens. Moreover, your dollar buys more. But make your reservations early—travel light and start in the middle of the week.

Railways Face a Big Task in Winter Travel

By Philip Hampson.

Another winter season is at hand and this year the beaches, sunshine, palm trees, and other attractions of California and Florida may not attract as many people as in normal times, but there is every indication that they will draw sizable quotas of visitors.

The nation's railroads, meanwhile, are having their hands full transporting the military, business people engaged in war work, and relatives of soldiers and sailors, in addition to those who are able to get away for winter vacations.

For this latter group there are few travel rules. All they have to do is to get reservations, which won't be so easy at a time when there is so much essential war travel. Reservations cannot be made for a longer period than 30 days and cancelations of Pullman space must be made in time to permit sale of accommodations to other travelers.

For those persons who get their reservations, the rest should not be too difficult. The crowds at the railroad stations thru which they will have to fight their way should not be too tough if they have had some football experience in their youth. The luggage problem should not be bad if they have had experience as a longshoreman. And as for food, a little discipline in the way of reduced diet might aid waistlines.

There has been considerable talk about the necessity of handing some hotel porter or travel agent a five or 10 dollar bill to get a reservation. Investigation shows that most of this is just talk except in the cases of generous people who don't mind throwing their money around. Rarely is there need to pay other than moderate hotel charges—the same as before the war—for the convenience of having a ticket purchased.

One traveler who makes somewhat frequent trips on some of the most heavily traveled lines in the country reports having had no difficulty in getting Pullman space. He has simply gone to a railroad ticket office and asked for it.

Meanwhile, for those winter vacationists who this year will obtain a vicarious enjoyment of the winter resorts by looking over old railroad folders on the subject there is the prospect of even better railroad service than existed before the war. The railroads now are reported to be making plans for improving passenger services that were already good.

There is the likelihood that there will be a lot more streamlined trains. Improvements may be expected which will be based on the experiences had with the earlier streamlined trains. And it is likely that fares may be lower. The railroads will have to meet the competition of the new improved airplanes which the air line companies will install after the war. And they are already making studies as to how they can best meet this competition.

There is even reported to be a growing feeling among some railroads that they should reduce the rates which they charge for accommodations in Pullmans.

Howey-in-the-Hills Popular Winter Center

HOWEY-IN-THE-HILLS, Fla. [Special]. — Foresighted planning for tourist entertainment and constructive community effort to provide all possible facilities for visitors' recreation and pastime have combined to make Howey-in-the-Hills, 35 miles northwest of Orlando, one of the state's best liked winter vacation centers. The Floridan Country club, located on the shore of Lake Harris, is now in full operation. The club has hotel facilities for nonmembers and its property consists of 5,000 acres which includes golf course, stable of riding horses, private white sandy beach, cabanas, boat house, and casino.

A STROLL IN THE SUNSHINE

The concrete "boardwalk" at Daytona Beach, Fla., ever popular in daylight hours, has been restored to night time usefulness by suspension of the dim-out.

Polo Principal Sport at Pinehurst Resort

PINEHURST, N. C. [Special].—Hard riding soldiers, who also are goal ranking polo players, compose the polo teams at Pinehurst, N. C., the only spot east of the Rockies where this sport is now being played. Games are played every Sunday afternoon. Pinehurst reports a record number of season visitors who have closed their northern homes and are remaining until spring. Pinehurst is only overnight from New York and Washington.

Pennsylvania Offers Winter Sports Program

HARRISBURG, Pa. [Special].—For those persons who can get away from work and who can find transportation facilities, Pennsylvania will offer a program of winter sports during the 1943-'44 season. Winter sports facilities will be provided in more than a score of resort areas in the state.

Many of these areas are close to rail and bus lines and near metropolitan centers.

So. California Holiday Haven for Soldiers

LOS ANGELES, Cal. [Special].—Southern California's famed beaches, mountains, desert and communities are continuing their traditional hospitality this winter—but the area's war time guests are wearing the uniforms of Uncle Sam's services. Both those in training and many wearing service ribbons, home on furlough from the fighting fronts, have replaced the visitors of pre-war days.

The famous attractions, that again will attract many on post-war vacations, are doing their best to enable these young men and women to "see and do" everything as one would in normal times.

The Pacific ocean draws them, especially from the interior. Some of them spend entire leaves fishing for catches of big halibut, sea bass, bonita and mackerel. Others find new thrills in the tangy Pacific surf, while some merely loaf on the beach.

Badminton, tennis and volley ball lead the field in beach sports. Courts are available everywhere. Civic organizations provide extra equipment for all.

The community sponsored All-Year Club of Southern California plans and arranges "furlough vacations" for the men and women in service. Its visitors' bureau in downtown Los Angeles furnishes complete information and printed sightseeing directions.

Now, with the dimout regulations lifted, the dance pavilions play before capacity crowds and offer the country's "big name" bands.

DELICIOUS

Exotic and delicious is the juice from the elongated papaya, a tropical fruit grown profusely in St. Petersburg, Fla., gardens.

Railway Taxes.

Out of each dollar of operating revenue received in 1942 by the railroads, 16 1-10 cents went for taxes, compared with 4.6 cents in 1918.

Lady of the House

This year, when in so many old countries once gay with traditional Christmas festivities, but now dark with want and grief and terror; when there are thousands upon thousands of little children who have never known a Christmas of peace and good will, but only the horrors of war, memories of our own happy childhood Christmases have a peculiar, stabbing wistfulness.

Christmas.

The first she can remember—Creak of sled runners on the road to town. Pa lifts her out of bed. Puts on her little stiff shoes. Brother Jan opens the stove door so light will shine out. He can't find his. Smell of frying ham. Scurrying of the Big Girls. Giggles. All eyes looking at HER, amused, loving. Pa carries her to the kitchen. Stove red hot. Ma in big white apron, making biscuits, hair done like company. Table covered with a white cloth. Just wait till they uncover it they say! Why—will Santy be under it? Big Brother laughs uproariously and repeats it to all of them, thinking her clever. At last the cloth is lifted. An orange on every plate! Candy-stick bouquet in the center! At her place a doll! Picture book! Tea set!

"Now sit up and eat your oatmeal and cream, 'fore you play with a thing! And your eggs! And biscuits! And ham and apple butter! And drink all your milk," Ma admonishes.

And she does.

Martha Gwinn Kiser.

The Gift.

When the Father, in compassion
Looked down upon His earth,
And saw the pain and sorrow there,
And the things that gave them birth,
He searched the farthest corners
Of His vast and fair domain
To find a gift that He might give
To bring man peace again.
The seeds of His great acreage
He long ago had sown.
Long had the earth His beasts and birds
And fruits and flowers known.
And well He knew the wealth He gave
To field, and stream, and dell
Would feed man in abundance,
Would he but use it well.
He sent no golden caskets
Heaped high with fairest jewels;
Already man had learned that they
But feed the souls of fools.
He sent no mighty cavalcade
Of saints both wise and just;
Already man had learned the great
Must crumple into dust.
He sought in His great wisdom
A gift without alloy,
And gave to His beloved earth
A little boy.
The man took up the sweet refrain
Angels sang the child
"Peace on earth. Good will to men."
The Father heard—and smiled.

A Prayer for Peace.

When peace once more broods o'er the land,
From Nome to far Cathay;
When winged and certain death shall fly
No more across the reddened sky;
And all the dogs of war that roam
This saddened world shall be called home;
When silenced is the bomb's dull roar
And mothers' sons sail home once more;
God grant that when this war shall cease
Man has learned how to keep the peace.

Florence Denison.

Silhouette.

Candlelight at even
Flicking shadows on the wall,
Lovely lovers' promises that sputter
Up and fall,
Bits of time that waver in a
Shaky silhouette,
Casting, momentarily, designs
You can't forget.

Gray-black elves go dancing
On the farthest wall or door,
Disappear, then playfully
Return for an encore.
This show of wistful memory
Won't be put to rout,
Unless the wind of circumstance
Blows the candle out.

And metaphor-thoughts flashed thru my head
Of varied Veneers we often wear
To cover real self from stranger stare.

Manners, appearance, laughter, tears—

We can cut and fashion, if we're wise,
A pleasant pattern of disguise.

Gift Lounge Wear Warm and Beautiful

By Rea Seeger.

It takes the crowd of holiday shoppers to bring out the most beautiful Christmas house coats, tea gowns and lounging robes or costumes. Year after year, gifts such as these are the most prized of all, for the color, charm and beauty of jewel toned velvets, cascades of lace, chiffon bows of ribbon and the cozy comfort of sleek, quilted satin, silk or gossamer soft wool never fail to please. The current showings are most complete, from the dainty floral printed crepes to the lush satins and brocades made into fabulously beautiful lounging robes and warm pajamas.

Such breath takingly beautiful ensembles, as fringed lounging pajamas in snowy white with rhinestone buttons teamed with an equally beautiful white marabou, three-quarter length house coat, vie with the delectably colored velvet robes of ruby, ink black, dubonnet and sapphire blue.

There are pajama costumes of vivid padded and quilted velvet jackets, the kind copied from a Persian prince's dress parade uniform; there are velvet slacks wedded to slinky Chinese coolie coat jackets shimmering with effective embroidery, and there are wool house coats as smartly and as suavely fashioned as any full length evening gown. These chiffon woolens come in luscious colors, as cherry, turquoise, dove gray, chartreuse, sapphire, jade green and dark colors.

All are made in long, slenderizing silhouettes with interesting details, such as gored backlines, soft bows high on the shoulders and rows of covered buttons marching down the front. The all-white wool robes are the last word in luxury gifts.

Pajamas have staged a sensational revival, first, because they're toast warm for chilly rooms, and, second, because of dashing sophistication and unusual designs. Velvet, printed crepe, wool and velveteen are featured both in the plain and the quilted beauties, and every color and shade imaginable is available. The delightful pastel prints with small floral designs spattered against white, pale pink or blue are padded and quilted.

• • •

Other interesting buys are the teamed units of sheer nightgown, a featherweight, padded and quilted robe of the same printed sheer. For example, a nightgown of white sheer dotted in coral, blue or scarlet is teamed with a matching padded and quilted, tailored robe. These house robes are long and surprisingly warm, and the weight is negligible.

Regal satin robes, effectively quilted, have flowered linings. The black model is outstanding because of the glittering rhinestone buttons. Lace fashions the cuffs of other velvets.

Sketched are a few of the outstanding models featured in a most unusual collection of negligees and house robes for Christmas gifts. They are on display in a Chicago shop. For further information, call Superior 0200.

Thru the Looking Glass

The gift that signifies beauty is the delight of every woman's heart at Christmas time. Young and old alike, they are pleased and flattered to be presented with glamor items that help keep them pretty looking all year around. And most acceptable are the gifts in this category that are done up with a combination of practicality and glitter.

Shoppers might well be tempted by attractive packages of cosmetics, rouge, powder, and lipstick, assembled in eye catching sets and, knowing the brand preferences of women on their lists, make wise selections along these lines. Gifts such as these are a special joy to receive. It's fun to have a whole set of beauty aids, complete and spanking new, ready to give service for months to come. These makeup ensembles are available in price ranges to suit any pocketbook, and some of the boxes are designed to serve as glove or handkerchief containers after the contents have been used.

Hand and nail aids are gifts that will never be received with a shrug of indifference. Sets of nail beauty items are particularly welcome. Most of these come in fetchingly pretty or amusing packages that contain polish, polish remover, cuticle cream, and the other essentials necessary for a complete manicure.

And don't overlook the polish wardrobe ensembles. They're a joy to possess and milady will be thankful for a simple solution to the nail enamel problem. A generous container of soothing hand lotion or cream may sound rather mundane, but the hand beauty it suggests and encourages supplies what it may lack in eye appeal.

Creams, both the lubricating and cleansing kinds, are another good idea for gifts. They can't flaunt tinsel and trappings but they can be attractively wrapped and, more importantly, they constitute a serviceable gift.

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Truly Surprising
So Easy. No Cooking. Big Saving.
You may not know it, but, in your own kitchen, you can easily prepare a really surprising relief for coughs due to colds. It's old-fashioned—your mother probably used it—but for real results, it can't be beaten.
First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for prompt action in throat and bronchial irritations.
Put the Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of really splendid cough syrup, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste.
And for quick relief, it's a wonder. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, eases the soreness, makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Little Gifts for the Home Sure to Please

By Edith Weigle.

It's fun to give your home a few Christmas gifts for then every one in the family can enjoy them. Remarkable, too, what small items can do to enliven the appearance of any room.

Take waste baskets, for instance. A handsome leather covered one for the library or living room, or one of the attractive tôle ones with pastel flower decorations for your daughter's bedroom, or one with a map of the world in colors for your son's room will make a highly decorative accent in the furnishing scheme without denting the budget very much.

These map of the world waste baskets are only $2.

Pillows make pretty Christmas gifts and are as useful as they are smart. A group we saw the other day utilizes beautiful striped cotton taffetas in pastel tones of pink or blue on white, and narrower variegated stripes of yellow and green on white, or of rose and blue on white. Eighteen inches square, the pillows have deep corded edges of plain, contrasting color. They are $2.98 each.

• • •

For the woman who likes to have her friends in often for cocktails there are neat little walnut veneer snack trays, about 8 inches by 4. These canape sets are packed eight to the box and are priced at only $1. They are very light in weight and hold a cocktail glass and a few little sandwiches and appetizers comfortably.

For the home manager who is her own cook a welcome little Christmas gift that costs only 50 cents is a pair of large, potholder mittens of extremely attractive floral chintz, bound in a plain color.

[For information about where the various items described by Miss Weigle may be found in Chicago telephone the Tribune Public Service office, Sup. 0200.]

Keep Yuletide for Children Despite War

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

While a sensitive child is aware of many things in connection with the father and mother she loves, it is only when that child reaches womanhood [let us confine ourselves to one parent for convenience in writing] that she can fully understand her mother as a person, and value her in full measure.

As I look back I can see that there must have been occasions when my mother, at Christmas time, must have had to make a decision, must have made up her mind to ignore a heaviness of heart, to lay aside certain grief or worries, and to give herself to making our Christmas the perfect Christmas it always was.

Many of you, too, must now, as women, realize that your happy holidays were due to a mother whose heart was not always light; just as many of you who now have children of your own, at various worried, sad or tragic times in your life, determined that you would not let anything interfere with the celebration of the children's Christmas.

But this Christmas, with the bitter, costly fighting just behind it, this Christmas, with sons, brothers, and fathers in combat or in camp, you may say, is different.

That is true. Yet many individual parents have at various times, without war, overcome a personal experience of tragedy and "kept Christmas" for their children's sake, never allowing a break in the long train of the Christmas celebrations of childhood. You can do as much now.

So, if you have been thinking, "Should Christmas be celebrated in my family as usual this year? It seems a trivial thing to do"; and if for personal reasons due to the war, you have added, "I haven't the heart for it," give the prospect more consideration.

If you have no children, it is definitely your privilege to omit going thru the usual "motions": the gift buying, the card sending, your ordinary "minutae" of Christmas. But if you have children, I hope you will decide to "keep Christmas" this year.

• • •

After all, it is for the beauty of home life that our boys remember and treasure with longing. And I'm sure that the knowledge of a dull and lifeless Christmas time at home would not be welcome to them.

But there is another angle: Christmas is no empty, superficial holiday. It celebrates the birth of the Prince of Peace. Was there ever a time when deeper obeisance should be made to Him?

Indeed, Christmas is made to order for a war time festival and should be celebrated with a keen consciousness of its origin and its beauty: the traditional Christmas of receiving gifts and of giving them; the Christmas of sweet carols, and certainly the observance that includes the story of the birth of the Christ Child, told simply, or in the more adult words of St. Luke or St. Matthew in the New Testament.

Yule Cookies, Puddings Easy on Fat Supply

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Most of us homemakers and cooks are becoming quite pudding, cake, and cooky minded, with Christmas and holiday entertaining so near. Holiday entertaining at this Christmas season will be far simpler than it was last year, for all of us know how important it is to conserve food.

The recipes we use will be especially light on shortening, for the fat shortage is real and demands that we waste not a teaspoonful. This inexpensive holiday pudding uses only two tablespoons of fat and takes but a cup of dried fruit. It is different from the carrot-potato puddings which I have published before in this column in that the vegetables are shredded instead of ground [this produces a different texture in the pudding], and the recipe also contains lemon and nuts.

If you've never tried a pudding of this type, you may think "it doesn't sound good," but try it once, and this will be one of your favorite recipes.

Steamed Carrot Pudding.
[Serves 10 to 12.]

2 tablespoons fat
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cloves
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
1 cup shredded raw carrots
1 cup shredded raw potatoes
1 cup dried raisins, prunes, or figs
1 cup nuts.

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add melted fat to carrots and potatoes. Mix in sifted dry ingredients, dried fruit, lemon rind, and nuts. Fill greased pudding molds not more than two-thirds full. Steam 1½ hours. Serve warm with lemon sauce.

Note that the lemon sauce omits the usual butter. But it's an excellent sauce, make no mistake about that!

Lemon Sauce.

2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
2 cups water
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ teaspoon nutmeg [optional].

Blend cornstarch with sugar and salt. Add grated peel. Gradually add water. Bring to boil over direct heat, stirring constantly. Place over hot water and cook until thickened and clear. Add juice and nutmeg.

The pudding will keep for several weeks if wrapped in waxed paper and stored in a closed container. It may be reheated by steaming in the upper part of a double boiler.

These honey cookies contain no fat at all.

Honey Christmas Cookies.
[Five dozen.]

4 cups sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅝ cup strained honey
½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons water
1 egg, slightly beaten
3 ounces [¾ cup] candied orange peel, shredded
3 ounces [¾ cup] candied citron, shredded
1 cup blanched, shredded almonds.

Sift flour with soda and spices several times. Boil honey, sugar, and water for five minutes. Cool. Add flour, egg, fruits, and nuts. Work into a loaf, cover with waxed paper, and chill in the refrigerator. Let ripen two or three days. Roll ¼ inch thick on a lightly floured board. Cut in strips three inches long and an inch wide. Bake on greased sheet at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Cool and glaze with a mixture of 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar, 1½ tablespoons boiling water [or enough to moisten sugar], and ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Peanut butter helps to stretch the fat in these good cookies. A big share of the peanut crop is going into peanut butter nowadays.

Date Peanut Butter Drops.
[Four dozen, 2 inch cookies.]

½ cup fat
¾ cup peanut butter
½ cup sugar
½ cup corn sirup or honey
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
1 cup chopped dates
2 cups sifted flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup milk.

Cream fat, peanut butter, and sugar. Add sirup and beat well. milk. Blend well and drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Blend in vanilla. Beat eggs and add. Add dates. Sift flour, baking powder, and salt and add to creamed mixture alternately with

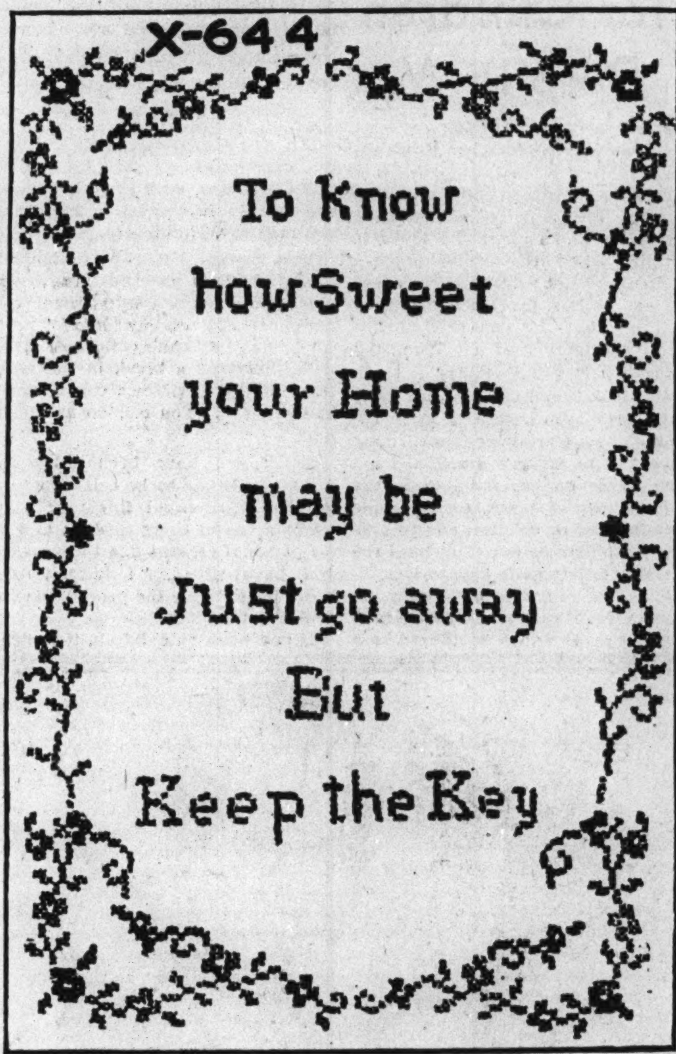
Cross-Stitch Motto

By Nancy Cabot



There is no more effective motto than this ancient truth depicted in cross-stitch. This is an ideal "consolation present" for those who are living away from home. It may be embroidered on oyster white linen, Indian head, or crash. When completed, the picture measures 14 by 18 inches. The pattern includes instructions and an illustrated chart.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the cross-stitch motto, No. X-644, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Home Owners' Queries

Oshkosh, Wis. [To the Home Owners' Editor]—[1] Will a close grained wood floor take an oiled treatment satisfactorily? [2] What is best treatment for it, as far as later upkeep goes? MRS. ARTHUR G.

Answer: [1] Yes. [2] Daily wiping with a clean, oilless mop. Weekly wiping with cloth wrung out of clean, warm water. You can use oil sparingly, on occasions, for spots that receive the hardest traffic. Soap is not advised by most experts.

Chicago. [To the Home Owners' Editor]—[1] What kind of paint can we use for spattering floors? [2] What can we do for wood finish that has turned whitish because of water left on it? MARTHA S.

Answer: [1] Any good floor or deck enamel. [2] Try rubbing with a soft cloth and a mixture of boiled linseed oil and pumice. Or you might mix following combination in a bottle and shake before using, then cover spot with it and let stand a few minutes. Then rub with soft cloth following grain of wood. Mixture: 1 teaspoon vinegar, 2 teaspoons boiled linseed oil, and 1 teaspoon turpentine.

Gossip Often Proves to Be a Boomerang

By Helen Bartlett.

Persons of good taste avoid gossip in conversation as carefully as they avoid a prolonged discussion of illnesses, operations, and the like. However, dispensing and collecting gossip is an unrecognized habit with many persons and we might as well add right here that the pastime isn't confined to the gentler sex. As a matter of fact, we've heard it stated emphatically more than once that men are worse gossips than women. But that isn't the point of this discussion; we're merely campaigning against the habit and putting forth a kind word in the interest of charity.

A dash of harmless gossip can be injected into conversation without damage to any one, but when it exceeds the bounds of good humor and flames into a flagrant disregard for the feelings and reputation of others it should be stifled. True or untrue, the unkind word should be left unsaid.

Much gossip is camouflaged with witticisms and pseudo-smart lacquer, but essentially the results are the same as the less brilliant "Did you hear about. . . ."

Happily, gossip is not so much an indictment against the subject of the unkind comment as it is against the gossiper. It indicates that the speaker has a more or less shallow mind, too small or too lazy to delve into worthwhile subjects. It generally is the topic for those who haven't anything else to contribute to a conversation or who are at a loss when a real conversation is under way. For conversation is essentially the exchange of thoughts and ideas, and certainly petty or malicious remarks about others can't be classified as either of these.

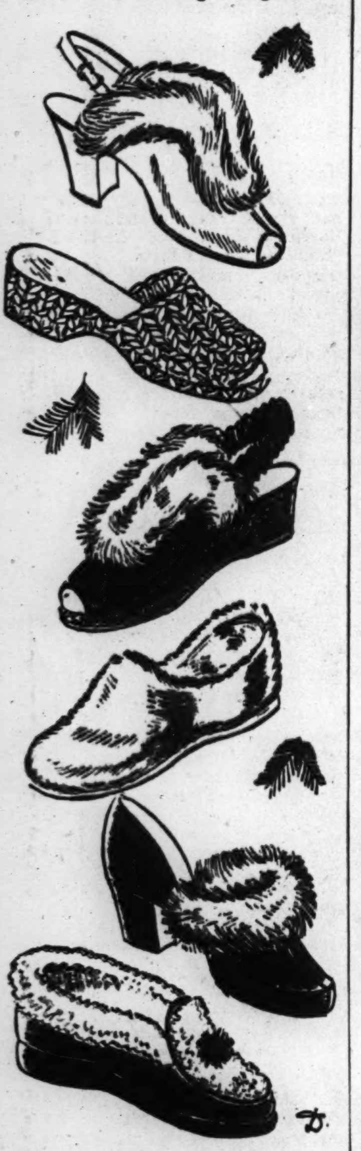
Fashions

By Angela

Don't be alarmed if you suddenly draw a blank in the midst of "What shall I give Aunt Hattie?" Just pull yourself together and dash directly to the counter of a popular chain store selling a complete line of unrationed boudoir or lounging slippers.

White satin mules, sketched at top, lined in shell pink and trimmed with warm white bunny fur are the last word in comfort and beauty. An adjustable back strap allows freedom of motion. A composition sole gives with the foot. Available in sizes from 4 to 9. Priced under $2.

Scuffs are ranking lounge favorites, and these sturdy cotton crocheted models are designed with an eye to style and durability. The cotton band gives but does not stretch. [It also is available with a closed back.] The same material of the banding is echoed around the heel and platform sole. These are sold in all solid colors, as well as a delicate pastel stripe version. Priced under $2.



A wedge platform mule of faille trimmed with white bunny fur chooses a braid trimming for the sole and wedge heel. An elastic band at the heel is covered with the same faille ribbon. The mule is available in assorted colors and sells under $2.

A perfect utility slipper which guarantees utmost warmth for cold feet is the deep pile plush model lined with soft yellow sheepskin. With the well made and durable sole this slipper will last long. Sold in assorted pastels, it is priced under $3.

The popular standby in the lounge slipper class is the Dutch toed, closed back, velvet mule trimmed with white bunny fur. In soft jewel tones and assorted colors, this boudoir slipper sells under $2.

The tailored blue leather slipper, sketched last, is just what it takes to give feet the "hot foot." Sheep trimmed, it is lined in warm flannel-like material and has a soft, composition moccasin sole. It also is available in brown and priced around $2.
